NEW YORK (Hunter) — A small rubbish fire burns beside a liquor store on West 116th Street and Lenox Ave. Around it, in the night-time chill, a group of about 30 heroin addicts huddle for warmth.

Nearby, hundreds of people stroll back and forth, buying and selling thousands of dollars worth of heroin and cocaine.

The general area is, by some accounts, one of the largest outdoor markets in the United States, though the sellers face a possible life sentence if caught and convicted.

Residents and businessmen in the area on Eighth Avenue from 113th to 117th Street—complain about the deadly trade but police say they are unable to make more than a dent in it.

"Sure, we send our officers down there," said a police captain. "But whenever an officer appears they just go around the corner."

Capt. John Henry is from Manhattan's 28th precinct, one of New York's smallest but one of the most dangerous.

Its 300 officers patrol an area 17 blocks long and five blocks wide that is always near the top in murder, narcotics and firearms arrests statistics.

The permanent population is around 30,000, virtually all black or Puerto Rican, but the area has a steady stream of transients.

"They come to buy, to sell, to shoot narcotics," Henry said.

The outdoor heroin market flourishes in winter or summer, day or night.

Police often make several arrests in a day, sometimes seizing a seller with as many as 50 bags of heroin—what Henry calls a "high-quality collar".

But what frustrates police is that a man may be seized with heroin in his pockets, charged with either possession or trafficking and be back on the streets in days or even hours to buy and sell again.

This "revolving-door" is made possible, by court rulings which make "probable cause" a prerequisite for searches.

This means an arresting officer must prove to a judge's satisfaction that he had some concrete reason to believe a man was carrying narcotics.

This can be next to impossible for a policeman to prove, especially if faced by an able defense lawyer.

Henry said police have been forced to move more and more into undercover activities, often involving days of observation of a single seller.

These methods yield a far higher rate of convictions, up to 70 per cent in recent months.

Henry said illegal activity in the area is decreasing but many people in the community remain unconvinced.

"The cops can be on one side of the street and there they are on the other side, dealing," said Joseph Rich-ardson, chairman of the Eighth Avenue Merchants Association.

He said the only way local residents and businessmen can get action from the police is to call the precinct "and tell them they're beating up a cop—then they drop from the sky around."

"All you can do is to constantly stress to the men the dangers involved. Unlike the criminals, the cops usually get convicted."

The money involved can be staggering. In a two-block area of a day's heroin sales run into the tens of thousands of dollars and the bigger pushers make up to $1,000 a day.

One high police official was asked recently whether the stepped-up police efforts in the Eighth Avenue marketplace might lead to its closure.

"I don't think so," he replied. "I think right now we're involved in a holding action and the whole thing is going to get a lot worse."

Pass Up Raises

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Union representatives of 25,000 south Florida building tradesmen have agreed to pass up pay raises in a one-year contract with recession-hit contractors. Instead of more pay, carpenters and others will receive increased fringe benefits equal to 25 cents an hour, a spokesman for the union and management said.

More Smuggled

LUANDA, Angola (APX)—Diamond smugglers "converted" more than $40-million worth of gems from Angola in 1974, surpassing the legal trade for the year, the ministry of natural resources says.

CP News Roundup

Nurses Charge Lockout

OTTAWA (CP) — The union representing 1,500 nurses in eleven Ontario hospitals has filed a complaint with the federal labour board accusing Treasury Board President Jean Chretien, Defence Minister James Richardson and other federal government officials with illegal actions in inducing a one-day strike here.

The dispute arose over alleged actions here by officials of the National Defence Medical Centre. About 30 nurses at this centre held a one-day legal walkout May 7 after their jobs have been turned away when they reported for work. They were legally entitled to strike May 2.

Under laws applying to collective bargaining for the public service, the government does not have the right to lock out employees.

Trial Begins

HAMILTON (CP) — The Crown began the presentation of its carefully-prepared case against former parks commissioner Kenneth Elliott and businessman Donald Fisher in the Hamilton dredging-scandal trial today, with assistant prosecutor Fred McCarthy addressed to deliver the opening address.

Crown-attorney Guy Powell will remain in the background during the first witness from the Crown's arsenal.

CN Silent

EDMONTON (CP) — A Canadian National Railway spokesman would not tell the federal inquiry into best marketing what profit the railway makes on shipment of wheat to eastern Canada from Alberta.

Tom Norwood of Montreal, CN's market manager for food and agricultural products, Tuesday told Ike Hartley, one of the inquiry commissioners, he was "not sure that we can tell you that."

Nor would he say whether the railway prefers to carry live or dressed meat.

Davis Hits Back

THUNDER BAY (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis brushed aside on Tuesday announcements of $10 million in new provincial spending, largely for northern Ontario.

Job-stopping speech prepared for delivery at a testimonial dinner for James Jessiman, Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Port William, the premier instead spoke of past criticisms and accomplishments of his Conservative government.

Need No License

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the legislature standing public accounts committee agreed Tuesday that there is nothing wrong with unlicensed beer operations at Ontario Park.

The committee decided at a meeting that there is no need for the government to license itself.

Beer and liquor is sold in two lounges in the legislature—a basement members' lounge and a third-floor press-gallery lounge.

Will Swim Lake

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — Ken Weldrick, 21, of Vancouver said Tuesday he plans to swim across Lake Ontario when he reaches Toronto in his jet from Vancouver to St. John's, Nfld.

Mr. Weldrick left Vancouver Dec. 1 and expects to arrive in St. John's in late July.

Publicity Urged

TORONTO (CP) — Lawyer Arthur Maloney said Tuesday that proceedings of the police department's complaint bureau should be made more open to the public.

In a 271-page report to the Metro Toronto Commission, he suggested that a commissioner of complaints be appointed and that public hearings be held on complaints against the police department.

New System

TORONTO (CP) — A new driver's license system classifying people according to the type of vehicles they drive will begin this fall, a spokesman for the ministry of transportation and communications said Tuesday.

The new system will not affect most people who now have a driver's licence. Wally McCabe said in an interview. New drivers and those who wish to drive vehicles in different categories will be tested under new standards, however.

Inconsistent

TORONTO (CP) — It is inconsistent for the provincial government to order its civil servants to refrain from political affiliation while allowing a member of the legislature to serve as a justice of the peace, Demas (NDP—Hamilton Westworth) said Tuesday.

Robert Johnston (PC—St. Catharines) is a part-time justice of the peace in his home riding.

Mr. Johnston said in an interview last week that he intends to continue both duties.

Buchanan Hopes Police Prompter

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said Tuesday he hopes other provincial police forces will act more quickly than they did last week in British Columbia when Indians illegally occupied Stillwater.

Appearing before a Commons committee, Mr. Buchanan said he shared his concern of Progressive Conservatives and other Liberals over a growing tendency toward confrontation among Indians.

The minister said he was a firm believer in peaceful demonstrations, but when Indians occupied government buildings, interfered with government employees or barred access to buildings they were guilty of illegal acts.

It was then up to provincial police forces to step in, not the Indian affairs department, the minister said. The RCMP serves as provincial police in B.C.

But he agreed with Paul McRae (L—Fort William) that his department had an obligation to help resolve problems leading to Indian confrontation.

Mr. McRae said he saw no signs that the department had eased the tension in Kenora, Ont., the scene of Indian unrest last year.

Pete Lesaux, Mr. Buchanan's assistant deputy minister, said it might not be realistic to say that there had been discussions since last summer with the Indians, provincial authorities and Indian leaders.

Mr. Buchanan said the Indian claim to a Kenora park had been investigated and it had been found that no valid native claim could be made to the land where an island was occupied by Indians in British Columbia, where they are occupying the federal Indian affairs office in Vancouver.

Allmand Rejects Plea For Probe of Mounties

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand has rejected a request by civil liberties groups for an independent inquiry into the use of the RCMP tactical squad during an Indian demonstration on Parliament Hill last Sept. 26.

As a result, Don Whiteside, Ottawa Civil Liberties Association vice-president, said Tuesday, an association report documenting violent incidents probably will be handed to the Marin commission which is investigating the handling of citizens' complaints against the RCMP.

Mr. Whiteside said the government will be urged to ask the RCMP to use restraint in handling anticipated Indian demonstrations this summer.

Indians have been demonstrating from Nova Scotia, to Ontario and Saskatchewan without loss in pay and increased shift premiums.

The government came back five weeks later with a proposal for a $1.15-an-hour raise spread over 22 months.

CUPW national directors now are considering their response to the government's counter-offer.

Leader Missing

OTTAWA (CP) — Kermit Moore, president of the Native Council of Canada, was reported missing to police Tuesday.

The council represents 170,000 non-status Indians and Metis.

The 37-year-old executive has not been up in his Ottawa office since April 17. Members of his family asked the council to report his disappearance.

Fellow workers at the council said Mr. Moore had been working long hours arranging a meeting between council executives and the federal cabinet.

'Liberal Chicanery' Said Behind Delay

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP said Tuesday passage of legislation setting up a national oil company has been delayed in a Commons committee because of "Liberal chicanery."

Harvie Andre (PC—Calgary Centre) said his party is upset that four meetings of the Commons national resources committee have been set aside this week to consider the Petro-Canada legislation.

With a deadline of May 30 for consideration of government spending estimates, more time should be set aside for the committee to look at expenditures of the energy department, Mr. Andre said.

The Liberals charge that the Conservatives are running a filibuster, continuing to ask questions on the general principles of the bill and stalling clause-by-clause study.

Today's committee chairman Denis Ethier said extra committee meetings had been scheduled—two last week and one this week—to talk about Petro-Canada.

"The bill isn't taking any time away from consideration of the estimates," he added.

Post Office Faces Its Toughest Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — The troubled post office faces its toughest collective bargaining yet in the next few months as talks with the 22,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers get underway, the critical issues are:

CUPW, only one of five unions negotiating contracts with the post office this year, is the most militant and the management adversary postal officials will have to face.

Automation and the use of relatively non-union labor in the post office are issues CUPW has raised in recent years, including small sorters—giant sorters.

For the other unions, wages and salaries are virtually the only significant issues.

The other four groups are the 18,000-member Letter Carriers' Union—now awaiting a ratification vote on a tentative settlement—the 8,000-member Canadian Postmasters' Association, the 3,195-member Association of Postal Officials, a supervisory union; and the members of the general labor and traded groups of the Public Service Alliance, who agreed to a contract after a strike earlier this year.

The postal workers presented their initial demands to the government March 31. Since then, they have put demands that would increase hourly wages, cut back the work week, give the right to negotiate technological changes in the mechanical labor; a reduction in the work week to 36 hours from 40

Builders Back Standards Bylaw

Mr. Keller, vice-president of Quinte Home Builders' Association, says his association will likely give the council a proposal in mid-June, and he hopes "other associations will move mostly with regard to the bylaw."

"Though the subdivision committee of city council have been sitting down to break up and make sense of the supply to all developers of the supply to make it digestible for council members."

The home builders held an informal meeting Monday to brief the developers, many of whom were "taken by surprise at the change, yet to be made," said Mr. Keller.

"After one more meeting we feel we can come to agreement and make something profitable for both," he said.

The developers have been critical as to bread in its power and in some cases would lead subdivisers to pitch their own subdivisions for lots in the city inspectors.

There are a lot of things that need minor adjustment in the bylaw, said Mr. Keller. Mr. Keller said council has been very receptive in hearing the individual developers regarding the proposed bylaw.

"They're quite ready to change portions if they feel we have right. They're really good committee," he said.

The next meeting of the committee will be held May 27.

By that time I expect council will have researched and probably reviewed most of the areas in the document that we have discussed in earlier meetings, said Mr. Keller.

County to Examine Need For Restructuring Study

By COLIN SEDGE
Staff Reporter

A study to investigate restructuring Hastings County gained broad approval from county council Tuesday night and appointed officials Tuesday during a meeting held by the Association of Counties and Regional Governments.

Following opening remarks from representatives of the restructured Dundas-Glengarry County of Stormont, Hastings and Newcastle, local representatives from Kingston, Belleville and Trenton broke into small concurrent sessions to develop with the question of Hastings County restructuring.

The question of restructuring was brought to a head last year when Trenton was asked to participate in a feasibility study for the County of Northumberland. Trenton council decided it was too late to be cost and had to offer and arrangement at a meeting with Hastings County and Belleville.

Last fall, the county returned with verdict it would not participate in such a study — stifling the study plans of the two urban centres. Tuesday's session to discuss restructuring was invited by Hastings County.

When asked if county council would support a restructuring study had perhaps Warden McCrae said Warden McCrae said "There's a strong chance council may reopen the situation."

Warden McCrae said his mind hadn't been changed on regional forces of government and the question of restructuring and that he personally is against the idea.

Tuesday the warden agreed he holds a key position in leading his county council that intention of trying to influence others, he said, "I have no intention of trying to influence them."

"I'm personally against regional government, he said. Representatives from the 8 region are sometimes left with the dirty end of the stick. That form of government will cost money," he said.

Both Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey and Trenton Mayor Robert Patrick said their positions had not changed on adhoc for a study.

Mayor Patrick said "the talk of the people here are interested in a study and I hope county council will change its thinking," after today's meeting.

Mayor Patrick said, "My council look objectively at the study. Trenton's position has been a "western attraction."

Belleville in favor of a study . . . a position that has been re-iterated by people in discussion," said Mayor Jeffrey.

Through this meeting, "the county is taking another look at the question of a study, . . . seeking as much help as they can to re-assess the situation.

"We must act now before it is too late," said Mayor Jeffrey. She pointed to student being carried on the north and west of Hastings County and said, "If we don't recognize how critical it is, we certainly could lose portions of our county" to those other study areas.

Warden McCrae said the question of establishing a study will be re-introduced during the next meeting of county council.

Both municipal reform committee will bring in a recommendation either to take action or to have a study, said the warden. At that time a study could be ordered.

Warden McCrae said a study of a study would cost the government footing 50 cent of the bill with the remainder to be paid by the affected municipalities.

"They'd get at least 50 per cent of the bill. He said it would be better than the government cost of it."

"Transfer our own study (without government support) might be a better idea," he said.

Seniors Get Funding For Varied Projects

The federal government has announced two grants for district senior citizens groups under the New Horizons Program. To be eligible, the groups must be composed of at least 10 volunteers, the majority of whom must be 60 years or more, and be for the benefit of the entire group or project. Only for non-profit, voluntary

A grant of $3,000 has been received in the Mohawk Sisters of Deseronto to establish an activity and social centre in a building provided by the Band Council.

The Castleton Friendship Club has received $3,135 to complete a park area for lawn bowling, shuffleboard and other outdoor activities.

Police Week Aim

One of the aims of Law Enforcement Week this week is to bring the police and public closer together, especially in regard to small children. Sgt. Robert Hall of the city force seems to be emphasizing that point as he displays a target to the kindergarten class from Prince Charles Elementary School during a tour of the police department Tuesday.

Kiwanians Praised For Police Work

People who think only of themselves are damaging the values of society, says a member of the Belleville police department.

Insp. Ralph Blatchford of the force's services division told Belleville Kiwanians Tuesday, "there are people in our society who only live by the pronoun 'I'. They are leading society into the gutter."

Insp. Blatchford noted technological and scientific achievements have not changed the basics of men to the good. There are still frauds and thefts each day, he said.

But he pointed out there is hope for the future "because there are such organizations as Kiwanis."

"Children will learn from your example," he explained. "That is an inescapable fact."

Insp. Blatchford urged, "let them see your service to your community, to your society. Let them see you care."

It was 15 years ago that Insp. Blatchford joined the city force as a police constable in charge of traffic safety, particularly in the schools. That particular function of the police has been one of the most gratifying I have ever had," he commented.

He praised the involvement of Kiwanians in police work, specifically the first donation of a traffic safety officer car in Ontario to the Belleville force. The club gave the present safety officer, Sgt. Robert Hall.

Insp. Blatchford is celebrating his 25th year in police service this year.

Authority Gets Grant For New Headquarters

The Moira River Conservation Authority will receive a grant under the Conservation Authorities Act for the preparation of plans and specifications of an authority administration building to be located in the city. Announced at the grant, announced by Quinte MPP Richard Potter, is $4,000.

The authority's current offices are in Thurlow Township Hall, Canifton. The new building, if arrangements can be made with city authorities, would be located beside the parks board building at the end Riverbank Park, according to authority secretary-treasurer James McLeod.

Teachers Won't Back Any Political Party

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

The Ontario Teachers Federation. (OTF), represented by three teachers' federations in Hastings County, will not support any political party in the provincial election.

The decision was made at a joint meeting of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF), the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation (OPSMTF) and the Federation of Women Teachers' Association of Ontario (FWTAO) held recently at the Four Seasons. These three federations represent about 1,110 teachers in the county.

A spokesman for the OTF, Julie Canty, who is also Hastings Division vice-president, said the parent federation will meet with all party organizers Thursday to express the concern of teachers in the province.

"We simply see ourselves as best serving the teachers by gathering and dispensing information about the parties," said Mrs. Canty, who has always rejected the notion that teachers in the province may support one party or the other in this election.

Mrs. Canty said teachers are free as individuals to work or support any one party, the OTF simply will be presenters currently on the executive of the three parties in this country.

Last December the teachers in the county published some information about the candidates seeking election. The answers was taken as a public service.

During the annual OSSTF convention in Toronto, delegates voted to accept a resolution which would ensure that the next Ontario government shall have at its priorities, the areas of human resources and the social development of the people of this province.

The provincial OSSTF executive also gave local divisions the right to support a candidate or a party by whatever methods it chooses.

Two Seek NDP Nod

Two people have announced their intention to stand for the NDP nomination for Northumberland riding in the next provincial election.

They are David Nalsh, 32, and John Jowsetra, 33, both of Colborne. Mr. Nalsh is serving his second term as president of the Colborne and District Labor Council and has been vice-president and president of his union, local 128 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

John Jowsetra has been a general contractor in Colborne for the last 20 years.

The new boundaries for the Northumberland riding include Port Hope and Hpt Township.

Driver Unhurt

PICTON — A Hamilton man escaped injury Wednesday night when his car was demolished as it spun out of control on the turn on Bridge St. here.

Christopher Rennie, 20, of Spadina Ave., Hamilton, was driving on Bridge St. and lost control of his vehicle as he attempted a turn onto Union St.

Damage to the car was estimated at $1,000.

Picton police chief Charles Fletcher said charges have been laid in connection with the incident which occurred shortly before 10 p.m.

Fabricon Says Employees Won't Lose Jobs in Move

A Fabricon Manufacturing official today denied speculation that 140 Trenton plant.—employees will be without jobs when the factory moves to Belleville.

Speculation has ended up in Queens Park where Labor Minister John MacBeth stated in the house he would check into the status of workers at the Trenton plant.

The labor minister was responding to a question from Ed Bounsall, NDP Windsor West, who said Fabricon employees in Trenton were not approached by the company they would be given jobs in Belleville.

"They can't just let go all their workers in Trenton and take on a new staff of workers in Belleville" Mr. Bounsall said.

Company comptroller in Trenton, Jack Tigler said the rumor of employees losing their jobs is "absolutely unfounded and untrue".

"Every employee that wants to move to the Belleville operation will be moved," he said.

Workers were informed of the transfer of company operations last week, said Mr. Tigler. "There wasn't much talk at that time."

Earlier this week, the company announced plans due to shortage of expansion room in Trenton, the firm has purchased sufficient land in Belleville's north east industrial park.

The company has built a plant there that will employ approximately 300 after its first year of operation in the production of wire and cable products.

Plant manager Hans Allmendinger was not available for comment today regarding the employee situation but said earlier this week the Trenton facility would not be closed.

It is possible that the Trenton building will be used as a warehouse facility.

Area Fund Drive Nets $30,000 For Battle Against Cancer

So far, the Belleville branch of the Canadian Cancer Society has raised more than $30,000 which is expected to be used in the fight against cancer.

Brian Pearson, chairman of the local committee, said during a recent meeting of the committee of a large number of campaigns in the city this spring, a large number of requests are still to be canvassed for donations.

Volunteers so far have reached only the residential segment.

They still have about 30 industries to contact or follow up before the campaign concludes," said Mr. Knudsen.

Local workers report the campaign will top the $28,000 mark in fund-raising chore which covers Hastings County, south of Highway 7.

While 28 per cent of the funds are led into cancer research, the remainder is spent almost entirely locally to service an approximate 300 patients in the area of Belleville.

During 1974 alone, more than 24,000 was spent transporting Belleville patients to Kingston for hospital treatment, said Mr. Knudsen.

"Any patient needing the help of the society is served through the funds collected in the campaign," said Mr. Knudsen.

One of the campaign's largest contributors was made Tuesday by the Belleville Yacht Club's Bobcat's Fund in the amount of $1,000.

"Donations of this size are few and far between," said the campaign chairman.

Cigarette May Have Started Legion Blaze

By AL YARAS
Staff Reporter

COLBORNE — An unextinguished cigarette thrown into a garbage container is suspected as the cause of a $100,000 blaze that destroyed the century-old Canadian Legion Colborne here early Tuesday.

Colborne Fire Chief Ronald Whitehead said today he suspects the cigarette butt may have been thrown into the garbage container in a building was being cleaned after it closed for the night.

He said he does not feel someone was involved in the blaze and has no plans to call in the Ontario Fire Marshall's office to investigate.

The chief says the two-storey brick building is "absolutely a write off. We lost it." He estimated the loss at $100,000 thereby confirming an estimate made by Colborne clerk Allen Learmouth, Tuesday.

During the 4½ hour blaze, firemen from Colborne and Brighton managed to extinguish the fire once and for all. But flames he said he saw suspects were in the false ceiling of the first floor as started the blaze.

Mopping up operations took all day Tuesday after the fire was finally put out around 4 a.m.

The village landmark on King St. was originally built in 1858 as a public school.

When police celebrate Law Enforcement Week each year, they are not doing a selling job, indicating to public relations is asking the public for thanks, says Insp. Ralph Blatchford of the Belleville police department.

"We are trying to present to you, the citizens, the job we do and ask for your support," he explained to Belleville Kiwanians Tuesday.

Insp. Blatchford commented, "the police and citizens must stand together. We need your support."

He pointed out, "you have a moral as well as a legal obligation to enhance law and order. The best protection the people can have, really, is to protect themselves.

"We (police) are really the front line of society," he said.

"It is up to us to transform society and not be drawn into a compromise."

Trio Consider Study

The question of undertaking a study to investigate re-structuring Hastings County is squarely in the hands of county council and Warden Bill McCrae (above) following a meeting Tuesday. Both Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey and Trenton Mayor Robert Patrick earlier stated their councils were interested in a study but last fall county council voted against it. The study question is expected to come before council at its June meeting.

KEN HOLTZMAN — NOLAN RYAN

JIM BIBBY

Long and Short of It In Pitching Distances

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nolan Ryan pitched nine hitless innings. Jim Bibby pitched five and Ken Holtzman faced only one batter but all came away with victories in American League baseball action Tuesday night.

Ryan pitched six hitless innings and finished with his sixth career two-hitter in California Angels' 5-0 victory over New York Yankees. Bibby allowed singles to the first two batters and then knocked off the rest 15 in Texas Rangers' 5-0 triumph over Milwaukee Brewers. The game was called in the fifth inning because of rain.

And Holtzman, who had a 1-4 record in eight starts despite a fine 2.35 earned-run average, struck out Carl Yastrzemski and a Boston rally in the fifth inning and was credited with the win in Oakland A's 9-5 triumph over the Red Sox when Joe Rudi's tie-breaking home run in the bottom of the fifth made him the pitcher of record.

Elsewhere in the American League, Baltimore Orioles edged Chicago White Sox 2-1, Kansas City Royals beat Detroit Tigers 9-7 and Cleveland Indians defeated Minnesota Twins 3-2.

Ryan flirted with a record-tying fourth career no-hitter until Bobby Bonds broke the spell with a leadoff single in the seventh, the Yankees' only clean hit. Ryan, who joined Oakland's Vida Blue and Don Sutton of Los Angeles as the only seven-game winners in the majors, struck out seven and walked five.

Cesar Tovar and Jim Spencer hit first-inning home runs off Jim Slaton in back Bibby's pitching. A heavy thunderstorm hit Arlington Stadium with two out in the bottom of the fifth and the umpires called it after a 1½-hour wait.

Rudi hit his fourth home run of the season in the fifth inning to break a 4-4 tie and Billy Williams added a three-run shot in the seventh. Holtzman made a rare relief appearance and struck out Carl Yastrzemski, the only batter he faced, to halt a four-run Boston rally in the fifth, capped by Rick Burleson's three-run double.

Tommy Davis' run-scoring double in the fifth inning broke a 3-3 tie and the Orioles went on to end Jim Kaat's 13-game winning streak behind the four-hit pitching of Ross Grimsley.

Kansas City topped on Lerrin LaGrow for five runs in the second inning, one on a homer by Tony Solaita, and survived a four-run Detroit rally in the ninth. Solaita, who singled home a run in the fourth, led off the second with his towering homer. It bounced off the roof of the third deck, 370 feet away and about 100 feet up.

Rookie reliever Dennis Eckersley shut off a seventh-inning Minnesota rally and Cleveland capitalized on a unique bunt double to defeat the Twins.

Cub Happy as Dodger

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Although Chicago Cubs have the best winning percentage in major-league baseball, Burt Hooton says he would rather be with Los Angeles Dodgers.

The rejuvenated Hooton, obtained by the Dodgers from the Cubs on May 2 after a dismal start this season, showed his gratitude toward his new club Tuesday night by allowing only two hits in pitching Los Angeles to a 4-0 victory over St. Louis Cardinals.

Hooton was ecstatic over his sparkling performance and the confidence the Dodgers have shown in him.

"As soon as I got here (with the Dodgers), I had a reversal of attitude," he said. "Maybe the Cubs have a winning attitude now and I admire what they're doing, but it just really didn't sink in with me. The time is in a whole new start.

"Red Adams (Dodgers pitching coach) talked to me and got me back to doing the things I'd once done right," Hooton said. "He put me back in squaring off toward home plate. He got me to slow down and get my arm working with my body."

While Hooton was shacking the Cardinals, Jerry Reuss of Pittsburgh Pirates and rookie Tom Underwood of Philadelphia Phillies also were pitching shutouts. Reuss stopped San Diego Padres 3-0 on three hits and Underwood beat Cincinnati Reds 4-0 on six hits.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Cubs edged Houston Astros 2-1, Atlanta Braves whipped Montreal Expos 9-4 and San Francisco Giants and New York Mets were rained out.

Hooton, who had an 0-3 record and a 7.20 earned-run average in five previous appearances this year, walked only one Cardinal Tuesday, struck out seven and faced only 29 batters—two over the minimum. The only hits off him were a 2nd Simemore's double in the fourth and Luis Melendez' single in the ninth.

Jimmy Wynn drove in three Los Angeles runs with a homer and a single, and Rick Auerbach singled in two runs.

Reuss, in pitching his third consecutive complete game, struck out 13—his career high.

Frank Taveras, hitting only .111, drove in the Pirates first run with a triple. Reuss scored the second on Manny Sanguillen's sacrifice fly after leading off the eighth with a single.

RTS REVENGE

Underwood, bombed for six runs in one-third of an inning by Cincinnati in his major league debut last Aug. 19, gained revenge against the Reds by striking out nine batters for his second shutout of the season.

Henley Back With Cats

HAMILTON (CP) — Garney Henley, Hamilton Tiger-Cats' veteran defensive back and wide receiver, signed a contract Tuesday to play his 10th season in the Canadian Football League.

Henley, who was named the Cats's outstanding player in 1957, saw limited action as a wide receiver last year because of a knee injury but told Ticat manager Ralph Sazio the knee was strong enough for another season.

"Garney wanted to play and, assuming the knee holds up, he will," said Sazio.

The Ticats also announced Tuesday the signing of import linebackers Robert Shaw from Harvard University and Jerry Williams from Indiana State University.

Belleville's Marg Ruttan Rolls Out in Style

There's no doubt Prunella doesn't bother Marg Ruttan at all in order to win the ladies section of the Brunswick Eighth Annual Bowl Your Way to Bermuda tournament held in Toronto. In Bermuda tournament held in Toronto, she had to roll three consecutive strikes in the tenth frame.

Ruttan was the 12th of 13 female finalists in the event and Dorothy Rodgers of London completed and rolled what appeared to be a winning high single (288). The local bowler was the only one who had a chance of changing things. After the ninth she formed herself on the repes needing to roll out with three strikes.

Sure enough, Ruttan threw three perfect balls to complete the final pin fall of 300 and with herself on all-expenses paid trip to Bermuda.

In the fourth Belleville bowler in the last three years to win a trip, last year Pat Hughes was the men's and of a champ and champ finisher in the women's. In '73 Linda Derbidge was the winner.

Five lassies participated in the final by with three bowlers from each in the men's and three in the women's. Along with Belleville and London, Sault Ste. Marie, Thunder Bay and the host Etobicoke bowlers entered three qualifiers.

Terry Boyle, a local bowler in the men's event, did show his bid to win a trip. He rolled a 283, but was passed to London's Ron Broadwell with a 284.

Other Brunswick Belleville Bowl qualifiers were Millie Smith, Kathie Rachenstuel, Glen Shea and Warren Calbary.

Marmora Midgets Wrapped in Red Tape

MARMORA — The midget hockey team is his village has been on the sidewalk in two areas but may not get over centre ice in either of them.

The midgets ran into stiff opposition from the Marmora Minor Hockey Association recently when the organizing body refused them permission to hold a raffle to raise money for new team jackets.

The association's reasoning was that all or some other clubs in its jurisdiction would desire to hold raffles and flood the village.

And the midget team has also offered to remove the refrigeration lines from the closed Marmora Arena (this year by placing a bid of $300 to village council.

However, that has been referred to Gordon Bennett, chairman of parks and recreation, because the Lions Club is considering performing the job free of charge.

Maple Leaf Mills is building a good reason to grow corn this year.

'This is Maple Leaf Mills' new Cavan Feed Plant, scheduled for completion in the fall of 1975. It will provide a market for 30,000 tons of corn and a new source for the Master feed and farm supply needs of local agriculturalists. The new facility will employ 24 people and have an economic impact on the local economy of some three million dollars annually.

On completion, the Master Feeds outlet at the plant will offer you a complete range of livestock and poultry feeds in bags or bulk for pick up or delivery.

Maple Leaf Mills will naturally make sure that our own RX Line Hybrids are well stocked in the varieties best suited to the area. Also, to help local growers get the most from their fields, we're offering complete technical assistance and up-to-date seed corn and corn production information.

Our Cavan people are working full time with area growers and prospective growers with the full weight of Maple Leaf Mills research and expertise behind them.

Paul Davidson is the "Corn for Cavan" Project Manager. Paul grew up on a farm near Oakwood, Ontario. Paul's role is to promote new corn acreage in the Cavan area to meet the 30,000 ton appetite of the feed plant. Paul is available to speak to associations and individuals to discuss the impact of the new facility and the techniques of modern corn production. He can offer contracts, arrange financing, advise on crop insurance and help with all the related needs and products.

in the Spectrum, and managed to continue the winning streak at just 110 per.

Then, the Flyers scored two goals in the first three minutes, only 10 seconds apart.

Center Rick MacLeish scored twice to give the Flyers a 5-1 win before 17,077 fans in Game Three of the Stanley Cup semi-finals in the National Hockey League's Eastern Division series Thursday night in Philadelphia. The Flyers now lead the best-of-seven semi-final series, 2-1.

"What can I say?" said Flyer captain Bobby Clarke. "We played when we play. Maybe we should have her here all the time."

Clarke had to take the puck off Smith. He didn't look too good and was pulled for Glenn Resch. When we scored right off the bat, it took me up."

Miss Smith, called upon to lead inspirited Flyers appeared for the fifth time this season, and belted out "God Bless America" in her over-all record at Flyers home games is 43-3-1.

Her appearance sent the fans into an uproar. The Islanders managed to hold the Flyers to a fall to great her with a kiss and flowers. Then, the other Islanders skated over to shake hands.

Bernstein, who was voted for the Islanders. They were outshot 35-15, and except for goalie Glenn Resch, who stopped several difficult shots, they looked rather shaky.

The Flyers rallied from a come-from-behind habit. A win for the Islanders, yesterday, have made them the only team in Stanley Cup history to win two consecutive series after losing the first three games.

They tied Toronto Maple Leafs record which they were back to beat Pittsburgh Penguins in the last four games of the quarter-final. Toronto had tied the mark on the last four against Detroit Red Wings in the 1945 final.

MacLeish, who finished first in Stanley Cup scoring last year with 13 goals and nine assists, said: "We played our game. We got on them early. Every shift we kept on pushing them."

Coach Al Arbour of the Islanders said his club gave the Flyers plenty to worry about.

"We got the early lead and had concentration, expected they would come out strong. I thought that if we could hold them at bay in the first period we could bring the momentum to our side."

The Flyers pestered the Islanders from the opening whistle, forechecking and backchecking as they did in most games of the regular season series between the two teams.

MacLeish scored two of the goals—he now leads all in the playoffs—on first-period power plays, and added his third goal into an empty net at 12:32 of the final period when the Islanders pulled Resch for a brief spell in an attempt to get back into the game.

Bill Barber, who finished only behind Clarke and MacLeish in regular season scoring, added the other goal in the semi-final series. He had four goals in the quarter-final against Toronto.

Dave Schultz, the NHL leader the last three seasons in penalty minutes, filled a career record for month penalty minutes in playoff action. He received a minor in the first period which gave him a career total of 20 minutes in 20 games through three playoff seasons. John Ferguson, former Montreal Canadiens' scrapper, set the record in seven seasons and 85 playoff games.

Bernstein said when Jim Pappin, who left the game Tuesday in a collision with Bob Nystrom, who skated in for a cog slap-shot.

MacLeish scored his first goal game on a blue-line slapper after St. Laurent who had two goals and assists in the game, tied the game at 2-2 at the first period's end.

Flyer power play, the first Philadelphia power play goal in 13 chances.

Jude Drouin scored the lone Islanders' goal on a power play with the Flyers two men short.

The Islanders had only four shots against Flyers goalie Bernie Parent in the first period. One of his best saves came on a blue-line shot by Albert

This Should Be Canada's Year to Produce on the Swim Scene

WINNIPEG (CP) — The 1975 swimming nationals have the potential to be the best swimming championships ever, says Pat Dufour, vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Swim Club.

"These trials will probably be not more spectacular than any other this decade," he said in an interview.

The Winnipeg championships beginning Friday will serve as selection of Canada's 26-member swimming team for the world aquatic championships in Cali, Colombia, July 2-12. A classified team will be chosen to compete in the Pan-American Games in Mexico City May 30-June 8.

"This will be an extraordinary meet in terms of excellence," said Dr. Dick Thomas, club coach of the selection committee. The other Canadian meet has had its share of world-class performances.

In a list of the top 10 times posted in the world so far in 1975, 11 different Canadians appear 26 times. Had there been a spectacular performance of Nancy Garapick, the 15-year-old Halifax girl who won the 200-metre backstroke at the U.S. Nationals last week, she would have pictured the existing world mark. Her time of 2:16.33, more than two seconds faster than previous best time this year by Wendy Cook of Vancouver.

It's the first time Canada has had two female swimmers in the world in any one event.

Dufour said of Garapick: "We don't really know how low for a time she can go but we very hopeful she hasn't hit her final form."

Garapick and Cook will tangle Sunday in the final of the 200-metre backstroke but it could be that neither will emerge victorious.

Singh Prepared For Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — Singh, who missed the Kentucky Derby because of a freak injury, is back in shape and ready to face Derby winner Foolish Pleasure and the other top three-year-olds in the Preakness.

The last main offspring of the great sire Bold Ruler, who died in 1971, Singh is rated as 5-to-1 choice in the field of 10 for Saturday's 100th running of the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico race course.

"I'd be a little more confident if he had a little more seasoning," said Hall-of-fame trainer John Russell. "On the other hand, if he had the seasoning and hadn't performed well, he wouldn't be here."

Singh was the Peter Pan, the Swift and a division of the Gotham before straining a small ligament last April in his 14th lifetime start, which ruled him for the Wood Memorial.

That loaded Singh out of the Wood and the Derby, and Foolish Pleasure, who has his record to 11 victories in 13 starts.

Singh, owned by Cynthia Phipps and Hal Price Headley Jr., has been brought back slowly from his injury, and Russell says he's 100 per cent sound for the 1 3-16 mile Preakness.

The chestnut colt won the Preakness Prep by six lengths last Saturday, covering the 1 1-16 miles in 1:46 2-5.

Foolish Pleasure has been installed as the 6-to-5 favorite for the Preakness. Avatar, the Derby runner-up, is rated at 4-to-1, and Diabolo, third at Churchill Downs and owned by Frank McMahon of Vancouver, is 4-to-1. Then comes Singh and Master Derby, the No. 4 finisher in the Derby, at 8 to 1.

Ex-battery Mates Meet at Expos Expense

MONTREAL (CP) — Earl Williams, of Atlanta Braves fame, on Tuesday night, with the help of his former battery mate, hit a home run against anything but kindly.

Williams, who was recently traded by the Braves after a two-year stint with the Atlanta Orioles, drilled two hits off Manager Dick Williams on the way to driving in a pair of runs in the Montreal Expos' baseball season opener.

"It gives you a funny feeling when you're hitting against a guy you used to catch," said Williams of McNally, in his first year as an Expo after 12 full seasons with the Baltimore Orioles.

The thrilling part of the game and no matter how good friends we are, I'm still trying to get a hit and he's trying to get me out."

Williams, now playing first base, and pitcher Dave McNally were battery mates for the Orioles for three years.

Williams, who played third base, and pitcher Dave Roberts, who played for the Braves, hit two doubles and a single and two runs scored on Williams's single. Hits were also delivered by Tony Taylor and Larvell Blanks each of the latter with a two-run double.

Evans singled and Williams hit into a force play to score the final Atlanta run in the sixth.

Pete Mangurat's grand hit scored a run for the Expos in the first and they added another on Larry Billino's base hit in the third. Pat Scanlon stood out and Tony Scott tallied a sacrifice fly for two Montreal runs in the seventh.

Braves starter Ron Reed, who gave up 13 hits, needed just six nine relief hits from Max Leon to nail down his fourth win in seven decisions.

WHA Supports Draft Proposal

TORONTO (CP) — World Hockey Association president Ben Hatskin and John Bassett on Tuesday they are in favour of the new Canadian Major Junior Hockey League's proposed draft, drafting under-age juniors.

Hatskin, chairman of the Williams-Hatskin group said that since the National Hockey League has said it would not participate in the CMJHL's proposed draft, WHA acceptance of the proposal would put it in a favored position.

Bassett, president of Toronto Toros, said he sees the CMJHL proposal "as a bright move that is legally proper to everyone involved.

The CMJHL, formed last week by the Western Canada, Ontario and Quebec major junior leagues, proposed that it act as sole agent for all its players and would charge pro teams $20,000 for negotiating rights to each 18-year-old player and an additional $20,000 if the player turns pro.

The negotiating rights fee is over and above the salary each franchise would pay to sign each player. The rights fee would be added to salaries and $10,000 to sign. Graduated juniors over 20 would be free agents.

"The structure makes a lot of sense," Hatskin said. "It definitely appears to be a step in the right direction. The price is a bit high, however."

The CMJHL proposes that the WHA and NHL would participate in a common draft of major junior players, taking turns picking. But NHL president Clarence Campbell has said he would not be part of such a draft.

If the NHL does not show up to make its selections, the WHA would be better off, said Hatskin.

Bassett told the CMJHL proposal goes along with what the WHA is arguing about for almost a year.

"It's a matter of you don't fight it in a way you hope it should be able to play pro hockey."

Bassett cannot a continuing over signing of under-age juniors earlier this year when he signed 18-year-old Mark Napier of Toronto Marlboros in the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior series. Bassett argued that it would be illegal not to allow an 18-year-old to take a living as a pro hockey player if he wished to and was qualified to play in the pros.

Unoccupied workmen's trailers sit in front of the incomplete Olympic Stadium at Montreal Olympic Park Tuesday in this aerial picture. Construction strikes and severe labor disputes have halted work on the site again. This time the International Olympic Committee is seriously considering moving the games. (CP Photo)

Bourassa Will Sacrifice Games

ROME (AP) — The inner cabinet of the Olympics buddied in a crisis meeting today after hearing the first official utterances from Canada that the 1976 Montreal Olympics are in trouble.

The meeting apparently would wrangle with the knotty question of finding a last-minute substitute for the Montreal site, should a wave of construction stalemate that began Thursday forces the Canadian city to give up a lengthy struggle to stage the Games.

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa told Olympic officials here, including International Olympic Committee (IOC) President Lord Killanin, that he would sacrifice the Games if it became necessary to preserve social order in the province.

Bourassa's remarks came Tuesday after violent clashes between police and workers who were on strike protesting proposed legislation to curb corruption in the construction industry.

The crisis was not entirely unexpected. For months IOC officials and other Olympic officials have been worried by strikes which have held up the building of Montreal's new $980 million Olympic Stadium and the athletes' village. Air iron workers strike last winter forced a six-week shutdown of construction of the facilities.

The current round of Canadian strikes began last Thursday in reaction to proposed labor legislation that would place four union heads under trusteeship and bar any person convicted of a crime from holding union office for five years.

The bills would also prevent anyone from participating in an illegal work slowdown or walkout or encourage from engaging in an illegal lockout. The proposals include the stipulation that anyone so charged would be presumed guilty until they had proven themselves innocent.

Louis Laberge, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL), warned that the Games might have to be postponed to 1977 if the measures are made law.

But Bourassa said he had talked with Olympics officials in Rome earlier Tuesday, and he was told "there is no question of postponing the Games until 1977," Bourassa said the Games would "either be held in 1976, as I am convinced they will, or they will not be held at all."

There are strong feelings in Olympic circles that the IOC should still keep faith in the Canadian Olympic Association and hold the Games in Canada whatever happens. Presumably this means that if Montreal can not stage the Games, they might be spread around to other Canadian cities with suitable facilities.

The task of taking over the Olympic Games at a year's notice or less would be near impossible for most cities and not much easier even for cities with already adequate sports facilities.

Killanin Denies Meeting Took Place

ROME (CP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, has denied reports the IOC held an emergency meeting about a statement by the premier of Quebec that the Montreal Olympics may have to be postponed.

"We did would the normal report of the president of the organizing committee and the mayor of Montreal during IOC meetings in Lausanne next Thursday. No decision will be made before then," he told Reuter news agency today.

Lord Killanin said he was aware of Premier Robert Bourassa's statement that social order in Quebec was more important than the Games. But he said he would have no comment on the Montreal situation until the Lausanne meeting.

Holidays start sooner. When you start with us.

Joan Fielden, Dominion's Home Economist Consultant

"Barbecues. The word has many meanings. Like food cooked over an open fire, over coals, in a pit, on a spit or in front of a fire. But for most of us, a barbecue simply means an enjoyable outdoor get together with the family or friends. Everyone eagerly waiting for the steaks, hamburgers or hot dogs to be given that final turn to doneness. And the table set with potato chips, potato salad, mustard, relish and all your other favourite fixings that make a barbecue a delicious, meaty family affair, especially during holiday time. You can make your barbecue meats tastier, more moist and more flavourful by marinating or brushing them with a sauce during cooking. So try the following barbecue sauce. It's easy to make and will give your meat that added barbecue flavour."

Easy to Make Barbecue Sauce

1 cup tomato juice
1 cup consommé
1 tablespoon meat sauce
tarragon
cloves
1 tablespoon freshly ground pepper
1 tablespoon salt
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
2 tablespoons onion juice
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 clove garlic, grated
½ cup sherry
parsley

1. Heat tomato juice, consommé and meat sauce with a sprig of tarragon, a sprig of thyme and two or three whole cloves.
2. Just before boiling, add other seasonings. Then add sherry and allow sauce to heat for a minute or two longer before serving.

Town Crier Being Sought

HALIFAX (CP) — Halifax has been looking for a town crier since last fall but has yet to find a suitable candidate.

The idea, a city official explained, ties in with the restoration of three acres of waterfront in which merchants are conducting business from refurbished shop fronts, some of them dating to the early 1800s. The city and the owners were looking for a suitable advertising medium.

"We wanted something that would reflect the integrity of the restoration and development project and get the message across," th official said.

Applicants for the crier's job should have experience and ability to communicate.

and irritable.

For two days the pet dog of On the morning of the third Parin Bharucha, a socially- day Mrs. Bharucha received a prominent Bombay woman, re- telegram informing her that her daughter had been seriously injured in a mountain-climbing accident in the Himalayas.

The time of the accident and the time when the dog became irritable almost coincided.

Did the Alsatian instinctively sense the mountain accident more than 1,200 miles away? Was this a case of extra-sensory perception among canines?

Yes, said Mrs. Bharucha. Several dog lovers in India credit their pets with this extraordinary gift.

Madhav Purandare, a farmer in Nasik County, 200 miles from Bombay said "whenever my dog Chandra behaves strangely, I begin to anticipate something bad."

Chandra, a nine-year-old mongrel, refused to follow Purandare on a hunting trip one morning. The dog even bit his master, which was unusual.

"I cancelled the hunting trip," said Purandare. "I knew something was going to happen.

"That same afternoon there was a heavy thunderstorm and lightning struck at several places in the hunting area. Three villagers and a dozen water buffalo died."

According to reports in the Indian press, Federal Railway Minister Lalit Nidhra's Punjabian Cheeko had a premonition of his master's recent assassination. Nidhra died in a bomb attack.

The Times of India group of newspapers reported that some 24 minutes before the bomb blast at Samastipur in Bihar state on the evening of Jan. 2, Cheeko got restless in the minister's New Delhi home.

"Cheeko became extremely restless and began barking at all and sundry as it is had a premonition of what was about to happen to his master. It remained disconsolate throughout the night. About 10 o'clock in the morning next day Cheeko found dead. Mr. Nidhra himself was pronounced dead at 6:30 a.m."

Hydrogen Bombs Said Safe Source of Power

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. (AP) — Hydrogen bombs exploded deep underground can produce enough electricity safely and cleanly to meet the world's energy needs, say government scientists.

Dr. Harold Agnew, director of Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, birthplace of the atomic and hydrogen bombs, said the system would use a virtually inexhaustible fuel—deuterium, a hydrogen isotope that can be extracted from water and is the main ingredient in H-bombs.

Given 10 years and $200 million, said Dr. R. G. Sheffelin, project director, his group can build a prototype PACER power plant producing as much as 1,000 megawatts of electricity by detonating a 50-kiloton bomb every 30 hours. On average the United States currently consumes about 375,000 megawatts from conventional nuclear power plants every hour.

Each thermonuclear explosion, equal to 50,000 tons of TNT, would be 2½ times as powerful as the atomic bombs that devastated Hiroshima and Nagasaki in 1945.

Yet, Sheffler said, "When this thing goes off, a person a few miles away wouldn't even know anything happened."

The technology for PACER, borrowed from weapons research and the petroleum industry, already is available, Sheffler said. Three years at the lab's drawing boards would polish the concept and complete its design, then field work could begin.

But, for all his confidence, Sheffler said: "We're going to have a hard time getting support in an era when nuclear power is taking its lumps from practically every side."

The process would involve a closed system with an underground cavity at the bottom connected by pipelines to a conventional power plant on the surface. The entire system would be filled with about one million tons of steam.

Bombs would be dropped through pipes into the cavity would heat steam to 900 degrees fahrenheit. The steam would be circulated to the surface, run through a heat exchanger to power the generators and returned to the cavity in a continuous cycle.

Opening lead — K ♠

By OSWALD AND JAMES JACOBY

Today's hand was played by Giorgio Belladonna in a world championship match.

Belladonna reached a four-spade contract by the simple process of bidding it as doubled. West opened the king of club. Giorgio played dummy's ace and so far he had done nothing unusual.

Now look at his next play! He led the four of hearts from dummy and insured his contract against any combination of clubs, adverse hearts and spades.

Just see how nicely the play works. If East wins the trick he must cash the king of clubs and return a heart to dummy's ace or queen of hearts to do so. After that play there will be no way for the defence to make more than a total of two hearts and one trump.

If West wins the trick and holds all three trumps he can lead one. Declarer wins and plays a second trump. If West leads a second trump the defense will give Giorgio the heart tricks but West's king of trumps will be picked up by South's ace.

Belladonna's play is the sort of play other experts wish they are shown all the cards. He made it under the stress of top competition, which all goes to show how lucky he isn't. The player in the world it is most unlikely that anyone is stronger.

To Your Good Health

Synthetic, Natural Vitamins the Same

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: When you say there is no difference between a synthetic vitamin and a natural vitamin, are you referring to the chemical makeup of the vitamin?

I thought a synthetic vitamin might be rejected by the body, but simply nothing may exist, whether a natural vitamin or a synthetic one, without by the body.

I am confused.—N. J. K.

No need for confusion. There's not a shred of difference chemically. The molecule of Vitamin C found in a juicy orange is exactly the same as the molecule of Vitamin C in a compound that forms the pill.

At the cell level, the body doesn't distinguish between the one utilizing either source for its own particular needs.

I do believe, though, as a matter of common sense, that it is best to get the day-to-day vitamins we need for good health in a natural way—through a well-balanced diet. In fact, most elements are not required.

To digress for a moment: the most useful rule of measuring vitamins is that it is a public health situation. For example, the Food and Drug Administration, which regulates chemically and are effectively best in the preparation of foods, and the practitioning of milk, for instance.

Knowing the chemical structure of the list vitamins, it becomes rather easy and desirable to manufacture (synthesize) these chemical structures (molecules), and substitute them for the missing vitamins. This practically speaking has been done in most of the milk we drink today—which is fortified, as you feel.

Nutritionally, the resulting substance in the store is the same in value as it was before the original vitamins were removed.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I now would be a lot less miserable if you could give me some answers.

Whenever I eat certain food, it seems to return to me in the form of a bad odor. It's as bad that I can't eat in a restaurant by myself. Sometimes when I swallow food the food gets about halfway with my breath, I get a bad pain. It hasn't a few seconds, and I have to go to the toilet and making a bermit out of me.—Ex-Sufferer

You haven't told me enough. Perhaps this problem is the crushing such a problem for you that you don't have your thoughts at to what this could be.

—A diverticulum of the esophagus (called Zenker's diverticulum). This is an outpouching from the pouch which can trap bits of food. It is treated surgery.

—A hiatus hernia of the esophagus, sudden regurgitation when it comes into contact with the stomach juices.

—An occlusion of the esophagus, either from a cancerous defect, or a growth.

—Hiatal hernia, a defect in the hiatus, the opening provided to allow the pulled to pass through the diaphragm to connect with the stomach.

—An esophageal spasm, in which case the possibility of ulcer. This condition would be treated just as would stomach and a ulcer, with bland foods diet.

Rather than suffer retching in the dining table, I would find out, once and for all, just what is causing the trouble.

Treatment of any of the possible problems I have mentioned depends on the exact nature of the disease. For example, giving antibiotics would be of no avail in these activities. It would be worth it to be able to eat at the family table again.

As to any of the area in in order, anyway. This would be the first step toward eating your bread nutrients. I just don't know can be corrected surgically, if that is necessary.

I wish you success. Eating alone in a bedroom doesn't sound too much fun to me.

Dear Dr. Thompson: My son has a condition of the eyes called "keratoconus." The doctor called it a disease of the front surface of the eye, which may require surgery to correct. My son is now 18, and has had this for about five years. It is a condition he can see. Would glasses be an effective?—Mrs. K. P.

The surgery that has been performed is very likely a corneal transplant, which has been successful in many instances.

The cornea is a tough, membranous covering of the iris, the colored area in the front of the eyeball. If it is too thin or irregular, it causes light to be reflected to the white of the eyeball, it can bulge outward, sometimes conically, giving the condition its name.

If your son is a candidate for corneal transplant surgery (not everyone is), he might benefit from the rational eyeball program in which persons donate their eyes at death for the purpose. A healthy cornea is transplanted to replace the defective one.

The matter of contact vs. regular lenses would be for the ophthalmologist to decide. This can vary depending on the particular case.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I was required to have a TB skin test. I am 30 years old, and this is my first such test. It turned out to be a positive reaction.

I had an x-ray taken and had to go through the health department. They showed no sign that I have it. Just what exactly did the positive reading mean? Can I come down with the TB or live for the rest of my life? Your answer can reassure me and the rest of my family. We don't understand what's going on.—Mrs. M. A.

The positive tuberculin skin test means that your system has been invaded by the TB organism at some time in the past. It does not necessarily mean you have an active disease.

If a person has been able to ward off the infection with nature's body defenses, there may have been no damage done. The x-ray would show no normal. Many are in this category, and live long and healthy lives.

Both the x-ray and the sputum tests have shown you are not active. But, to be on the safe side, a follow-up x-ray is required. It is a common procedure, and should be perfectly acceptable.

Mammoth Commodity Sales To Reds Held Significant

EDMONTON (CP) — Dr. Max E. Brunck, an agricultural economist at Cornell University, says the most significant food development in recent years was the mammoth sales of bargain-price commodities to Communist countries.

Dr. Brunck, who recently toured Canada sponsored by the Agricultural Institute of Canada, said the so-called Great Russian Grain Robbery of 1972—the largest single food deal in the world's history — involved United States government-held inventories and made political prices give way to market prices.

"The unanticipated entry of the Soviet Union into world food markets was dramatic because it was an abrupt reversal of previous Soviet policies and brought a significant new force to bear on international markets," he said.

Today, that force provides a market opportunity and a "component destabilizing influence over world food markets."

He added that the market disruption was caused less by the "state trading nations" than by their "almost political policies served to hold up stocks of accumulated surpluses in the first place."

Dr. Brunck said since Russia abandoned its first love — its capitalism to the United States" in the 1972 grain deal, it has made massive purchases of beef and butter from Australia and New Zealand, of butter and broiler from France, and beef from Argentina. Except for grain in 1973, the buys were made at rock-bottom prices.

Russia purchased 400 million pounds of butter from France at 18 cents a pound at a time when French consumers were paying anti-dictatorship-subsidized price approaching $1. There also was a purchase of 40,000 tons of beef from Australia "at prices but a fraction of what it costs to produce beef in the U.S.S.R."

Dr. Brunck said Australia was not at fault; rather it was that country's "traditional customers."

"All the traditional customers — and had the opportunity to supply their consumers with some cheap meat, instead, they opted to keep their own prices high and subsidize the Russian consumer."

Following repeated and unsuccessful efforts to reopen international markets, Australia had no place to turn except "to the undertaker."

Perhaps it is not too far-fetched to call the massive food sales to the centrally-planned economies a form of food philanthropy.

The net grain imports of 20 million tons by Russia put a shock wave in world prices but left Russia with lower prices in Russia have remained unchanged since 1963.

"Russian prices of bread and meat, which were higher than world levels 10 years ago, now are lower, thanks to international bargain shopping."

Dr. Brunck said state-operated trade deals in food products "dilute available supply on world markets.

"When international trade was in the hands of private dealers they could neither anticipate future needs or influence them and their sources of information were unreliable and fragmentary.

"In contrast, state traders not only have advance information on domestic production and world supplies, but, as of world stockpiles, they also possess an entirely different kind of purchasing power."

If they lack cash, they can negotiate credit and if it is the second credit they can employ "many forms of political leverage."

"The decisions made in the Kremlin can be expected to cast a continuing uncertainty on world food markets and only time will reveal the result."

The fall of the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh officially ended on April 17, 1975. It was that, devastated the country for half of its population. Sihanouk. When Jan 1st and his t'gnacrates ousted Prince Norodom Sihanouk from power in 1970, Cambodia was largely at peace. Sihanouk's crime was granting Cambodia and in 1965, Sihanouk broke relations with the United States, claiming involvement. In March 1970, while Sihanouk was visiting Moscow, his own legislature removed him out of office. On April 3, 1970, the United States provided the first installment of military aid to Cambodia that by 1975 would total more than $1 billion. (CP Newsmap)

THE ALPS — Prepared by the National Geographic Society.

National Geographic writers and photographers take you on a lighthearted tour of the Alpine country — you visit the country of William Tell, join the fun at St. Moritz and walk in positive ecstasy with wildflowers. You see French mountain fashion and sheep in pasture in the mountains, visit Mad Ludwig's most famous castle, journey through the Dolomites and spend Christmas with a farm family in Austria. Over 180 color photographs complement the text.

OPERATION NEPTUNE — Vice-Adm. E.R. Schofield.

"Operation Neptune" was the codename for the west side of the "Overlord" plan for the landings in Normandy in 1944. It was one of the greatest naval operations in history. In addition to disembarkation, shore bombardment and nine-creeping, it included such novel feats as the positioning of the Mulberry artificial harbor and the laying of the Chain Schofield was captain of H.M.S. Dryad and witnessed these events at first hand.

FOR ALL MANKIND — L.B. Taylor, Jr.

Man's operations in space are entering a new era. The Moon's taken us into a world where arrays of sophisticated machines shooting orbiting spacecraft continuously monitor the health of the world's food crops, the health of the world's forests, and the pollution of the world's rivers. We also learn more about the reusable space shuttle, construction of NASA's effort to lower the cost of space flight. Mr. Taylor was, formerly an astronaut officer with NASA and speaks with authority of America's space program of the 1970's and of the future.

SCRIPTS PEOPLE LIVE — Claude Steiner.

Claude Steiner was a collaborator of Eric Berne, whose book "What do you say after you say hello?" introduced transactional analysis to the reading public and became a bestseller. Steiner's book, Scripts People Live, goes a step further, indicating that everyone follows a life scenario, or at early age. He deals with Berne's life Scripts, the ways they originate in childhood and how they can be changed from losers to a life of fulfillment. He explains how to move toward liberation and describes a therapeutic approach to basic banal scripts.

THE COMIC-STRIPPED AMERICAN — Arthur A. Berger.

Comics are the collective dreams of the American imagination, says Berger, and reveal a great deal about their national character; why do so many people identify with Charlie Brown? What do Dagwood Bumstead say about our conception of the American husband? Mr. Berger, who is a professor of popular culture at San Francisco State College, thinks more attention should be given to analysis of the comics and what they tell us about ourselves.

Council Bans Mayor's Pipe

ST. ALBERT, Alta. (CP) — Mayor Robert Plain is no longer smoking at council meetings in this town north of Edmonton, after a motion by councillor Margaret Smith passed.

Council has voted to ban smoking during business sessions, a ban which will also apply to persons in the spectators' gallery.

The motion was presented by Councillor Smith, who sits next to Mayor Plain at council meetings and complained of watering eyes and peeling through a smokescreen.

When the measure was passed, Mayor Plain, one of the main puffers on council, reluctantly stowed his pipe.

Souvenirs Of Nazi For Sale

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP)—The photograph shows an elderly man introducing a shy little girl to a dark-haired man with a black moustache.

"Here, my leader, is my granddaughter," reads the inscription in German on the back of the photo.

The dark-haired man is Adolf Hitler and the photo is one of a series published by the pro-Nazi and World War German government.

Henry Lorenc, 31, a Brampton, Ont., warehousemen, sent 47 photos from the series. He has had them since he was a child of seven but now intends to sell them for as much as $10,000 to a collector of Nazi memorabilia.

Mr. Lorenc received the photos from a former German soldier who lived next door to his family in Hamilton. He kept the cards hoping they might become valuable.

Now he has decided to sell them, noting that Nazi relics have brought high prices recently.

His newspaper advertisement brought offers as high as $3,500, but Mr. Lorenc has been unable to verify the reliability of the calls. So he consulted a reporter who has written extensively on collectors of Nazi souvenirs and was told the price might go as high as $10,000.

Besides the military enthusiasts in purchasing the collection, Mr. Lorenc has received several inquiries from people interested in how he came by it, and does a master race.

He explains he was born in Poland the year before the war ended and still has relatives there and in Germany. But many others are dead as a result of Hitler's attempt to prove a master race.

Marchand Blasts Opposition For 'Small, Mean Questions'

OTTAWA (CP) — Transportation Minister Jean Marchand, who spends his days in the House when he confronted his deputy opposition critic, Tommy Douglas, yesterday night for the continued criticism of the way he runs his department.

"All we hear are small and mean questions, coming from across the floor of the Commons," said the 57-year-old minister, who is 1972-73 transport critic for the New Democratic party.

His outburst came over the end of two full days of detailed questioning about the operation of transport matters. It appeared that he was not alone in getting the rough end of the exchanges between the transportation minister and the transportation critic, as which he was.

Provinces Assail Pelletier

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial communications ministers are urging today for the federal response to their blanket claims for power over all communications within their borders.

They fit into Gerard Pelletier, the federal minister, Tuesday at the opening of a two-day federal-provincial conference on communications.

They said he has been consistently ignoring their complaints and frustrating provincial aspirations in communications by proceeding ahead unilaterally with federal policies.

But at the end of the day they were mollified somewhat by Mr. Pelletier's patience and expressed interest in their views.

"I think it went much better than we had anticipated," said John Rhodes, Ontario communications minister.

Jean-Paul L'Allier of Quebec said the conference had made Mr. Pelletier more sensitive to provincial viewpoints and had provided him with more information.

And Mr. Pelletier acknowledged it was the first real exchange of views in the three years since the last conference and he said it will not be until tonight that the ministers have whether they can continue negotiations profitably.

The provinces are challenging federal-federal primacy in further communications policy with three demands they want:

—Control over cable distribution systems, including cable television and other forms of interactive and other business and computer traffic.

—Control of common carriers such as telephone and telecommunications companies operating within their borders.

—Control of program content and licensing of broadcasting services within the province.

They remain in agreement of the CRC in cable systems, however, and, two days ago, Ontario and Quebec joined hands if they can. Bill CRC and the CTV network, which is closed in spring.

And CNCP Telecommunications, the Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Corp. and Telesat Canada, the satellite communications company, would remain in federal hands for the same reason.

Tuesday's session was given over to hearing for the provinces. The federal response was to be heard today.

OTTAWA (CP) — Airport workers have been promised through arbitration pay increases of 17 per cent in the first year and 21 per cent in the second year of a two-year working agreement.

The award by the LAB member of the Public Service Alliance also contains a system of national pay rates, taking the side of union officers in a dispute over the issue.

"It is our intention to keep the advantages the farmers have now," Mr. Marchand told the House Tuesday, "we are ready to meet with the farmers."

He said his new transportation policy will assure farmers benefits according to formula from the Crowsnest agreement will be retained, a view that Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board, has voiced frequently.

But Lorne Nystrom (NDP-Yorkton-Melville) was still dissatisfied, saying the future of the agreement nuclear and if the government has any plans, it should announce the details.

Mr. Nystrom and Justice minister Lang, removed as a member of the committee to be chaired by the east cabinet minister, has been attacked by farmers' matters which are under his jurisdiction, and he urged Mr. Marchand to "stop his hand" for meddling.

Mr. Marchand said in a recent speech by Mr. Lang in Edmonton, that he had the impression it considering alternatives to the Crowsnest agreement, which affects the wheat board directly and farmers indirectly.

Mr. Marchand told Mr. Nystrom that if any decision is made, it will be made by a native cabinet on its recommendation "and nobody else."

Haitian Priest Exposes Rackets

MONTREAL (CP) — A Haitian Roman Catholic priest told the special joint committee of parliament on immigration policy Tuesday of employment rackets which victimize skilled labor coming to Canada from Third World countries.

Father Paul Dejean of the Christian Community of Haitians was critical of the requirement that workers have prearranged employment before being admitted on temporary work visas.

Although working conditions were in Haiti, he said, immigrants offer cheaper labor than Canadians and they are allowed to work for only one employer because terms of their work visa.

"This is an desirable situation," he told the joint Senate-Commons committee, which was sitting for the second of three days of hearings here before moving to other parts of the country.

Father Dejean, who has been in Canada since 1971, said immigrants should not be blamed for such problems as when unemployed, and which could happen, regardless of the cause.

He added that there were problems with some organizations to be considered in decisions to allow outside religious jobs Canada while saying we to others. Canada seemed to view his religious refugees only there ultimate refugees only there ultimate refugees only there not a political refugee.

Marines Rescue Ship and Crew

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The last remaining United States Marines on the Cambodian island of Koh Tang were evacuated today following the rescue of the American merchant ship Mayaguez, and its crew of 40, a White House source reported.

The marines were hampered by enemy fire today in their withdrawal.

Two marines were killed and at least eight others wounded in the helicopter assault against Koh Tang, an island about 34 miles from the Cambodian mainland, Pentagon reports show.

U.S. fighter planes and navy destroyers continued attacks on the island to cover the helicopter evacuation of the marines.

About 10 hours before, some 180 marines recovered the U.S. merchant vessel Mayaguez and began the helicopter assault against the island.

President Ford in a brief post-midnight broadcast said he had ordered the attack "for the purpose of rescuing the crew and ship which had been illegally seized by Cambodian forces."

"I have now received information that the vessel has been recovered intact and the crew has been taken from it," Ford said.

About four hours later, Defense Secretary James Schlesinger said some Americans were killed in the military action but gave no figures. Pentagon sources, however, said some firmed reports showed two Americans — K-a and eight wounded.

Two helicopters were reported lost in the operation.

The defense department said three Cambodian gunboats were sunk Wednesday but there was no word of later Cambodian losses.

The Cambodian ship surrendered five Thais, the Bangkok government said today. The seven crewmen who had been captured by the Khmer Rouge were picked up in the Gulf of Thailand.

Cambodia of the operation and tension between the U.S. and Thailand, which allowed the use of its territory and in the operation were loaded before head of an American base in Thailand without its permission. The Thai foreign minister told the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok had protest its members of the contingent still in the country would be withdrawn as soon as possible and that the Thai unit had participated, reported in U.S. planes based in Thailand participated in the attack.

Cambodian gunboats captured the 10,000-ton Mayaguez Monday, about 60 miles off the mainland and land but within about eight miles of the small island of Koh Tang, which Communists claim. The ship, owned by a Delaware company, was bound from Hong Kong to Thailand with a mixed cargo of civilian and military freight.

The ship lay at anchor off Koh Tang while the U.S. government officials made repeated demands for its release. U.S. warplanes had a constant watch on it, and the aircraft carrier Coral Sea and other units of the U.S. 7th Fleet steamed toward the Gulf of Thailand.

Shortly after eight Thursday morning Cambodian time—the White House reported—the marines were landing on Koh Tang and U.S. fighter-bomber bombing airfields on the mainland of Cambodia. Earlier it was reported on the island, but the marines were aboard the Mayaguez and found it empty.

The Pentagon said that as the assault continued, a Cambodian boat flying a white flag approached the U.S. destroyer Wilson and fired over all at crewmen and the Thai.

Might Rewarded

TORONTO (CP) — Post-master-General Bryce MacMurchy of the Canadian Post Office in an industrial workplace is generating hostility between postal workers and management that may "rip the country apart."

"What the public owe is that night when goes home part. We no longer reward productivity, we reward a force. We give our bigest reward, not to those who do the most work, but to those who can do as the least harm."

Goon Squads Said Enforcing Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Almost all Montreal construction sites were shut down for a second Wednesday amid reports that goon squads were operating in parts of the city.

The Quebec Federation of Labor said Wednesday it expected most of the workers, was to return to a day-long emergency session today to discuss when to. President Louis Laberge called the "moment of truth" for Quebec construction.

The men are protesting recommendations of the Cliche commission report on construction unions and the provincial government's follow-up.

Florent Aniotte, president of the Montreal Construction Union, part of the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), said Wednesday the "union establishment" of the rival QFL had sent out men to force his members off the job.

Another CNTU official, Michel Bourdon, said workers were not being consulted before the walkouts but "they prefer leaving their jobs rather than get into trouble."

A QFL spokesman denied the CNTU statements. He said the workers were walking out voluntarily to protest the proposed legislation, which would bring Quebec unions under government control.

Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said police patrols in construction sites have been stepped up and special anti riot squads are on standby in the event of further labor violence.

In Ottawa Wednesday, Prime Minister Trudeau said Premier Robert Bourassa "is taking the right course" in pushing ahead legislation through the national assembly, even if it threatens the Olympic Games.

He told reporters that "social order is more important" than the Games.

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says traces of cancer-causing vinyl chloride have been found in some plastic food containers.

The newspaper says there is no medical evidence that such traces in food are harmful to health and few food products are packaged in such containers—some examples being salad or cooking oils and peanut butter.

Quebec Assembly Rushes Two Bills

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec national assembly, acting on recommendations in the Cliche commission report on violence in the construction industry, pushed through second reading Wednesday night of a bill which would place four Montreal unions under trusteeship.

Immediately after the vote, which came despite opposition and minor demands for a delay, debate began on the second reading of another bill which would bar individuals with criminal records from holding union office.

The Parti Quebecois, the official opposition, proposed unsuccessfully that debate be suspended on the trusteeship bill for 30 days.

Claude Charron (PQ—Labelle), citing passages from the Cliche commission report, blasted the Liberal government for "supplying sub hearts to the QFL."

"Why can the proposed trusteeship work when all we are doing is replacing the leaders of all four parties in the national assembly subject to a three-month moratorium on the trusteeship legislation. The Premier said that it is a waste to do its own hour-long bill, after which it would be carefully. I'm amazed by its efforts before a parliamentary committee."

Bell Canada was the brunt of unhealthy remarks Wednesday due to misprints in the 1975 telephone directory for Belleville, Picton, Trenton and vicinity which affect the Hastings and Prince Edward County Health Unit.

Cynthia R. Cotton, business administrator and secretary-treasurer, told the county board of health meeting a conditional approval given the family planning listing in the telephone directory for Trenton Fire Department.

He said the correct number should be the same as the health unit switchboard — 968-6691.

Mr. Cotton added the telephone company did not delete the listing for former secretary-treasurer Carl Bateman, although its removal had been requested.

He related the health unit asked for family planning to be placed under "" in the yellow pages of the directory, but only for the first one together would turn in.

Cynthia, the company explained it has its own system for deciding which listings will be to be included under marriage counselling.

Mr. Cotton said the company indicated it would prefer to have a separate listing for a reference to marriage counselling and the use of family planning, the new directory.

Mrs. Peggy Foster, board member for Prince Edward County commented, "You would think with all the money we're paying out, we shouldn't have to talk about young members."

Court Told Kickback Was Made

HAMILTON (CP) — Kenneth Elliot, one of two men charged in connection with alleged irregularities surrounding dredging contracts in Hamilton harbour, was asked to a kickback scheme Wednesday by the first prosecution witness in the Ontario Supreme Court trial.

Robert A. Henderson, president of Hamilton Construction Equipment Rentals Ltd., testified that he added 5 per cent to his usual rental charges and gave the extra money to Elliot during a 1974 harbor project.

Elliot, 42, a former harbor commissioner and Robert Fisher, 61, a Hamilton businessman, are charged with six counts of conspiracy, fraud and receiving in a series of alleged kickbacks and payoffs on dredging and construction.

Pinch-hitting Teacup Reader Surprises Herself

Within each of us is the desire to see what lies ahead of us, and the ability to see what lies ahead.

The Belleville Downtown Association Wednesday held a special presentation of Spring Thing — a downtown shopping promotion — in which the shopper a chance to sit down to a cup of tea, make a donation to Belleville's Chaddie House and, through the leaves, have a fortune-teller look into the future.

The tea leaf reading display was one of Murray's Food Store — in strictly an at-home setting.

Trenton May Hire Students To Operate Federal Dock

TRENTON — Town officials are negotiating this week with two students in the hope of arranging an operator for the federal government dock in Trenton.

Operation of the dock was to begin Wednesday but a tender call earlier this year failed to draw anyone interested in taking over operation on the town's behalf.

Town clerk Aubrey Sharp said Wednesday that negotiations with the two students prove fruitful, then shortly.

He said water and power have been turned on at the dock but no one now is manning the facility.

The town has had trouble getting a dock operator this year. It approached the Chamber of Commerce, but the group, while neither accepting nor declining the offer, put the matter before council's investigation of docking charges to be levied at the facility.

Chamber officials, who operated the dock for three years several years ago, said they worried over the possibility of losing money in its operation. Already plagued by deficits, the chamber said it is hesitant to take on the dock this year.

Mr. Sharp said fees will be charged boaters for docking in Trenton. As with town dock operation, the wharfage was to be charged Wednesday, the opening day of the navigation season on the Trent Waterway.

Wharfage, according to a federal environment ministry official, will be levied at two cents a foot for a 24-hour day. Minimum charge per boat will be 20 cents.

The government spokesman said wharfage should have been charged beginning yesterday, May 14. He acknowledged that the unofficial regulation of wharfage but Lifsing has been a wrinkle into collection of fees.

He said once official notice has been received by the small craft harbors branch of Mr. Lifsing's resignation the department will go to Trenton town officials for names of likely candidates for the post.

The spokesman, who wished his name not to be disclosed, said a potential candidate for the post has already been found. As soon as a new harbmaster is appointed, wharfage will be levied at the dock.

Wharfage at the Trenton dock will be levied for the first time this year under a new government policy to push for a return for funds spent on various facilities across Canada.

Start on the Season

Parks Canada employees Jack Hanna left and lockmaster Reg Bakey put the paint brush to metal plates that cover Lock Two gate-opening mechanism Wednesday in preparation for an influx of boaters on the Trent Waterway this summer. Wednesday the first day of the navigation season, two American boats used the lock, one from Florida and another from Michigan.

BLOOMFIELD — The Prince Edward County Board of Education has met with Ameliasburg parents regarding the transfer of Kente School principal Eugene Bright, but no decision has been reached as yet by trustees.

Economic Climate Limiting Number of Student Jobs

By AL ZABAS

Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Visits to local industries by Canada Manpower's student placement officer have not turned up an encouraging picture for students seeking jobs in Trenton this summer.

Manpower officer Sandy McDonald says industries are reporting a lower production rate in 1978 over last year and layoffs of regular employees.

The officer says, he can't hire students until the regular help is hired back. One large local company has said "there's not a chance" of the employment picture improving.

In an interview this week Mr. McDonald, said requests from local companies for student help have been slow in April, the last month for which figures are available.

He said placement of students has also been slow, but in May, he expects an improvement and I'm not saying that just to build up a student's hopes."

Last month, 641 students, the majority (271) male, registered for job openings at Manpower in Trenton offices. Only 36 were placed in jobs and nine opening remained.

Mr. Mcnald, a recent Queen's University graduate, attributed slow placement to the time of year and the state of the economy.

Manpower staff will officially open separate offices to handle student job seekers Friday on Division St. From the new office, the three-member staff will aim a three-pronged attack on finding high school and post-secondary students jobs.

Mr. McDonald said the office will continue its search for jobs as well as aid students in finding work through placements and counselling.

Only half of all available job vacancies are listed with Manpower, he says. As a result, a student must take the initiative and ferret out jobs himself.

Part of his job, he says, is in counselling students in the methods of approaching a potential employer.

"A lot of them (younger students) don't understand how to find a job," he says.

Blue jeans are out when applying for an office job, as are slacks when applying for a construction job. Definitely don't go anywhere in a group. Go alone, show independence, he says.

You have to sell yourself and that involves more than simply asking for a summer job. Ask for an application. Subsequently, "keep in touch, but don't bother them." Regular checks with a potential employer must be made to show your interest.

Mr. McDonald tells students to register and keep in touch with student Manpower offices. But canvassing companies not registered with Manpower is a must. "They're doubling their chances of working this summer."

Job Finding Jobs

Canada Manpower student placement officer Sandy McDonald talks over job prospects for students in Trenton this summer, one that he says has begun with few bright spots on the job horizon. The Manpower officer and a two-member staff will be opening special offices on Division St., Friday to handle registrations by students seeking summer jobs.

West Germany Canada's Closest Ally in European Economic Community

By JOHN HAY

BONN (CP) — Thirty years after VE Day, West Germany is Canada's mightiest ally in its quest for closer relations with the European Economic Community (EEC).

Here, as in other European capitals, Canadian embassies have been putting the case for closer ties between Canada and the EEC through "a contractual link."

But the German government has hardly needed Canadian persuasion to find reasons for promoting closer connections with Canada.

—Its industry and consumers are the countries biggest customers for Canadian exports, especially raw materials, and Bonn government is all for an EEC-Canada agreement that would provide surer access to those resources.

—The whole point of Germany's foreign policy since has been to establish a new, more stable balance of power in Europe. German officials say Canada's political presence is important even if its military presence is trivial.

Recent conversations in this capital suggest that the Germans are also alarmed by Canada's routine re-reaching for Europe.

"It's sympathetic with Prime Minister Trudeau when he talks of a comfortable relationship with the United States," said one diplomat. Trudeau, during his visit two months ago, talked at length about Canadian interests differing from Washington's.

"He got the message through to us, and we'll have that in mind when we talk about relations between Canada and the EEC.

"We understand why you want closer ties with the United States, and we'll help as far as possible, but this can't be an action against the United States—or appear to be."

But what the Germans have met on their minds when they talk about Canada is a frustration to which they hope any contractual link between Canada and the EEC—still being discussed in Brussels and Ottawa—will ensure long-term access.

One senior official said he has never raised the issue formally because "everybody is a little sensitive about access to raw materials, and Germany and Canadians are no exception."

But the research Canadian diplomats agree, help half the work. Europeans' interest in otherwise uneventful Canadian relations.

"They pay more attention to us now the way they pay more attention to the Iranians," said one embassy man.

The Brussels, the people who study and work closely with the EEC, say the agreement would serve two purposes:

—By going beyond the usual limits of trade agreements into such areas as investment and commercial contracts, the link would enlarge the EEC's competence, and increase its powers in relation to its nine members.

—The process of negotiating the agreement, and later consultations under its provisions, would force Canada to hold the attention of an EEC bureaucracy easily distracted and often inert.

Like the farmer who starts work by clobbering his mule with a fence rail, it takes a matter of getting the EEC's attention.

Strange Hand Show

A show of hands just doesn't seem to be good enough.

The Intelligencer reporter covering city council's annual budget session swears he only saw one dissenter — Ald. Brian Knudsen, when a proposed $1,000 increase in a councillor's annual $3,000 honorarium was moved.

At least two other councillors — Aldermen Meeks and Keegan — concur. They don't recall other "nay" hands being risen.

A telephone call by councillor Wally Dever started things rolling. Ald. Dever claimed he voted against the proposed increase.

Now that what had appeared to be a 9-1 vote was 8-2, our staff decided to conduct their own "show of hands."

The results were surprising, to say the least.

Ald. Jack Ireland said he voted against the raise. Ald. Paul Russell, who arrived late for the vote, said he "probably wouldn't have supported it."

Ald. Joe Cox, after some prodding, said he voted FOR the increase, but his first impulse was to say: "Since it was not a recorded vote, I don't think I should express myself."

Apparently, when city council votes on an issue, and that vote is not recorded, it is up to the chairman to decide whether aldermen are raising their hands for or against, swatting flies, or scratching their heads.

Arguing the extra $1,000 was nothing for council to be ashamed of — the job involves hours of work.

But if such reticence appears to be the case in what members of council might feel to be "touchy" issues, recorded votes — naming who voted for and against a question, — should be universally mandatory. The public deserves to know how someone they elected votes on any issue.

There is another solution for special occasions such as cropped up last Friday.

Some 50 Ontario municipalities with populations of 50,000 or less Saturday endorsed a motion to amend existing legislation so that municipal councillors and school board trustees can not set their own salaries.

The resolution, passed at the annual convention of the Organization of Small Urban Municipalities, requested that salaries for municipal councillors and school trustees be set by the outgoing council or school board before civic elections.

It might not even be a bad idea for members of parliament!

In any event, Belleville councillors will get another chance to register opinions of their proposed $1,000 raise at their next meeting May 26, when the question will be put to them in bylaw form.

We hope the motion is approved, but with less trepidation on the part of our councillors.

Ball Skeptics Changing Tune

A great many skeptics may now be scrambling for season's tickets after the first four exhibition games played by Belleville's new entry in the Ontario Football League.

After splitting a doubleheader with defending Canadian champion Ottawa Tony's, the McDonald's beat and tied Newmarket, last year's OFL east division pennant winners, the following day.

The Belleville team plays 27 of their 54 scheduled games at home, and after their impressive pre-season showing, we've got a few words of encouragement for the McDonald's: "You deserve a break today..."

Police Put Eggs In Driver's Seat

Belleville OPP, community service officers Don Kunyk and Brian Turner are meeting with great success in a little demonstration they dreamed up to stress the importance of wearing seat belts.

Placing an unstrapped egg in a car, the officers propel it into a wall, revealing the egg to be out and shattering. A strapped-in egg escapes with nothing more than the odd crack.

Now if only they could come up with a way to get a dozen eggs home intact from the supermarket on grocery day!

Tories Use Business Techniques

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Corporatism has been the theme of the government since the Ontario Arts days.

The former premier introduced the techniques of big business to provincial politics, carefully contrived and elaborately management-managery, and meetings, lots of meetings.

You can get arguments as to whether this has worked. The greatest one is that politics is essentially a personal operation while corporatism is mechanical and lifeless.

However, arguments aside, we are about to see the biggest corporate effort to date in the PC's election machine.

The organization has been announced and it shapes up like something you might expect from General Motors.

Former provincial treasurer John White is to be chairman of the board, Agriculture Minister Bill Stewart and amateur politician Hugh Macaulay are to be co-presidents, and from there go down the line with cabinet committees, caucus committees, supporters committees and what have you. It might work.

As one of those who believes that politics is different because it is very personal I believe the chances are that it won't.

The best election campaign I have seen was here run from a few hip pockets.

The most notable of these, of course, were the three campaigns during the Frost era ('59, '63 and '67).

To the modern graduates of business administration courses at Harvard Business School these would have been hick operations.

There really were only two people involved — the premier and chief organizer Alec Mackenzie.

But they operated beautifully. Frost decided and led the party. Mackenzie organized around him and he set the pace. In '51 he had built a Tory policy was to ignore flamboyant Liberal Leader Walter Thomson and he did. He didn't mention his name once.

Mackenzie selected the candidates and the organizers and kept a drawer full of title bills which he handed out as needed.

The only organization meetings were in the back of Frost's car as he drove from the Royal York to his office.

It may have been hick, but it worked. Ontario has never seen such majorities.

Simcoe Memorial Foundation Wants to Create Sense of History

By PETER LESNIAK

Toronto Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — A small, determined band of history buffs here is attempting to make the name of Ontario's first lieutenant-governor a household word and to give the people of the province a keener sense of their history.

Although the John Graves Simcoe Memorial Foundation only claims a mere 30 members all are dedicated to perpetuating the memory of the man who believe contributed more than any other toward shaping early Upper Canada into the peaceful and prosperous Ontario.

It was Simcoe, they say, who established our system of law and order and present parliamentary government principles. It was also Simcoe who mapped and surveyed most of southern Ontario and encouraged pioneer settlers here through land grants and financial assistance.

"We think he's a pretty important guy," says V.R. Kerkham, the foundation's secretary-treasurer. "He went his memory preserved particularly for the new Canadian youngsters, many of whom have never heard of him."

Mr. Kerkhov is the foundation's only full-time employee and receives what he calls "a small honorarium" for his services. He works from a small office provided by the ministry of culture and recreation. He's a retired elevator company executive and has been involved with the foundation for nearly three years.

The foundation's founder is Norman Long, a retired Toronto developer. Mr. Long was instrumental in convincing the Ontario government into accepting Simcoe's family estate in England.

Simcoe's foundation was established in 1965 by an incorporating act with the purpose of maintaining the property as a historic site.

The estate includes about an acre and a half of land and a small chapel in which Simcoe, his wife and five children are buried.

"As we become more Canadian — less British and less American — how are we going to feel patriotic if we don't know at least some of the historical background of our country?" Mr. Long asked. "We forget that it will be the young who will soon have the destiny of the country in their hands. And how will they know how to guide it if they don't have this sense of history?"

Up to now the foundation has widely disseminated information about Simcoe and his accomplishments, mainly through the schools, in many parts of the province. But, this year it has more ambitious plans.

The Ontario legislature has recently been asked to declare the first Monday in August, now known as Civic Holiday, Simcoe Day. Also a large equestrian statue of Simcoe has been commissioned.

Submissions have been made to have Simcoe's effigy engraved on the silver dollar and printed on an issue of postage stamps too.

The costs of such promotions, combined with the growing costs of maintaining the English estate have created a financial hole for the foundation.

In the past, personal contributions by the membership sufficed, but now the provincial government has been asked to assume a greater financial responsibility.

The government's contributions to date have been "nominal" according to Mr. Long. Besides an original grant of $2,000 "only spasmodic contributions in recent years" have come from this source, he said.

Through the efforts of the foundation and other historical societies interest in Simcoe's name has already been liberally stamped across much of Ontario.

Most communities can at least name streets after Simcoe and this historic personage. Also a county, a lake, and a county have also been indelibly stamped with his name.

"But," Mr. Long warns, "these names can lose their significance unless people are aware of the background of Simcoe and his contributions."

Simcoe died in Exeter, England at the age of 54, 18 years after returning from Canada.

Because of the work of the foundation a Canadian flag now flutters over Simcoe's birthplace, reminding visitors of the important contribution he made to the country.

Members Dissatisfied With Press about Raise

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTAWA (CP) — Many MPs are angry about the way their recent salary debate, leading to a 23 1-3 increase, was handled by the press.

"What was really outrageous," says J. Angus MacLean (PC—Malpeque) was the constant reference to the $9,000 tax-free expense allowance, raised to $10,000—as though it were just part of our income.

"In fact, I spend more than this in expenses."

When Environment Minister Jeanne Sauvé cancelled a several-provincial signing ceremony in Burlington, Ont., a reporter called the department's information branch for more information.

"Can you tell me what agreement Madame Sauvé planned to sign," he asked the receptionist who answered.

"Would you give me Madame Sauvé's home number?" she replied. "I can't find the name in the directory."

Only a government department—this time environment—could coin a phrase to cover such things as abandoned cars, unused pits, abandoned buildings, garbage disposal and workers-over lumber sites.

They all come under the neat heading of "residuals of a service in use."

But this still doesn't beat "national amenity map" for gritty,

South Vietnamese Had Air Power, Lost Land Battle

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

How did Hanoi and the Viet Cong do it, who in Vietnam? The post-mortems have only begun and will be continued in the U.S. Armed Forces for years to come.

We have heard a good deal about the superior ideology of the Communist Chinese societies and the fighting qualities of the peasant soldier in his black pajama outfits of the Viet Cong, and pale green uniforms and Sanders-of-the-River style pith helmets of the North Vietnamese, their hard guns and little size.

The Russian or Chinese versions of the famous AK 47 automatic rifle, the pride and joy of the Palestinian guerrillas and to a lesser degree of the Fidel Castro's militia, was the conquering weapon, applied where tanks and artillery in the hands of the South Vietnamese failed.

The latter is pure bunkum, is not true and never was. The ideology was carried in the knapsacks of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong who ultimately manned regiments, (as the Russians call tank and artillery groups), of the best equipment supplied in the hundreds of (tanks) and thousands (artillery) by the U.S.S.R.

The South Vietnamese, in spite of their superior air power, were overwhelmed at the last by superior tanks and artillery on land.

And it is dramatic irony of the harshest kind that the Russians who have not fought in battle since World War Two, (compared to the American forces with their Korean and Vietnam — and fighting experience), transferred their World War Two tank and artillery knowhow to the communist side in Vietnam which finally won.

Tanks did not play a major part in North Vietnam's military strategy until the end of the official war phase. It was supposed to have concluded with Paris Peace Accords of 1973.

We must investigate the slow but relentless movement of Russian and Chinese war material into the war zones which took place between the so-called peace and the final offensives of this spring to understand why North Vietnam firepower at the end came from the last Soviet tanks and guns from the over-popularized AK of automatic rifle fame.

Note too that as far as North Vietnam was concerned air power use was almost pre-exist and the North Vietnamese Air Force is armed with about 80 superb Russian MiG 21s, faster than the U.S. built F-5s, the backbone of the much-heralded South Vietnam Air Force.

At the end it could not fight properly either, not because it couldn't, but because its bases were wiped out by the same mobile tank forces from above.

All of which reminds us of the hard line still taken by former American supreme commander Gen. Westmoreland who continue to say the way to have won was a massive and prolonged bombing of North Vietnam's ports especially Haiphong into which Soviet and East European ships were moving much of the armor and artillery later used in battle in the south.

These are failures in strategy the U.S. Armed Forces will ruminate over for years, given the fact the last surviving Vietnam veteran will not have retired from active service until around 1999.

Canadians Rarely Buy Any Books

Brantford Expositor

When did you last buy a book? The question is not as idle one. Canada's book publishers say 81 per cent of Canadians never buy a book.

If this figure is correct — and we are not noted as a nation of readers — this means that some 14 million persons aged 15 and over do not patronize book-stores — at least for books. Deduct Canada's five million adult functional illiterates who read at grade eight level or below, and we presumably have nine million literates of whom fewer than one million buy books. Of course; many Canadians read books borrowed from libraries; and who can blame them for not buying books at their present prices.

On the practical level there is the recent disheartening experience of Jack McClelland, one of Canada's best-known publishers. He stood at a street corner in Canadian Saskatoon trying to give away new paperbacks. But two out of three passers-by refused to take a gift most of them saying, "I don't read books."

GLEANINGS FROM THE FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Spring seeding was approximately 75 per cent completed in the Bay of Quinte district as of last weekend, according to the weekly report of the Ontario department of agriculture. Hay and pastures have developed fairly well. Many apple orchards are in the pink stage and cherries are in full bloom. Most raspberry plantations in Prince Edward are being spraying this year. In Hastings county extensively high winds and cool temperatures have caused concern for farmers with hay and alfalfa above the ground.

Groundwork for a new social service organization to be known as the Kiwanis Fresh Air Fund was laid at a special organizational meeting of members of the city service clubs. The purpose of the new organization is to provide a few fortunate boys and girls at the Kiwanis summer camping being operated at Robin Lake.

40 YEARS AGO

Although seasonal work at the present time has resulted in reduction of the number of unemployed in the city, little improvement in the number of those on the city relief list is noted in the office of the Belleville Relief Bureau. It was stated that 1,000 of among the recent jobs that have returned some men to work are maintenance gangs on the Canadian National railway. It is expected that about 75 men of this city will be given work on the railway rehabilating of the tracks east of the city.

Application forms for shop licenses are expected to be proposed to pass the new 44 hour week received today by O.T.A. Inspector Ralphs, inspector for Prince Edward and the southern part of Hastings. # Pipes from Horns, Maple Unique

BANCROFT — A desire and a talent for carving and whittling wood has taken local resident Paul Ives into the field of creating intricate and unique pipes out of natural materials.

Paul, who lives with his wife Linda and five children in a house on the Centre Road, off Highway 509 about 4 miles east of Bancroft, has been involved in making the pipes from maple wood and animal horns for a long time he says. "I've always liked to whittle."

The pipes, which are usually a combination of the two materials, are not designed for use at work or driving a car because they are elaborately large.

"I like to work on maple," said Paul. "It looks nice and easy to work in but when Nature really does all the work in making the bowls, I just finish them up."

The finishing up process is long and involved and takes 15-16 hours of hard work for Paul to complete one pipe.

This time doesn't include the weeks that are required for the bowls and wood to season before he can work on them.

"I'm completely content when I am working on things with my hands," said Paul. "It's a completely absorbing thing that really consoles me out."

Paul is not involved in the carving of anything and future yet." I like to do the pipes and I carve them until they really feel right in my hand. I really like the idea that people are going to be holding them."

The Ives have hopeful plans for a type of development on their 25-acre piece of land.

"Linda's real talent is cooking and food preparation," said Paul, "Someday we'd like to have a small restaurant in a dome with a pipe shop underneath."

If the dream materializes as well as the other hopes that the Ives have had in the past it will only be a matter of time until it's reality.

Pipe Person

Maple wood burls, deer and moose antlers are the raw materials for handcarved pipes created by Paul Ives. Paul and his wife hope to combine their talents in a restaurant and pipe shop on their 25-acre property on Highway 509 east of Bancroft.

Ready to Go

A world of fantasy and make-believe awaits North Hastings youngsters when the local production of Long and Short Division opens at Our Lady of Mercy School Friday night. The play is presented by the Pandora's Box Drama Troupe.

North Hastings Fire Danger Said Acute

BANCROFT — With the yearly influx of campers and cottagers on their way to the North Hastings, Algonquin area for the first long summer weekend of 1975, the local office of the Ministry of Natural Resources is expressing a real concern for the possibility of bush and forest fires in the area.

Along with the rest of east central Ontario, North Hastings has not received any major rain or precipitation for the last three weeks.

According to Weldon Rutledge of the local office, all burning permits granted by the office have been cancelled, including those for incineration.

"The situation is really critical at the moment," said Mr. Rutledge, "and unless we get some rain, it's going to be even worse for the weekend."

During the first three weeks of May, local fire wardens and ministry employees have fought 30 fires which have consumed about 110 acres of land.

The Wicklow fire started from the use of a barbecue.

"The dryness is so baked into the ground now that we have to use the power pumps," said Mr. Rutledge. "If the fire is in the long grass, the firefighters can't even lay hose fast enough to catch up with it."

At the moment, winds at 15-20 miles an hour in the North Hastings area are contributing to the situation by whipping the fires along.

Not only the ministry officials are concerned about the fire problem.

Although a fire permit is not needed for the lighting of a campfire for heat or food, Ted Wallis of the Sport Beach Camp has posted his place as being out of bounds for any fires at all.

According to Mr. Wallis, when the situation is as critical as it is at the moment, there is no way that he is going to jeopardize his business.

Teachers Vote Next Thursday

Judie Carty, Hastings Division president of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF), will seek re-election at the federation's annual division meeting May 22 at Centre Hastings Secondary School at Madoc.

Rose Allan, a Bayside Secondary School teacher, has placed his name in standing for the first vice-president. To date no teacher has been nominated or submitted his or her name for third vice-president.

Also Bayside teacher Paul McAllister will seek election for secretary while Ian Davidson, a North Hastings teacher, will run for treasurer. Further nominations are to be submitted to Mr. Allan at Bayside prior to the meeting.

Get the Blanket from the Bedroom, Let Your Imagination Do the Rest

When you first hear it, you can hardly believe it.

There is a woman in female wear giving someone to "get the blanket from the bedroom" in order to take it to some secluded spot for romantic purposes.

Of course, it turns out that it's all on the up and up. She's shaping to her husband, hoping to bring back the excitement of their early courting days. Now bogged down in middle age, the wife remembers that romantic days of their youth, they can bring back the thrill of it all.

Despite jokes a shade too explicit for some listeners, "Blanket on the Ground" sung by Billie Jo Spears has been number one on CBMB charts and is still in the top ten.

There are probably scores of you family-laden wives out there who have at least contemplated following the song's suggestion. And can't you just imagine what might happen?

First of all, before you even invite your husband, you'll have to find a which blanket. The new cellulose, synthetic ones would get grass stuck in all those little holes. The woolies ones are too good for risk getting dirty, and the old car rug where it all started has been in the dog's box for ten years.

So you take one off the kids' bed, and suggest to your husband that you drive out to that park a few miles from town where you used to go. You know, it hasn't been out that way in years, and it kind of strikes his fancy too.

You call for a sitter and can only get the least reliable teen-ager in the street, who charges you double because it's Sunday afternoon and she has a lot of homework to do. The kids go crazy because you won't tell them where you're going, you won't take them with you, and they decide this sitter is really a creep.

By the time you've got the driveway, they're in tears, your husband has lost his temper, and you're a wreck, suddenly remembering you didn't get dolled up with perfume the way you'd meant to.

But you figure this a supposed to be a casual adventure, and you settle back until your husband, stubborn as usual, is convinced he knows exactly where to go and heads up concession road five instead of six. Eventually you get on the right sideroad, and see a sign pointing down to the river in the direction you're headed.

You two are looking for the bird willow with the camouflaging branches you used to lie under. But the sign is for everybody else who might be looking for "Model Homes Open House." You glance at your husband. He looks annoyed.

You keep on driving but screech to a halt when a real estate agent emerges from the bushes. "Welcome to Willowbank Acres!" he booms in the car window and hands you a brochure.

So you drive on to the parking lot — you can hardly turn back now — and get out, to mingle with the crowd looking at the dozen new homes on the crescent curving out from YOUR willow. You try to look as if you've come to view homes too, which is pretty difficult when you're feeling a little huffy on a spring afternoon with a bedroom blanket draped over your arm.

Happily, your husband remembers a path down to the river from the development, and he says he knows of some pretty nice spots over the wooded hill a little way off. You start wondering why you've never been there, and when had he been, and with whom? But you decide to keep quiet, and follow him through a wild raspberry patch, getting scratched, ripped and tangled in your pursuit of passion.

However, on the other side of the hill you come up against an unsightly and unofficial dump, stinking to high heaven.

By now, you're really determined to get that blanket on the ground and have done with it. You trek through the undergrowth till the stench is behind you, and then you look see the perfect spot at the same time — a little hollow in among some cedars.

You half-run, he's dragging the blanket along and quickly spread it out. I try to look seductive with a cloud of mosquitoes swarming around your head. You begin to unbutton your blouse. Your husband bends down, and suddenly produces a pin.

It's put his back out again, and he collapses on the blanket with a sigh. You just know this would happen, and you lie down too, and feel a tear trickle out the corner of your eye.

And then you start to chuckle, and so does he, and soon you're laughing so hard you both can barely breathe. For you're remembering that very first time you put the blanket on the ground with the same end in mind . . . total disaster!

So you eventually get home well after dark, bedraggled, bug-bitten, scratched, limping and tired, but aglow with renewed memories. And it's worth the $12 you have to pay the sitter, and the $7 you'll have to pay the chiropractor, and worth every penny of the $4 you spent buying treats for the kids because you feel so guilty!

Getting Critics Involved

Dear Doris: I'd like suggestions about how to get debaters to co-operate and stop criticising everyone and everything that is attempted. We would like to get everyone in the club more like a big family unit.

We are having trouble here in spite of all our efforts to unite.

Dear Club: People who pull things apart can be found in every age range. They get that way because they believe that it shows how super intelligent they are to be able to pick out flaws. Then this habit becomes more established and by the time they grow older it is set.

Attempts to deal with it should include a sincere effort to be a kindly friend, so that this gets across to the critical (and self-dissatisfied) individual. She may be surprised to find she is cared about and that her best ideas are wanted.

Could you turn one meeting over to say, four of the criticizing oldsters? They might form a panel to discuss a topic of club concern and each one make a short speech.

The chairman would be a diplomatic, as well as well liked club member who would encourage them, then invite audience participation.

Giving a negative-thinking person a place in the sun sometimes works a miracle.

This Professional Virgin Sadistic, Not Innocent

Dear Ann Landers: I was fascinated by the letter about the "Professional Virgin." My best friend is one, and I think it's lousy. She's a wonderful gal in many ways, but when it comes to sex she's off her rocker. I believe the girl is a sadist. She loves to lead guys on—giving them every reason to think they'll score. When things get in the boiling point, she lowers the boom, feigns indignation and announces, "I'm not that kind of a girl!"

Although a medical examination would prove she has everything she so born with, it's her behavior is for from virginal. When she describes how far she goes, I find it difficult to understand what she thinks she's saving by not completing the act.

Common, please. I'd love her hair and others who behave this way to see it in print. — Out With The Tossers

Dear Out: Your friend, and other "professional virgins" who make such a big issue over a little tease, are kidding themselves. Although they might be clinically "intact" they really haven't saved much in the way of personal integrity, reputation or anything else. I agree with you — they ARE sadistic.

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married to this wonderful man for four months. It is my first marriage (I'm in my late 20s) and Jack's second. He was widowed after having been married for 18 years—so you see he is several years my senior.

It seems whenever Jack introduces me to anyone he says "Meet my new wife." This bothers me. I don't feel it's necessary that I be introduced as "new." You mentioned this to Jack at least three times but he seems to forget. What can I do to get the idea across? — Ames With Remarks

Dear Ami: Forget it. It's no biggie. Jack will probably drop that irritating word within the year. In the meantime I can't see that any harm is being done.

When he begins to introduce you as his OLD wife, then you'll have something to complain about.

Dear Ann Landers: I have to laugh the way people who write to you have divided themselves into two camps—cat lovers, who are invariable dog haters, and dog lovers, who can't stand cats.

Actually, I don't mind either cats or dogs. It's children I find intolerable.

Why has so little been written on this subject—considering our society has become completely child-dominated?

More and more I meet people who share my disgust at the way our nation's little monsters are let loose to ruin rugs, furniture, lawns, parks public buildings and marriages.

I've been in homes where parents have allowed their children to take over the conversation, argue with their parents, use language which I consider insolent. And have you noticed how many children are permitted to answer the phone and ask, "Who is this?"

You might consider an ad-vertorial, but there are more of us around than you think. I hope the parents who read your column give the matter some thought. — Upstate N.Y.

Dear Up: Well!!! I'm glad you radioed your position. Gad, I'll keep my grandchildren away from YOUR neck of the woods.

Going Back to the Land Cut Their Food Costs

OTTAWA (CP)—A former social-services consultant for the city of Ottawa says he has found a way to beat the high cost of food for his family of nine children. He has gone back to the land in Prince Edward Island.

Mario Carota told a recent seminar on consumer advocacy that the key to his family's low costs is their 3½-acre farm near Summerside.

Mr. Carota's total income in 1974 from farming, fishing and film-making was $7,000, he said.

The family garden supplies its vegetable needs year-round. Mrs. Carota cans or freezes what isn't eaten during the summer.

Mr. Carota said he scrounges potatoes left in the fields of nearby farms and stores them in a root cellar beneath the house. A cow gives 1 ½ gallons of milk a day and their chickens provide a steady supply of eggs.

Some of their sons grown wheat, which is ground at a nearby flour mill and used to make bread. The family even makes its own spaghetti.

Their diet is supplemented by fish and lobsters caught by Mr. Carota.

The former consultant said his family's solution to high food costs will not work for the urban poor but he thinks a co-operative system would.

"We need a co-operative effort so farmers and fishermen can sell directly to the consumer," he said. "A co-op of farmers could sell their goods to a co-op of buyers."

Produce would be sold off railway cars to low-income families who live near railway stations. The program would remove middlemen from the system and allow consumers lower prices and farmers higher returns for their produce.

Books By And About Women

THE FIGHTING PANKHURSTS — by Ann Morgan.

The Pankhurst's must be one of the most remarkable families in the history of Britain. The indomitable Mrs. Parkhurst and her three daughters, Christabel, Sylvia and Adela became involved in a multitude of causes from women's suffrage to helping to oust Mussolini's fascists from Africa. They shared seething vitality but their politics ran the gamut from anarchism and communism to high Toryism and even near-Fascism.

Probably their strongest bond was their lifelong taking up the lance against injustices and apathy wherever it occurred. They were sometimes downright tedious; yet their courage was unquestionable. They were, as David Mitchell characterizes them, "not inverted and essentially defensive feminists but inspired human beings who happened to be women."

The many photographs throughout this book add a fascinating ingredient to a volume that is fascinating entertainment and meticulously researched history.

Show Ready

Iris Maxwell of Walker Stores is getting fashions ready for tomorrows show in downtown Belleville. The outdoor fashion and entertainment show will take place at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.

McMurter — Madden

Christ Church was the scene of the April 29 wedding of Karenann Madden and Glen Wayne McMurter.

The bride is the daughter of Carl and Marian Madden, Foxboro; the groom is the son of Marlene and Ken McMurter, Trenton.

Canon B.B. Wright officiated at the afternoon ceremony.

Given in marriage by her mother and father, the bride wore a formal gown of chantilly lace with bouffant three-tier skirt. Embroidered sequins and seed pearls decorated the bodice and the satin sash fell to the hemline. A coronet caught her illusion shoulder length veil and she carried carnations, roses and baby's breath.

Nancy Madden, the bride's sister-in-law, attended in a blue crepe gown with match capelet. Attendants Janice Mimby, Wendy Mizzi and Anitta Seymour wore yellow, apricot and mint green gowns.

Paul McMurter, was best man assisted by ushers Terry Madden, Michael Madden and Tracy McMurter.

And don't them, with the fine products from Superior TV. And don't forget that great Superior five year warranties on the parts and labor on Hotsch products. Have a great weekend!

Special Datsun Models

Vader's Car Sales are having some pretty exciting new arrivals this weekend — three special Datsun models. For the rivals this weekend — three special Datsun models. For the really economy-minded there's a stripped down version of the Datsun 210 going at a pretty stripped down price: to celebrate its first ten years in Canada, Nissan Canada has produced a special 710 2-door model with special options, again at a special price (quantities are limited however, so you'd better hurry on this one). And for you Z car enthusiasts, the new 280Z 2 + 2 will make your eyes pop out. And Vader's have just finished having the paving done, so it's not dusty up there at their new location on College St., just around the corner from their former North Front location. Happy car shopping.

The Weekend To Garden

This long weekend is traditionally THE weekend to beautify your surroundings with the planting of flowers and getting your vegetable garden in order. If the weather holds, it will just be perfection itself. And Sidney Ins is ready for you. It has all its annuals in stock as well as vegetables such as cabbage, tomatoes, seed potatoes, onion sets, peas and Sidney Ins has all the tools and fertilizers you'll need too. And the great thing about Sidney Ins — and it's always a great thing to remember — is that Sidney Ins will be open on the holiday with its usual 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. shopping hour schedule. So you have no excuse for not getting that job done. And I bet you'll all enjoy it more, too, one you get at it.

Downtown Days Song

At the Tropical Garden Pet Shop, 361½ Front St., they are literally singing about the fabulous 'Downtown Days' now going on in downtown Belleville. And by "they", I mean the budgies, which are being featured at special prices all at many items in the downtown shopping area. The budgies are priced at just $6 each and the Tropical Garden fish special is still on too — three fish for just $1. The Tropical Garden certainly isn't out of tune with the spirit of the special shopping event, though there is definitely something 'fishy' about a pet part of the fashion. Forgive me Tropical Garden. It's late and I just couldn't resist.)

Graduation Gift Headquarters

W. Wonnacott and Son Jewellers, 247 Front St. have quite a selection of graduation gifts available for you and your gift list — pendants, watches, rings, sterling silver ID bracelets, which I'm told are a really popular item. If you're stuck for an idea, desk sets, and book ends, just to name a few. But Wonnacott's, you get more than just a selection of good gift items tastefully displayed. You get advice absolutely free of charge — information about the kinds of stones in jewellery, wearability and durability kind, and ABSOLUTELY ALWAYS, you get a smile. That's a guarantee. Wonnacott will be glad to help because they really are glad to help!

Still Have Time

That great home furnishing team of Wrays and Kroehler is still offering custom ordering on four Kroehler models. You can come in to Wrays and choose your very own covering from an extensive selection and choose the style of furnishing you wish too, from a range of four. Now you get not only high quality Kroehler construction, but also the range of fabric selection, which you don't usually have, since no store can stock every model in every fabric. This is indeed a special offer at Wrays, 386 Front St., but it's one that — as with all good offers — has an expiry date. And that date is this Saturday, May 17. So if you want quality and versatility in your home furnishings, you'd better hurry.

The Whole Thing

It struck me this week, when I was talking with Bellerview Glass and Mirror, 354 Pinnacle St. that some of you who want patio doors are wondering how you go about the removed where you have envisaged your patio door. Well, Bellerview does not just handle a selection of patio doors and do the measuring and estimating; they can do the wall work too. So maybe, you thought the whole thing was a bit of an impossibility and you didn't know where to make the first step. Well, the first step is a call to Bellerview Glass and Mirror at 354 Pinnacle St. or 968-2211 and get their estimate on the price of patio doors. I'll bet you wish the whole thing was done for this lovely weekend.

Colors, Style and Price

If you've walked by the window at Studio 231 at 231 Front St., you will have seen the splashes of navy, red, and white which dominate the display. They could also describe your wardrobe, because these are great colors are making fashion headlines again this season. And what also is making headlines is the 25 per cent discount on all merchandise. Studio 231 during the celebration of the downtown shopping extravaganza. And this 25 per cent extends to all merchandise, including the wigs and jewellery in the wig boutique. Studio 231 is certainly getting into the swing of things and so should you, by getting yourself down there this weekend. It's a great weekend to shop DOWNTOWN.

Great Investment Potential

That's exactly how Gord Rublin Real Estate is describing this special Oak 18th property they are advertising this week. Here you have 15 acres of wilderness property, with lots of pine trees and a great view to the south, just two miles from Oak Lake and just 12 miles from Belleville. There are over 1200 feet of road frontage on this property, which has had a creek running through it. This acreage has a potential for some exciting estate-size building. So you people with an eye for a good investment and a good property should pick up your phone and call one of Gord Rublin sales staff at 968-6475. This kind of property just does not come along every day. And you know it.

Open On Monday

The Inn On The Bay Tavern in Picton will be open this long weekend. And what a great weekend to explore the many beauties of Prince Edward County and then end up at the county seat in Picton for lunch or dinner. (I think that I might well be accused of being in the employ of the Prince Edward County Chamber of Commerce). Inn On The Bay overlooks the Picton Harbour, which should be a blossom at boats this weekend. And if you have visited the Inn before, you should go back and see it in the spring. The menu may have changed, but the great food has not. And you'll still see your favorite such as roast prime rib and cog au vin and my favorite, Shrimp a la Maison. Happy driving and happy dining at Inn On The Bay.

Women's Year at Murray's

This is International Women's Year, as you all know. And its impact is being felt down at Murray's Front Street in Trenton. Nick only has cashier Sue-Ann Davis proven that while the produce manager's job is one that can make profits and happy customers, but there's a lot of activity and discussion going on at the cashier's desk. Why all this about the cashiers, you guys in the meat department? Who has to take the customers' money with a smile — all the time? Who has to bear the brunt of the flak, day in and out, day in, day out, and every day? Who talks to the stalwart Murray's customers day in and out and makes them feel welcome, no matter if they have a headache, or new shoes on, or they are mad at Murray? The trusty, tired and true cashiers, that's who. So hats off to the cashiers at Murrays. Why not?

Immigrant Children Pose School Problem

VANCOUVER (CP) — Educationists say the biggest single problem facing the Vancouver school system is students with non-English-speaking backgrounds who need extra help with their English.

A sharp upward swing in immigration has intensified the problem became almost half the non-English-speaking newcomers to British Columbia settle in Vancouver—1,395 of 3,013 students in the 1973-74 school year.

The school board says it is a crisis situation unique in Canada.

Of the 66,667 elementary and secondary school students currently enrolled in Vancouver schools, more than 26 per cent identify English as a second language.

The largest group of these 18,852 students is Chinese, with 8,042 students or 42.7 per cent of the group considering English a second language.

Other main groups in this category are: Italian, 2,495 (13.2 per cent); German, 1,352 (7.4) and Punjabi, 924 (4.9). Others in descending order are Portuguese, Greek, East Indian, Japanese, Tagalog/Hindi, Filipino-Tagalog, and French.

The school board maintains that the federal government should provide most of the extra financial assistance required because Ottawa brings in the immigrants.

Last year the Vancouver board received $600,000 from the provincial department of education to provide for special needs beyond the regular budget. Half of this went to hire teachers, many of whom were assigned to handle second-language students.

This year, the board and department set up a formula under which the board will pay half the cost of a $800,000 program for instruction in language assistance centres staffed by specially-trained teachers and members of the community.

Jack Fleming, deputy education minister, said he is hopeful the federal government will assist with funding.

Macdonald Mystery Filmed at Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Ross Macdonald, whose 32 mystery novels have sold six million copies, expressed pleasure that his novel The Three Roads, is being filmed in Toronto.

His thrillers feature detective Lew Archer.

Macdonald, Kenneth Millar in private life, spent his childhood in Canada with his parents and later, after their breakup, with a series of relatives. He obtained the first of his several post-graduate degrees at the Ontario College of Education.

Though his books are set in California, scattered references to Toronto pop up in them.

In Toronto for the start of the filming by Jerome Simon, Macdonald said the script by Toronto writer Tom Hedley is "a terrific achievement."

The first Archer book, The Moving Target, starred Paul Newman in the movie Harper. The second, The Drowning Pool, stars Newman again and will be released soon.

Commenting on the mystery novel, Macdonald said: "The literary subculture has always been just full of mystery freaks. It is almost the central genre in English writing, and it keeps coming back.

"People enjoy the illusion of seeing life presented as a mysterious puzzle, a puzzle with a tidy solution."

His detective here has become less macho and more patient toward women and less violent as he grows older. "Sometimes I said his 40-year-old creator.

Archer had become more committed to causes, notably environmental ones, "although he is still far less political than I am."

CP News Roundup

Oil Policy Said Work Of CIA Man

TORONTO (CP) — Mel Hurtig, Edmonton publisher and a founding member of the Committee for an Independent Canada, says a former member of the United States Office of Strategic Service, predecessor of the Central Intelligence Agency, now is a special adviser to Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed.

He told a meeting of the Canadian Electrical Distributors Association Wednesday that Walter J. Levy, a former U.S. presidential and state department consultant, is earning $60,000 annually as a part-time consultant to Mr. Lougheed.

"During the past 15 years, Mr. Levy has been instrumental in convincing Mr. Lougheed in Ottawa that we had plenty of oil and that if we behaved properly the U.S. would do us a favor and take some of our surplus off our hands," he said.

"It was Mr. Levy who helped convince Canadians we shouldn't build a pipeline to Montreal to service our markets.

"It was Mr. Levy . . . who actually drafted the infamous 1961 'national oil policy' that helped American petroleum companies acquire their Canadian crude, to their U.S. refineries while making the highest possible profits importing offshore oil into Eastern Canada.

"And now, today in 1975, incredibly, it is Mr. Levy again, this time as a $60,000-a-year part-time consultant to Peter Lougheed, helping to plan the giveaway of the Alberta oil bank," he said.

"It was on the advice of Walter Levy's advice that Peter Lougheed ignored the expert advice that he had received from the senior Alberta civil servants that had been formed into five different task forces over a period of two years . . . advice as to how to develop the tar sands in Alberta's best interests and in the best interests of Canada as a whole," he said. "The advice of their advice was that the time is now to remove the growing historical trend of greater foreign ownership in Canada's energy resources . . . the tar sands can be developed with Canadian expertise and with Canadian capital.

"The result of Mr. Levys influence on Mr. Lougheed—and its very current and very recent influence (that I'm talking about—was the incredibly inept agreement in September of 1973 for a massively subsidized, 80-per-cent foreign-owned so-called Syncrude plant, particularly under the control of Exxon—one of Mr. Levy's former employers."

Gets CBC Job

TORONTO (CP) — Judy LaMarsh, former federal cabinet minister who was recently named to head a provincial government commission studying violence in movies and on television, says she has accepted an offer to become host of This Country in the Morning on CBC television.

Miss LaMarsh said in an interview Tuesday that before she begins her CBC job in September, the name and format of the show will be changed.

Big Deficit

LONDON (AP) — Britain announced Wednesday a large loss of 269 million pounds ($644.7 million) in its overseas trade in April, but the deficit was not as bad as had been feared in London's financial community.

Policeman Spat

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph McLean, 28, a Metropolitan Toronto policeman, pleaded guilty in provincial court Wednesday to a charge of common assault by spitting in the face of a man in a city restaurant.

McLean, who was off duty at the time of the offence, was given an absolute discharge.

Convicts Want Raise

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — The cost of canteen items has increased at a greater rate than prison pay and a raise is necessary to keep pace with inflation, says a brief signed by 200 Millhaven institute prisoners.

The prisoners sent a copy of the brief this week to Andre Therrien, commissioner of prisons, on behalf of 2,400 prisoners in the Ontario region, saying wages in the last year increased by 19.31 per cent, while canteen items jumped an average of 30.44 per cent.

Boiler Idle

BATH, Ont. (CP) — One of four boilers at Ontario Hydro's Lennox generating station has been inoperative since April but plant spokesman Dennis Wilkinson said Wednesday he is optimistic that the problem will be isolated and corrected within eight weeks. The defective part of the 500-megawatt boiler are being studied at several provincial laboratories in Canada and the United States, Mr. Wilkinson said. Bath is eight miles west of Kingston.

Billion Dollar Land Fraud Found

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — State officials said Wednesday they have uncovered what may be the largest land fraud swindle in the history of the United States, involving thousands of victims and up to $1 billion in lost investments.

Details of the alleged fraud were disclosed by state Attorney-General Robert Shevin and Comptroller Gerald Lewis.

The scheme allegedly involves the pyramid-type sale of false first mortgages on property.

Lewis, responsible for enforcing Florida's security laws, said the investigation so far involves 18 land developments which allegedly have defrauded between 20,000 and 30,000 people out of $250 million to $1 billion through the sale of unsecured high interest rate corporate notes.

Lewis said some of the principals "have known links with organized crime."

Shevin and Lewis gave the following explanation of the complicated workings of the alleged fraud.

A land development corporation buys a large tract of land with money borrowed from a bank or an investment group, which in turn is given a first mortgage on the property. Then the developer subdivides the tract and sells lots to individuals for little or nothing down and a small monthly payment.

The lot buyers are protected as long as they maintain their payments.

But then the developer begins to sell so-called "corporate notes", bearing an interest rate of an attractive 14 per cent, giving the investor a first mortgage on a certain number of lots, depending on the size of the investment, as protection.

Then the developer defaults on the interest payments on the notes and the investor tries to foreclose on the lots only to discover that the first mortgage he thought he held actually was owned by the original lender.

"In many cases, these investors have discovered that not only did somebody else hold the first mortgage but nobody ever owned the lots they thought gave security or that more than one person had been assigned the same lots," Lewis said.

Lewis said the injunction against the Equitable Development Corp. of Fort Lauderdale, the developer of Highland Park Estates near Sebring, Fla. as one of the firms involved.

Spending Plans Appease North

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Plans by the Ontario powers meet to spend several million dollars more on northwestern Ontario appeared at least some of the concerns of the area who came to do battle Wednesday with provincial cabinet ministers holding a public session.

The province revealed a $18.5 million package Tuesday to counter what it said is regional disparity. On Wednesday additions to the Thunder Bay-Red Lake world of government decisions to go ahead with two additions to the Thunder Bay electric power generating station and land acquisition for a thermal plant at Marmion Lake near Atikokan, about 130 miles northwest of Thunder Bay.

A $2.5-million government office building in Thunder Bay, dubbed a "mini Queen's Park," by James Jamieson, Progressive Conservative member of the legislature for Port William, and a $1.4-million provincial courthouse were officially opened during the cabinet tour.

Environment Minister William Newman also revealed a control order issued against Dryden Pulp and Paper Co. that would end use of mercury by the firm and fall and reduce odors from the plant.

Allan Grossman, provincial resources development secretary, said Grand Council Treaty 9 Indians called members last week moved for three days in time with Indian representatives in Sault Ste. Marie to discuss an Indian proposal for better communications with the government.

Third of Drivers Fail Their Tests

TORONTO (CP) — It was a typical day in the life of a driving examiner.

At the first corner the nervous applicant turned left and lost control. The car went across a sidewalk, crashed through a drugstore window, destroying a perfume display, and stopped beside the cash register.

"I suppose this fails me?" the driver murmured.

"Yes, I believe it does," answered the shaky but sweet-smelling examiner.

Thirty per cent of the 395,222 persons in Ontario who took their first test for a driver's licence failed last year, and the man who went through the perfume display was one of them.

Forty per cent of all vehicles in Canada are in Ontario and Toronto is third in vehicle density in North America, after Los Angeles and Detroit.

So more people take driving tests in Ontario than anywhere else in Canada, and as a result, more fail—some in hair-raising ways that give the 225 driver examiners a rise for their money.

One examiner was trapped in a car for more than an hour after the applicant smashed into a hydro pole. The pole broke and the wires snapped and covered the car.

Another tested a driver in a car with four squealing pigs in the back seat.

An applicant from British Columbia told an examiner the worst driver in the world were from Toronto. He then passed a streetcar on the left.

Another applicant believed in the power of positive thinking. "I am a very good driver," he repeated to the examiner. "I am a very good driver."

As he made a turn, he lost control of the car. The alert examiner grabbed the steering wheel, got a foot on the brake and brought the car to a stop safely.

"You're a very good driver too," said the shaken applicant.

Such incidents can make an examiner nervous, say Jim McLane and Dave Vail who between them have 23 years experience as examiners.

Mr. McLane, 53, district manager for the transportation and communication ministry in Kitchener, Ont., and former chief examiner for Metropolitan Toronto, said examiners get hurt but none has been killed.

Mr. Vail, 47, a former examiner in Mississauga, Ont., said one man who quit at lunch hour on his first day on the job, "thought we were crazy."

Both agree that examiners must be calm and have a liking for people. For $12,500 a year, they face not only unskilled drivers but also unpleasant people. One applicant threatened to shoot an examiner after he failed the test. Another spat in the examiner's face.

A few attempts to bribe examiners still go on, but, said Mr. Vail, "we don't get much of it any more. It's got around that you can't buy us."

The test ride can be as thrilling as an amusement park ride, causing some people as a Marx Brothers comedy.

In one examination, the car was not equipped with signal lights. "OK IF I use hand signals?" the applicant said. "It's OK with me," the examiner replied.

The applicant was told to turn left and signalled correctly, but when he was told to turn right he stuck out his right arm, smacking the examiner in the mouth. He failed.

Day Seen When Manure Will Be Animal Feed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Scientists at University of British Columbia are working on an idea not unlike one proposed in the classic Gulliver's Travels by Jonathan Swift.

In that book, scientists are trying to make something useful out of excrement but were hamstrung because it was most unsuccessfully.

Lionel Cheldelin, director of the project at UBC, says as a result of the work being done now is seen a day when animal manure as well as human super will be processed for animal food.

Recently four university professors, in the fields of engineering and agriculture, signed a $240,000 contract with Environment Canada, and the federal department of supplies and services, to blue-prints to design 10,000-pallet biological digesters. The digesters will convert animal waste into food.

Dr. Coulthard, a sanitary engineer, is the author of the project by Hugh Sahm, an animal nutritionist. Warren Kitts, chairman of the department of animal and poultry science; Philip Townsley, a microbiologist, and Darrell Bragg, a poultry nutritionist.

BACTERIA USED

The system uses thermophilic (heat-loving) bacteria which neutralize odors and heat the sewage to the point where it becomes self-dry. Sahm, inside the digesters, paddles will circulate the manure to provide oxygen for the bacteria.

Dr. Coulthard said temperatures in the cookers will be as much as 140 degrees fahrenheit, destroying bacteria and any other harmful organisms in the material.

Dr. Townsley said other harmless bacteria then can be made to increase the nutrient value of the treated sewage.

Dr. Coulthard said it takes about two weeks to produce a quantity of usable feed in a 30 gallon digester, which has been operating 2 years. The larger model would be operated continuously and would produce 1½ to two tons, dried weight, of feed a day.

The scientists estimate that about 40 per cent of the solids processed are recovered. The final product is odorless and high in protein compared with the original material.

Dr. Coulthard said the new product has not yet been approved for use as feed for animals destined for human consumption but he expects government approval soon.

"What we have been doing is throwing away a good food source," said Dr. Sahm, who noted that in terms of nutrient value, the most valuable is the blood, followed by that of poultry, swine, beef and dairy cattle.

He said the potential for public health use of the process is "is probably even greater" than the benefits for agriculture.

Dr. Coulthard, noting there is always the possibility of a "super bug" epidemic developing, especially through [illegible] sewage-treatment plants, said the thermophilic process acts as an effective guard.

He said the federal department of agriculture is interested because of the possible use of the process to save on feed costs and for use by farmers near urban areas.

Dr. Sahm said his experiments indicate the nutrient material can substitute for about 25 to 50 per cent of farm animal diets.

He also said that while high-grade soy meal now costs about $600 a ton, the material his group will produce might cost $100 to $150 a ton, depending on nutritional content.

Dr. Coulthard said animal wastes which are simply dried and can be used as feed for ruminant animals, like cows, which have multiple stomachs. However, the material being produced at UBC can also be digested by single-stomach animals like poultry, pigs and people.

"We might come to this eventually, but I haven't tested it," he said. "I don't like the idea of it."

Sheiks Still Fight For Deposed Imam

WADI AL JAW, North Yemen (Reuter) — Royalist sheiks, flying to the homes of the deposed imam (king) of Yemen, still are fighting government forces in a war that most of the world has forgotten.

In San'a, capital of the Arab Republic of (North) Yemen, officials instinctively lower their voices if the conversation turns to the war that officially ended five years ago.

But in this front-line republican outpost, a 12-hour Jeep ride northeast of San'a, a young army officer talks more readily.

"Although the government says it has pacified Al Jaw, the fighting is continuing in these remote valleys," he said.

"This country is ungovernable. Do you know what we call it? The land between the Red Sea and the devil."

The officer, armed with a British First World War rifle on a curved dagger stuck in his belt, is one of three commanding a force of 300 republican troops. Only last month they lost six men in a clash with the royalist followers of the imam near Al Hazm, six miles east of here.

Speaking in Arabic through an interpreter, the officer said the men were forced to abandon their position outside Al Hazm following the clash.

They have since withdrawn to the entrance of Wadi Al Jaw, a rugged, twisting valley, about 85 miles west of the Saudi Arabian border and not far from where the Queen of Sheba once held court.

The soldiers' tents are pitched in a defensive square and at dusk the men return to their fort in a last bite of khat, leaves chewed like drugs for their stimulant effect, before turning in.

The three officers have the minor privilege of a truck in which to spend the night, although under a carpet between boxes of Soviet-made ammunition.

The fighting goes back to September, 1962, when army officers backed by Egypt's Nasser joined Imam Al-Badr, as king of Yemen and proclaimed a republic.

With the support of Saudi Arabia, the imam and his followers set up Gen. headquarters in the north of the country and held out against the republicans for eight years.

Not until 1970 was the imam forced to go into exile, having behind mentioned groups of his soldiers.

With a battle flag bearing a white sword and five stars on a red background, the royalist irregulars have fought on, using their knowledge of the mountains to dodge government troops.

In San'a, government officials say the royalist front is crumbling but that the republican will does not run beyond the mouth of the valley of Al Jaw.

The idea was to lure in on his conversations, but James thought the wiring was a bomb and called police. Aubrey was fined for using an unlicensed transmitter, while James and Susan patched things up.

Opposition United

No Restrictive Budget Is Needed

OTTAWA (C) — Government economic policies took a verbal beating in the Commons Wednesday from an admittedly united opposition that warned against a restrictive budget.

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic parliamentary leader, accused Finance Minister John Turner of ignoring unemployment in his "big tangling fascination with inflation."

His call for an expansionary budget aimed at increasing employment was followed by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield warning that a highly-restrictive budget "would be the most disgusting act in a sequence of events born in dishonesty, nurtured in complacency and sustained in perversion."

Progressive Conservatives and the NDP formed a rare alliance on an economic issue, supporting each other in votes on a non-confidence motion by Mr. Broadbent and an amendment by Mr. Stanfield. The majority Liberals easily won both votes with a margin of 138 to 43 on the main motion and of 138 to 39 on the amendment.

The debate was on a topic chosen by the NDP, but Mr. Stanfield took the limelight with his sharp-edged attack on Mr. Turner and his economic policies.

Mr. Turner, planning a budget late this month or early in June, told the House that consensus involving labor and business was fighting inflation is the only palatable restraint program.

"During the last few minutes the minister was speaking I had the feeling that I was listening to one of my own speeches except that it was not as well delivered," quipped Mr. Stanfield, whose party farred dismally in the election last July after campaigning for income and price controls.

He said there has been too much gamesmanship, secrecy "and too much confusion sometimes seeming to be created deliberately" on the consumer program.

By flittering away the months immediately after the election, the government has caused Canadians to see the consumer program as a sham "and from that it was but a step to see it as being a shambles."

Turner Will Report to Cabinet Today on Economic Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner is expected to report to cabinet today on his problems in selling a voluntary wage and price control program and seek advice on what to do next.

He said Wednesday that government plans probably will be disclosed in a new federal budget which he hopes to introduce by the end of this month.

The finance minister was questioned persistently again in the Commons Wednesday about economic policies to fight inflation and recession and he told opposition members to wait for the budget.

Earlier Wednesday he met 27 business leaders, including heads of some of the country's largest corporations. There were no conclusive results from the six-hour session, participants said later.

"We are prepared to co-operate with anything that has a serious chance of working," Alfred Powis, president of Noranda Mines Ltd., said after the meeting.

The latest government proposals have been turned down by leaders of several unions.

"Labor and business expect government to take a lead. That we're prepared to do," Mr. Turner said after the meeting with businessmen.

In another economic development, Statistics Canada said in a preliminary report that profits of industrial corporations were down 19 per cent in the first quarter compared with a year ago. The manufacturing industries there was a 17-per-cent profit decline.

Mr. Turner has warned that the competitive position of Canadian companies is suffering because increases in production costs—including labor costs—have been higher here than in other countries.

He refused comment on the possibility that the government might use a mandatory wage and price control program if it has in reserve.

In Switzerland, they go to great heights for Canadian Club.

There's an Inn 2,065 meters up at Kleine Scheidegg in the Bernese Alps that serves Canadian Club. Because anything less just wouldn't be worth the climb.

All over Switzerland and around the world, when people think of the finest, lightest, smoothest whisky, they think of Canadian Club.

Communications Talks to Continue

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial communications ministers Wednesday launched a two-day conference into a contesting affair as the complexities of their dispute defeated their attempts to resolve it.

Federal Communications Minister Gerald Pelletier faced a concerted provincial effort to wrest some of the federal government's traditional authority over communications out of Ottawa's grip.

"We're not out on a power trip," he told reporters. "We want to protect the national broadcasting system," including both CBC and private networks such as CTV television network.

The provinces were willing to leave such systems, "national in scope," under federal control. CTV television communications and satellite communications figured in their concept of national systems.

But they had lots than demand, expressed in a common statement read by John Rhodes, Ontario's communications minister.

Ontario: All communications within the borders of each province should be under the jurisdiction of that province.

Mr. Pelletier had one thing to offer: A formal committee of all communications ministers in the country as a means of improving consultation with the provinces.

By the end of what was described as a two-day federal-provincial conference, Mr. Pelletier had conceded nothing of substance.

He had, however, agreed to consider bringing the provinces into the decision-making role that was at the root of their demands.

In fact, all parties agreed to extend the meeting. They will reconvene in mid-July, leaving civil servants to work on preparations for the extension of the conference.

Sidney Gives to Area Rec Programs

Sidney Township will spend approximately $28,000 on recreation facilities and programs during the budget year, if the budget presented by parks recreation director Wayne Neale last Wednesday is approved.

Reeve Gord Wilman said Monday this figure could be changed slightly during May as budget discussions the township begins with "it looks like a realistic budget to me."

Total expenditures in the budget presented by parks recreation director Wayne Neale last Wednesday totalled $28,000 partnered anticipated revenue of approximately $7,000 in registration fees to offset expenditures by ratepayers.

The largest item in the budget is for capital expenditures — a sum of $9,000.

The budget also includes $2,000 in grants to local school centres which provide recreation for township youngsters, a contribution to the Belleville community of Belleville and Trenton activity the township that special earmarkings would be placed in township ratepayers participating in their recreational programs.

The township budget allows $1,000 for Belleville Minor Sports Association, and $1,000 for Trenton.

The municipalities of Stirling and Frankford did not approach the township for a similar contribution but they too should receive some financial consideration from Sidney residents participating in their recreational programs, Reeve Wilman said.

City Gives Fair Board Vote of Confidence

By CARM McNAPPY
Staff Reporter

The right of the Quinte Exhibition and Raceway to continue its operation on its present Sidney Street site was the main issue at Wednesday night's informal meeting between officials of the fair and city council. The result was a strong vote in favor.

At issue is the proposal lease the fair board holds on its property. The lease is held by the city parks board. Confusing the issue are separate leases held by the curling club and lawn bowling club and the future of Sidney Street.

Eight of 11 city councillors, led by Mayor Robin Jeffrey, attended the meeting, called by the fair board to attempt to clarify the position of the fair and its fears. All were in favor of continuing the fair and harness racing at the present site, with the exception of Alderman Don Corke.

"This is one of the most reasonable presentations I've heard in City Hall," Ald. Corke said. "But this facility should not be in the city. The fairgrounds and racetrack should be somewhere on the perimeter of the city, all this serviced acreage should be split between parland and family dwellings. The city should assist the fair board to relocate and free this land for a more suitable use."

In rebuttal, former fair board president Doug Rollins pointed out fair and racing operations required service land as much as residential properties. Fair board manager Ev. Gosnell noted that fairs current and community centres had a record of fiscal stability. Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, the CNE in Toronto and Ottawa are examples of fair operations that had a continuous record of popularity and success.

Fair board president Lyle Vanclief said the basic issue is the future of the fair and its harness racing on its present site. "We can't see any clear to invest in the present property unless we control it; our future and that in applying for federal or provincial grants because we don't own or control our property," he said.

Alderman Stu Meeks, in support of the fair board control of its land, said racing alone is the largest amateur sport event in the city, and provides considerable revenue in the form of meal room rental and meals bought by racing visitors.

Parks board chairman, Alderman Fred Russell said he would hate to see the fair-racing facility surrounded by residential purposes. "The city should make money available to maintain the fairgrounds as a showplace for such organizations and events as the Tarbrown Dance and Bright Corps, Kinsman Tattoo, fireworks displays, motorcycle and motorcycle races, as well as harness racing and the fair itself.

"Speaking as chairman of the Board of Parks Management, I don't think we should parway with the fairgrounds in the centre of our city," Ald. Russell said.

Other councillors to back retaining the fairgrounds in the present location, with a firmer hold on its real estate, were Jean Smith, Joe Cox, Ed Keegan and George Zegouras.

The committee of council (Mayor Jeffrey and Alderman Russell) will meet with the fair board to discuss the fairgrounds lease, giving the fair board control of $12,000 more this year for an assessment of $1,000. The Sidney Township assessment is $3,000.

Reeve Wilman said his council has tried to control spending this year in anticipation of marked increases from the county and the school board.

The county's levy climbed $31,000 to $1.1 million, the share of the maintenance of the Batawa Sewage plant, it was learned at a council meeting Wednesday.

This marks an increase from the previous year of more than $8,000.

"They felt we weren't paying our share of the labor and chemicals," township staff told council.

Garage Robbed

Several break and enter articles have kept city police busy this week.

Ed's Esso at 113 Station St. reported a set of tools worth $80 and a tape deck and tapes valued at $125 were stolen from his premises between 7 p.m. Tuesday and 7 p.m. Wednesday. Entry was gained by breaking a window.

Brown Seamen of 70 South Foster Ave. told police someone stole $275 worth of fishing tackle and rods from his boat docked at the yacht club sometime late Tuesday or early Wednesday.

And Rollins Construction reported police of the theft of a set of screwdrivers valued at $110 sometime late Tuesday or early Wednesday from building under construction on Tracey St.

Fence Missing

City police are investigating an unusual theft which occurred on the property of Elliott Motors 79 Ltd. at 268 North Front St. sometime between 5-7:30 a.m. Wednesday.

A company spokesman reported an unknown person or thieves cut out and stole a 12-foot section of seven-foot high fence.

Thieves Cart Meat Away

City police may have found a warehouse, reportedly stolen from a city residence two weeks ago, after being taken there for a purpose.

Police said today they were notified by Mrs. Ann Kim of 111 Avendale Ave. Wednesday that she was missing about $50 worth of frozen food is missing from her freezer. Her wheelbarrow had been stolen earlier but the additional theft was not detected until this week.

Fish Pier Proposed

Dunkers — Young, old or middle-aged — will have a place of their own to practice their pastime next year if Harbor Improvement Committee chairman Stu Meeks can put his plan into reality.

The plan is simply to build a pier for fishermen out from Victoria Park into the Moira River just south of the CPR bridge.

"If we can scrimp and scrounge enough this season to get the materials together, I'm hoping to see a pier set aside for fishermen — and women — unencumbered by the floating docks," Alderman Meeks said. "There's a lot of people would get a lot of enjoyment from it."

"My idea is that it should be exclusively for fishing and I'd like to see signs put up to that effect."

Wearing Out Welcome

City Harbor Improvement Committee chairman Stu Meeks and helper Ken Gilberson Wednesday morning replaced rocks taken from shoreline operation of the floating docks in the harbor. Smelt, fishermen built fireplaces with the rocks and left them behind. In this one they left the decomposing corpses of two carp and a rabbit. "Fishermen are welcome here," said Ald. Meeks, "but they've got to respect our property and the work we've put into it."

Sidney Residents May Face $40 Tax Hike This Year

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The average residential taxpayer in Sidney Township may pay approximately $40 more in taxes this year the result of an anticipated 11 mill tax hike.

Council was given preliminary figures Wednesday based largely on estimates. Formal budget discussions will be held May 29 when the rate will be set officially, said Reeve Gord Wilman.

Township treasurer Bob Vandervoort said the new rate — a composite of the township's general rate, the county levy and the school board levy — will mean approximately $12.8 more this year for an assessment of $1,000. The average township assessment is $3,000.

Reeve Wilman said his council has tried to control spending this year in anticipation of marked increases from the county and the school board.

Sewage Cost Raised

Sidney Township will pay $31,000 to the share of the Batawa Sewage plant, it was learned at a council meeting Wednesday.

This marks an increase from the previous year of more than $8,000.

"They felt we weren't paying our share of the labor and chemicals," township staff told council.

Seventeen Area Groups Receive City Funding

In its current budget for 1975, city council has made grants totalling $42,942 to 17 Belleville agencies and groups.

The name of the group and grant received are as follows: Central Volunteer Bureau $4,500, CNIB $1,800, Chamber of Commerce, $2,000, Convention Bureau $2,000, Horticultural Society $200, Salvation Army Camp $200, Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association $700, Santa Claus Parade $700, United Community Services $12,000, Rotary Music Festival $300, YMCA, $11,000, Wharf Street Rehabilitation $200, Central Ontario Dance Masters Association $200, Belleville and District Emergency Measures Organization $100, Quinte Arts Council $1,000 and a contingency fund of $392.

Waste disposal and regional planning were cited as the two major problems facing Hastings County during a meeting of the Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario this week.

More than 120 elected and appointed officials from the Hastings County area attended the conference Tuesday to discuss a broad range of questions dealing with the county and particularly to discuss the need for a study to investigate restructuring of county boundaries and government.

Responding to the question of problems facing the county, Tweed Reeve Barbara Allen said along with waste disposal and planning, the county is faced with the broad problems of regional disparities and costs of operating county programs.

County Warden Bill McCrae said during an interview Wednesday, he agreed that these were all areas of prime concern with his administration as governing "the county in a good shape."

He said the fall waste management was the major issue in that provincial legislation governing waste disposal are forcing municipal governments into costly changes.

With the province more reluctive on issuing waste and exercising more controls on dump sites, individual municipalities are under tremendous pressure to provide sophisticated disposal techniques," said Reeve Allen.

Warden McCrae said planning is one of his personal priorities as a county area of concern and said, "The Hastings Planning Board and the Hastings Planning Board staff must work closely together."

"The road roads were always a major problem in that they seem to wear out as fast as we get them built." The county has kept under tremendous pressure to provide sophisticated disposal techniques." said Reeve Allen.

Youth Dies In Mishap

HILLIER — A township resident here was killed Wednesday afternoon when the bicycle he was riding collided with a motorcycle on Hillier Sunday Hill.

Dead is Francis Christopher Goodmarphy, 17, of RR 1, Hillier.

Driver of the motorcycle, Larry Forsyth, 17, of RR 1, Hillier, was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital for treatment of bruises and sprains.

The fatality occurred when Goodmarphy eastbound on his bicycle, was in collision with Forsyth's westbound motorcycle, said police.

Impact of the collision threw the cyclist 15 feet into a ditch.

He was taken by ambulance to hospital where he died.

No charges have been laid in connection with the incident which occurred shortly before 4:30 p.m.

Roller Traps Picton Worker

PICTON — 27 public works employes have incurred serious injury Wednesday in an on-the-job mishap, Mary 25.

James Cory, 25, was pinned beneath a roller that reversed and backed over him when a half-ton truck after being hoisted.

He suffered bruises to his back and ankle.

Workers at the scene freed him from beneath the equipment.

Construction Increases

Sidney Township building permits for the month of April increased $1.2 million in estimated building value, it was learned at a township council meeting Wednesday.

A total of 28 permits was issued during the month. Of these, 20 were for new residential units.

Since the first of the year, permits issued in Sidney Township have climbed steadily from 13 issued in January to 28 issued in March and 28 in April. Value of April permits totalled $1.2 million.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following calls for assistance during a 24-hour period which ended at 8 a.m. today.

Wednesday, May 14, 2:46 p.m. — overheated electrical clothes dryer at 270 Herchimer Ave., minimal damage.

Thursday, May 15, 1:44 a.m. — false report of grass fire on Canniff Rd., south of Highway 401, investigation showed camp fire.

Thursday, May 15, 2:35 a.m. — burst wiring in motor of 1970 Datsun at Pete's Lunch at 388 East Dundas St., minimal damage.

Township May Lease Land for Firehall

Sidney Township councillors will meet with the Hastings County Board of Education in Ameliasburgh to place a lease on property at Bayside Secondary School for use as a fire hall site to serve the south end of the township.

Originally, the township asked to buy the property but it was not until this last week that the board of education found here might be complicated in the sale — complications that could be circumvented by leasing the land.

Sidney Township — participating the sale — has already purchased a new fire truck for the south division and has set up a capital fund for construction of the fire hall.

Township clerk Hugh Lyons said today, the township's capital fund which is aimed at building construction, will probably exceed $100,000 this year after current budget talks May 29.

This capital fund is tentatively earmarked for construction of a fire hall, estimated at approximately $28,000 and later construction of an arena facility.

Student Centre Opens

Wednesday saw the official opening of this year's Canada Manpower Centre for Students (CMC) located at 228 Dundas Street East. On hand for the ceremony was (from left to right) student placement officer Peter Fleming, Alderman George Zegouras and CMC representative Ham Fraser. Placement advisors can be reached by calling 962-8681.

Planning, Waste Control Two Major County Concerns

Creative Spirit as Important as Three Rs Says Educator

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the eighth of a series of articles on county education. The personality clashes between teachers, administrators and trustees.

By BON CARSON

While some educators are talking about the 3 Rs there is still the old one who believes developing the creative spirit of students is a major job of today's schools.

"The creative person is an asset, rather than a liability to society . . . it doesn't matter what area of life," says Murray Irwin, arts co-ordinator for the Hastings County Board of Education. Mr. Irwin has been with the board since last September.

A former teacher at Albert College, Mr. Irwin joined the county system at Moira Secondary School where he was department head of English. He later moved to Centennial Secondary School as a vice-principal.

As an arts co-ordinator, Mr. Irwin is responsible for co-ordinating curriculum within the subjects of music, art, drama, physical education, home economics and industrial arts throughout the county. The board also employs another arts co-ordinator, Connie Williams.

Mr. Irwin says he sees his role as supportive.

"The job is to provide support and assistance to teachers in the way of resource material for courses, contacts in the community, the organizing of workshops and teaching seminars," he explained.

He also says the co-ordinators assist in providing good experiences to the students, through the use of plays, theatre in the round, presentations, much of the co-ordinators work takes place in the schools.

Mr. Irwin says the co-ordinators must also keep on top of new curriculum development from the ministry of education. Secondary school guidancemen are always in constant change.

Outside of education Mr. Irwin has been active in choral work in the city. He now is choir director with the Belleville Choral Society which was founded in 1968. He has also been a former president of the Quinte Arts Council and is still an active member.

Mr. Irwin says he has resigned out the possibility of returning to the school room at some time in the future.

Creative Spark

Murray Irwin, one of the arts co-ordinators with the Hastings Board of Education, says he believes the development of the creative aspect of human personality is still of prime importance in education despite a revived interest in the three Rs.

Shero Says Solid Effort Is All the Flyers Need

PHILADELPHIA, (CP) Coach Fred Shero of the Philadelphia Flyers doesn't believe in the law of averages.

He believes that his team is capitalizing the idea that they are due to lose. Even the Stanley Cup final tonight, because they haven't beaten the Sabres in the Spectrum ever before, Shero says they are winners.

"I'm sure they're saying the law of averages is on their side and they're due to beat us," Shero said. "I don't believe in the law of averages. You have to work hard."

But at least one Buffalo player believes that perhaps the Sabres are due to knock off the Flyers, who are 13-0-3 on their home ice against Buffalo and were 3-0-1 home and away against the Sabres during the 1974-75 National Hockey League season.

"I think it's about time the breaks started working for us," said Buffalo winger Rick Dudley.

"In one game they beat us 6-1 in Philadelphia and we outshot them by 30 shots. In our last game of the season (a 4-4tie) we outshot them badly again. But there is confident that if the Flyers, who outscored the Sabres 25-8 in their four regular-season meetings, "play good solid hockey, we'll do all right."

RICK DUDLEY

The Flyers are still bitter over an incident in the 1971-72 season when the Sabres beat Philadelphia 3-2 with four seconds to go in the final game of the regular schedule, knocking Philadelphia out of the playoffs that year.

"I don't mind losing with four seconds to go but they laughed openly at us," Shero said. "I think a lot of our players still remember that."

The Flyers are coming off a rugged seven-game semi-final series against New York Islanders which concluded Tuesday night. The Sabres have been off a week after eliminating Montreal Canadiens in five games of the other semi-final.

Coach Floyd Smith of the Sabres says his club has matured since the regular season and is not worried that they'll be flat after their layoff.

"We have no reason to come to flat. The kids have been working hard in practice. If we come out and do our work when the time comes, we'll be OK."

One major addition the Sabres have made is goalie Gerry Desjardins, who moved back from the World Hockey Association late in the season.

Armstrong Not Looking For Job in Pro Ranks

TORONTO (CP) — Winning the Memorial Cup as Canadian junior hockey championships for the second time in three years would have most coaches dreaming of a lucrative contract in professional hockey.

It only confirms George Armstong's theory that he wouldn't be worth a pro contract for any amount of money, let alone love of the game.

The Chief, as he was known for 20 years as wing for Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, doesn't need the aggravation that goes with the exposure of major league sports.

The team wrapped up the organization's seventh Memorial Cup Sunday with a surprisingly easy 7-3 win in the sudden-death final with New Westminster Bruins at Kitchener.

"If I continue coaching, it will be with the Marlies," Armstrong said this week during a reception for the Canadian champions. "I will not coach a pro team for any price.

"They could never pay me enough to take the pressure and aggravation in coaching professional hockey," Armstrong says. "If a team offered me $100,000, my asking price would be $120,000. I was never a public person when I played and I'm not a public person as a coach."

Ron Lyle No Gambler

LAS VEGAS Nev. (AP)—Ron Lyle, a man whose life is wrapped up in a test of skill—a heavyweight championship fight with Muhammad Ali Friday.

"I don't gamble much, you know, it's one of my hangups," said Lyle, a 39-year-old ex-convict.

All doesn't gamble either, but he, like Leo Vance Ike in one sign.

Lyle served 7½ years for second-degree murder, being paroled in 1968 and later pardoned. He had a title shot in March fall through when Ali opted for Chuck Wepner and apparently had his chance for a championship fight when beaten by unheralded Jimmy Young last February.

His wife Nadine, who is suing him for divorce, had him arrested last March on charges that he took a shot at her. He is free on $3,000 bail on two counts of felony menacing and one of second-degree assault.

The fight will be the second part of a live home television doubleheader beginning at 8 p.m. EDT. The first bout will be a 15-round non-title match between Victory Galindez of Argentina, the World Boxing Association light heavyweight champion, and Ray Elson of New York.

All, who is getting $1 million to $100,000 for Lyle, is a strong favorite.

Rick MacLeish Top Shooter With a Western Flavor

PHILADELPHIA (CP)—Rick MacLeish's nearly goal-a-game shooting spree in the playoffs is the epitome of goaling work and the ability to spot flaws in the style of goalies.

The 25-year-old centre for Philadelphia Flyers looks more like a country-western star than a player with one of the deadliest shots in the National Hockey League. He's all wrist.

Off the ice, he wears bright shirts with red-stitched trim and his flowing hair and ruddy complexion add to the picture.

His goal production in three full seasons with the Flyers tallied 50, 32 and 35. In the playoffs, his total is 26 in 42 games.

MacLeish put in his defending champion Flyers in the Stanley Cup final against Buffalo Sabres with three goals Tuesday night that sank the gutsy New York Islanders 4-1 in the seventh game of their semi-final series.

Rick has had a good teacher as far as "grading" goalies is concerned—Marcel Pelletier, as ex-goalie, Marcel directs all Flyers' player personnel and keeps himself busy doing a little scouting of the players on the side.

MacLeish put in two of his eight shots against rookie goalie Glenn Resch of the Islanders and scored into an empty net to complete his triple, giving him 10 goals in 11 playoff games since April 15.

And he has been the busiest Flyer at the net with 47 shots.

"Resch is good on his glove side and not too many goalies are good on the stick side," MacLeish said.

RICK MacLEISH

MacLeish said, "It's always a weak spot and I try to pick on it."

Rick said Resch should not be criticized for the way he played against the Flyers, ending with a 3-3 record. Over-all, Resch won eight of his 12 playoff starts.

Caribous Defeat Quebecois

QUEBEC (CP)—Pat Differ and Jim Miller scored three goals each to lead Quebec Caribous to a 10-10 victory over Montreal Quebecois in a National Lacrosse League game Wednesday night.

Jimmy Higgs and Paul Cecil added two each for Quebec while Montreal's leading scorer, Nick Delmonico and Dave Listenberger, also scored two each.

Can BMHA Afford to Pass Up $2,000 - $3,000?

Well hockey fans, it's back to the Tom O'Hanlon Rink. And like a good word has become it somehow doesn't seem get moving in support of the school we'll all be kicking ourselves.

Gary Green, executive director of the school, hasn't a lot about everything in his corner. Outside the hockey people, of the city. He doesn't want the school to have to move, but if it doesn't get off to a start from the immediate area don't register fairly well with our hockey school is going to be in doing at the gate.

Green even went so far as to allow Belleville Minor Hockey Association $5 for every registration they could get, I figured they would get behind us and help to promote the school at least within their own organization, said Green.

GARY GREEN

Daytime students only pay $65 a week. They get their money's worth and more. But Green is taking $5 right off the top of the registration fee and pumping it back into the Belleville Minor Hockey Association.

How much more incentive does an organization need?

"Yes, he talked to me," said Ted Scafe, president of minor hockey. "And I think it's really a good thing. As a matter of fact I was going to bring it up at the next meeting."

The next meeting happens to be May 28. Green had hoped to have registration by the school by May 1. However that date came and went and the school needs at least 60 daytime students to finish in the black and at the present time there are less than 10 registered.

Last season when the hockey school ran for minor hockey were showed up and organized. Good coats, cheap, school hockey sent the blues about losing to raise the price of registration fees to the sport.

Now a chance for kids to take part in other activities is starting the BMHA right in the face and some can see it.

"Money's going to be pretty tight this year," said Scafe. "This will definitely help."

GLACIS — Now for all you baseball fans. Ever thought of being an umpire? Well, here's your big chance. On Saturday, the Belleville Minor Baseball Association is sponsoring an umpires clinic in conjunction with Ontario Baseball Association.

Ken Weaver, chief umpire of the Ontario Baseball Association, is one of the lecturers at the clinic.

If you're interested be at Parkdale Ball Park at 9 a.m., bright and early, on Saturday.

While on the subject of ball, the Belleville Minor Softball Association is holding a coaches and umpires meeting at the Secondary School on Palmer Road, tonight.

The meeting is the prime organization one of the most on so pressing. Don Smith would appreciate everything in attendance. That's at Centennial before theatre tonight at 7:30 p.m. Gerry E took so long to get in Don.

Turning to the Ontario Football League, season tickets to the McDonald's home games are still on sale at the McKnight's Variety on Front Street and at McDonald's Pizza on Dundas, on North Front Street.

Toronto Maple Leaf star, Jim McKenny will be a guest speaker at Brighton OFP Football banquet, May 31. The Brighton Indians are set on out of Ontario Minor Hockey Association players in the final series.

If you're interested in attending the banquet in honor of the least contact Constable Trumper at the Brighton OFP stables by phoning 475-1313.

Brighton Minor Hockey Association is a must if you're planning on attending.

Premier Teams Clash in Tonight's BQSA Game

By DOUG JEFFRIES

The Premier Soccer League, one of the finest leagues in Ontario, will have two Belleville representatives in the Belleville Olympics, and the Quinte Greek-Hellenic.

The Olympics have been training since the conclusion of former Ottawa Royals coach John Dunsby.

Mr. Dunsby has been very helpful in the new methods of training and the team should be in very good shape, the team's opener is Sunday for the Quinte League tonight against the Hellenics in Trenton.

The Olympics will play in the Premier League until June 1, when they play in Toronto against the Portuguese.

In exhibition games, the Olympics have won three, lost one, and tied one. In fact, their defence has not conceded any goals, there has been trouble with the lack of goals from the forward.

In exhibition play Brian Fraser, who, according to the team has been a standout, Charlie Nestorovski has also played well on defence, in attack, high school player Dave Langman has added spark as well as good offensive play.

John Crisci has been working hard to get in shape, and last year's leading scorer, Ulrich Jaeckle has been injured and the Olympics have missed Jaeckle's his scoring ability.

Depth, talent has come to the Olympics in Bobbie Fraser, who, according to Memorial Mountain is expected to share in a bulk of the scoring.

The Hellenic Soccer Club this year will be coached by Petros Vlahidis, a former Olympic in the Premier League. He is a native of Athens, Greece, and formerly of Ottawa. He now resides in Belleville and is a teacher at the Harmony Public School in Trenton.

The Quinte Hellenic Club, a new team in the Ontario Premier League, and the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association intends to promote soccer for the soccer enthusiasts in the Quinte area.

Quinte area.

The club will depend heavily on forward Ted Adams to spark the team. Ted Adams last year played for the Greek Centennial of the Bay of Quinte League.

In exhibition this year, the Hellenics have dropped both of their games.

Tonight the Premier teams play each other tonight at 6:15 at Centennial Park, Trenton, in Bay of Quinte action.

McDonald's Finish Exhibition Play in Newmarket

Tonight the Belleville McDonald's travel to Newmarket for the final preseason exhibition games. Saturday they open their schedule and tomorrow they hold their official opening ceremonies at Alemite Park.

So far, the McDonald's have been a surprise to everyone but hockeyfan Trenton. In a pair of exhibition contests against Oshawa, last year's Canadian Senior A Football champions, the Belleville team was dropped, the first game 4-0 to the Tony's in a game that was much closer than the run. They won the second game 4-1, even though the Macs felt the score should have been closer to 8-1.

Ted Walts was the distance in the 4-0 loss, fanning 11 batters.

"It was rough," said Walts, "I had control trouble early because I had the jitters. I think everyone did and that's what cost us the game."

An understandable situation in getting the first Ontario Football League game, especially when you're playing against the defending Grey Cup champs.

The Macs weren't long getting over their "jitters". They started a starting pitcher Wayne Caller right off the mound in the first inning of the second game. "We gave up some cheap runs," said McDonald's general manager, Doug Adams, "but we should have beaten them 8-1."

The Macs left eight men stranded in the second game. Scott Reid started for them, and was the first five innings, but once the Tony's tied he edge a 22 inch Harold Reid pitched him and substituted Bob Ellsler, the big left-hander took credit for the win and drove in the fourth Mac run. Ellsler was signed with the Macs early in the season, but decided to pack it in for reasons that really weren't revealed. Following after getting a taste of OFL action, Ellsler will reconsider his decision to sit out.

"We played exceptionally well for our first time out," said Adams. "We knew we were going to do alright in this league."

Guess the Jim Clements and Teddy (Wabs) and Frank Reid have played a major part, he added.

Clements not only got the first hit ever as a McDonald, but also scored the first run in Belleville McDonald's run in the Ontario Football League.

Sunday the Macs took on another mighty foe, and once again came out smelling like roses.

They won their first contest 9-1 against Newmarket Barker Bill Lemay. Lemay was fifth best pitcher in the league last year with a 1.48 earned runaverage and a 16-5 record. Bill was the winner of that contest with relief help from second half of the twin bill Ellsler.

JIM CLEMENT

If that wasn't enough, Ted Walts fired another incredible game in the second half of the twin bill to hand the Macs a 1-1 draw. Walts fanned 11 Newmarket batters, including the league's leading hitter last season (two times.

The McDonald's pulled out the stops in the seventh inning to score a run off Newmarket ace, Bob Dumik. While the Boy's finished atop the east division last year Dumik completed a 20-3, win-loss record and racked up a sizzy 1.67 earned run average.

Tonight's contest in Newmarket should tell even more and tell a lot about how the McDonald's are going to be.

Philly Fans Welcome Allen Back to Game

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dick Allen finally learned Wednesday night why he was delighted to be called Chief City of Brotherly Love.

The Philly brothers of that sympathetic metropolis, who have been amazed at his back-to-back-to-back with three standing ovations, had a chance to show their appreciation when the Philles finished Cincinnati's seven-game winning streak behind three-hit pitching.

"They showed me what kind of fans this could be," said Allen, who spent the first six years of his career with the Philadelphia and was one of the Saturday favorite hitters. "I'd like to see it stay that way, and I think it will as long as I produce."

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Cincinnati 7-2 over Los Angeles Dodgers 7-4, Houston 7-4 over defeated Chicago Cubs 11-7, Pittsburgh 7-1 over last place San Diego Padres in 11 innings, New York Mets defeated San Francisco Giants 5-1 and Montreal Expos over St. Louis Browns 5-4.

Allen, 31, hadn't faced a major-league pitcher in 365 days before his tearful "welcome" from Chicago White Sox last September. After his first home run, single off rookie Pat Darcy, Allen fled out grounded out before leaving a slightly strained ankle. He has seven chances cleanly fielded since.

The 32-year-old first baseman, reared every time Allen was moved. They gave him standing ovation when the lineups were announced. They gave him another when he made six three pointers in the top of the first inning.

It was, Allen said, the first time he ever played baseball in Philadelphia without being booed.

Since leaving town, Allen has played for St. Louis, Los Angeles and the White Sox. He was dealt him to Atlanta last December. But he refused to play for the Braves and they in turn traded him to the Phillies for three minor leaguers and an undisclosed amount of money.

Carlton handed the Reds their second consecutive loss. Greg Luzinski singled home the only run he needed in the first inning. Larry Bowa delivered an RBI single in the sixth and the Phillies got their final two runs in the eighth on a double by Garry Maddox, singles by Luzinski and Tommy Hutton and an infield hit by Carlton.

Ted Simmons' two-run double and Ken Reitz' two-run single highlighted a five-run St. Louis rally against the Dodgers in the third inning. Simmons' shot headed ground-rule smash that bounced over the left field wall brought the Cardinals from behind against Doug Rau.

Houston's Doug Rader, his a two-run homer in the first inning and a three-run homer in the seventh against Jim Colborn. Tom Griffi won his first game for six decisions but was replaced in the sixth when the Cubs scored two runs, narrowing the margin to 6-5.

Bill Robinson singled home Pittsburgh's winning run with two out in the 11th inning off Bill Greif after Dave Parker hit a one-out double. The Padres led the game in the eighth on a run-scoring double by Dave Winfield and an RBI single by Willie McCovey. Winfield also hit his fourth homer in the fourth inning.

Rusty Staub drove in three runs for the Mets with a triple and single and Dave Kingman delivered a two-run double while Jerry Koosman pitched an erratic five-hitter. Kingman got himself in trouble several times by issuing eight walks but the Giants managed to score only in the third inning on single by Derrel Thomas and Willie Montanez and Gary Matthews' grounder.

Chat Puts Carter Back in Groove

MONTREAL (CP) — Gary Carter, trying just to be himself blasted a two-run home run and doubled to spark the winning rally as Montreal Expos edged Atlanta Braves 5-4 in a National League baseball game Wednesday night.

Carter, who a show ago crashing against Jerry Park's right field fence several weeks ago, might be half a heart behind bat with manager Gene Mauch before the game.

"I had a talk with Gene and he said, 'just be yourself — be Gary Carter'".

He lofted a towering homer over the left-field fence in the second inning with Larry Parrish on base after a two-out walk. It gave the Expos a 3-1 lead after Vic Correll's solo shot for the Braves, in the top of the second, tied up the game.

Then, with the Expos trailing 3-2, Carter drilled a one-out double in the seventh. Barry Foote singled and an out later the tying run was scored on clutch-hitter Jose Morales's double.

Foote came home on the second error of the game by shortstop Larvell Blanks, and Pete Mackanin, pinch-running for Morales, scored when Pepe Mangual singled to extend his hitting streak to 11 games.

Clarence Gaston homered for the Braves and Blanks tripled and scored on losing pitcher Doug Rau's single in the sixth. Atlanta pulled within a run in the eighth when a run was scored on Blanks's double-play ball.

Left-hander Woodie Fryman had his undefeated record saved by the seventh-inning rally and now is 4-0. John Montague came in to pitch the last two innings and recorded his second save.

RACE TRACK REOPENS

MONTREAL (CP) — Le Circuit Mont-Tremblant at nearby Lavalle reopens its doors to professional race cars this year when the once-famous Grand Prix track celebrates the $30,000 Quebec Formula Atlantic race July 5-6. Le Circuit Mont-Tremblant, one of the three tracks in North America on which Grand Prix auto racing is sanctioned, closed its operation to major race events four years ago due to a lack of spectator support.

Warriors to Meet Bullets

OAKLAND (AP) — Rick Barry, after making two of his first 16 shots, scored 14 points for Golden State in the final period Wednesday night and led the Warriors to an 83-79 victory over Chicago Bulls in the deciding seventh game of the National Basketball Association Western Conference championship.

The Warriors battled from 14 points behind to gain a shot at the Eastern champion Washington Bullets in the NBA championship series which will begin Sunday at Landover, Md.

Rookie forward Keith Wilkes carried the scoring load for Golden State the first three quarters, and his basket with 2:37 left in the game put the Warriors ahead to stay, 75-74. Wilkes finished with 21 points and Barry with 20.

Hughes Baffles Indians On Way to 3-0 Victory

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitcher Jim Hughes gave Texas a three-hitter and Cleveland slugger Boog Powell baffled Wednesday night.

"I couldn't tell what he was throwing ... it was some kind of a trick pitch," Powell said.

Whatever Hughes was throwing sailed right by the Cleveland hitters and led the Texas Rangers to a 10-0 American League ball victory.

Hughes has been a shot in the right arm for Minnesota, since being given a chance to start because of the Twins' mound problems. Joe Decker and Dave Goltz, a pair of right-handers, have been sidelined for some time now due to illness and injury.

Since joining the starting rotation, the rookie has chalked up a 3-1 record, including two consecutive victories.

In other American League games, Baltimore Orioles beat Chicago White Sox 3-2, Kansas City Royals defeated Detroit Tigers 4-1 and New York Yankees beat California Angels 4-3 in 10 innings.

The game between Texas Rangers and Milwaukee Brewers was suspended after 14 innings under the American League's 1 a.m. curfew rule with the teams tied at 3-3. It will be resumed tonight before their regularly-scheduled contest in Arlington, Tex.

Hughes had help from Rod Carew who stole home for the 10th time in his career and Larry Hisle and Bobby Darwin each hit his fourth home run of the season as Gaylord Perry, 4-5, suffered his third consecutive loss for the Indians.

Carew's steal came with two outs in the first inning with Darwin batting. It was the first steal of home in two years for Carew, who led the American League record with seven steals of home in 1969.

Bobby Grich singled with one out in the ninth inning and Don Baylor slammed the next pitch wild from Chicago relief ace Terry Forster for a triple, hitting Ballboy Joe Nolan over the wall. After being shut out for six innings on three hits, Willie Wilson, the Orioles led the score 2-1 in the seventh. Wood issued a leadoff walk to Doug Davis, who scored on Baylor's two-out double. Brooks Robinson then greeted Forster, 3-3, with a game-tying single.

Vada Pinson drove in two runs with a homer and single and also doubled twice as Kansas City beat Detroit behind Nelson Briles' five-hit pitching.

Bobby Bonds' home-loaded sacrifice fly in the 10th inning lifted Catfish Hunter and New York over California. The victory was Hunter's fourth in his last five starts and evened his record at 4-4.

The marathon game between Texas and Milwaukee was suspended under the American League rule that no inning can be started after 1 a.m. local. The start of the game was delayed about an hour and 15 minutes by rain and then it took more than 3½ hours to play.

Milwaukee took a 3-0 lead in the fourth inning off Texas southpaw Craig Wright on Darrell Porter's two-run single. The Rangers tied it in the sixth. Willie Davis looped a double to left and Jeff Burroughs hit another double off the right field foul scoring Davis. Burroughs went to third on a grounder and scored on Ed Sprague's wild pitch.

CFL Game Of Week Proposed

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Football League will consider an old concept and a new theory at its semi-annual meetings in Hamilton next week.

The league will again discuss the addition of a Canadian to its 22-man roster, now comprised of 17 homebrews and 15 Americans.

Under new business, commissioner Jake Gaudaur said he has packaged a proposal calling a CFL Game of the Week to be introduced for the 1977 season.

The game would be made available across Canada at the "same" time. That is, all games would be played at the same time each week, no matter in what time zone they are played—8 p.m. in Ontario and Quebec, 6 p.m. in Manitoba and Saskatchewan, 7 p.m. in Alberta and 8 p.m. in British Columbia.

Gaudaur said there are 35 items on the agenda for the four days of meetings, but a London application to join the Eastern Football Conference is not among them.

Gaudaur said he also will introduce a new formula for dealing with arbitration of player disputes, whether it be contract disagreements or hassles with management.

Last year a three-man arbitration board was set up which included the president of the CFL Players' Association, the chairman of the players-relations committee and the commissioner.

Storm Warning for IOC Committee

ROME (P) — The International Olympic Committee (IOC), having poured oil on troubled waters, still faces the possibility of a stormy journey next week when it again faces the issue of the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

IOC and Montreal officials held a news conference Wednesday to deny reports they were holding an emergency session to deal with the latest Montreal crisis.

"No emergency meeting of the IOC regarding the Montreal Games has taken place," Jim Worrall of Toronto, Canadian member of the IOC executive, told the news conference.

Simon St. Pierre, executive vice-president of the Montreal Organizing Committee, talked about the Quebec labor dispute which has halted construction of Montreal's Olympic Stadium and other facilities.

He said he was not in a position to say when the situation could become critical. "We will take all possible measures to complete the work in time."

Worrall said IOC executive meetings held here Wednesday were scheduled a year ago and were not held specifically to deal with the Montreal situation.

He said that the executive committee was being kept informed of events in Quebec and an IOC meeting is scheduled for Lausanne, Switzerland, next Wednesday at which time Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau and Roger Rousseau, head of the Montreal organizing committee, will present a report.

If the work stoppages in Montreal are not resolved by that time, the IOC may be faced with having to start a search for an alternative 1976 site, but Worrall said so far no such moves have been taken.

Worrall also denied that there had been any consideration even to postponing the Games. "The Games will not be postponed, I repeat that the rules of the IOC are very clear on this."

The work stoppages in Quebec came after Premier Robert Bourassa's government announced proposed legislation to pool four construction union locals under trusteeship and to bar anyone with a criminal record from holding key union jobs.

Bourassa said after emergency debate on the legislation in the national assembly Tuesday that either the Games would be held in Montreal in 1976, "as I am confident they will, or they will not be held at all."

Be the first on your block to be able to run around it.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

For Friday, May 16, 1958

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be inclined to be lazy the day when something you've been anxious to do moves toward evening. Things work out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't let caution be common in your work or unnerved. Be jolted. Stick with the task till it's done right.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have a tendency today to say things which could be easily misinterpreted by others. Apologize promptly for thoughtless words.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't let caution be common in dealings today. If you buy something, be sure you get exactly what you want and the correct change.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your first idea, you'll necessarily be your best one. Before you proceed, determine a better way to tackle the problem.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you show too much or impulse of your talent today, you'll get what you're going to pass up bargains possible. If you're locked and contained.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'll be inclined to back down at the first sign of resistance today. Be firmer. Others respect them. You'll accomplish your purpose.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22) Accomplishments today and post will prove very elusive unless you do the day. Lazy, inattentive factors will turn the tide.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If your prospect isn't trying what you're interested in, lure your fault. Tailor your presentation to his real wants.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't let today's boast about doing something that hasn't produced an instant yield. Wait a reasonable over there. Dig a little deeper.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You may attempt a task today that you're not familiar with. Be wise. Stop and ask advice of an expert. You won't get bogged down.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't underestimate the value of your talent today. You'll get your price. What you offer is needed by the other party.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

MacDuff the best player in Scotland looked over his five hand. The hour was late and he was a long ride home from Glenda cottle. Still he felt that it would be cowardly not to bid a game with that rock-crusher even though MacDuff's wife, who sat North, couldn't have much of a hand.

When he saw the dummy he decided to play as safe for his contract as possible so he won the heart lead in dummy and trumps with four leads and led a low diamond.

West took his singleton king and shifted to a spade, which MacDuff ruffed. Now he led a diamond to dummy's ace, returned to his hand with the ace of hearts and won the last four tricks with his good diamonds.

MacDuff's play is worthy of study. He had carried against everything except 5-0 breaks and it was said that he had. However, his brilliant play didn't get him home.

MacDuff let the Thane of Glamis and of Cawdor and soon to be King of Scotland refused to audit.

He cried, "Play on MacDuff for one more rubber."

To Your Good Health

Athletes' Hearts Not Overworked

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: I have been told that the heart enlarges while they are sports, and that athletes live shorter lives because of this. I have an athletic 16-year-old boy who plays competitive sports.

While watching him play basketball one day I wondered if there really was harm in strenuous sports.—Mrs. E. T.

Most of the experts say there is no harm, and I'm inclined to agree with them.

Although the human body can stand much hard work for the purpose of running up and down a hardwood floor lickety-split as in basketball, there is no harm (present and future) short of injury for a healthy young man or woman, either.

The phrase "athletic heart," to which you probably are referring, is meaningless. True, the heart will work slightly more when placed under great and continuing strain, but so will the lungs and the muscles of the arms and legs under similar exertion. There is no harm, except if the person is, for one reason or another, not equipped to handle it, and this usually is determined before the Mickey Mouse athletic career.

The danger in athletics, beyond this, is that some athletes tend to set forth on a regimen during their years of competition and continue on into the later, unathletic years. The resulting flab can shorten their lives, or anyone's, for that matter.

No one has, to my knowledge, shown that athletics among healthy young men is a factor in premature death. Mile runners come to mind. They suffer their share of tremendous strains, yet manage to enjoy normal life spans.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I have a very dry skin in the vagina, which I am told is partly of the menopause process. It is extremely painful and has made sexual life almost unbearable.

My physician gave me a prescription for vaginal suppositories, a type of hormone affair. It helped. I feel there is a shape hard for me to use, and I'm in all were unsuccessful. My doctor told you have considered a salve or a cream that can be applied which would help in this situation. I am 65, and in good health otherwise.—Mrs. J.K.

There are creams containing the female hormone (estrogen) which can be applied to the vagina and vulva. One of them might help you. Yours is not an unusual problem in menopause or postmenopause. Since the health of the vaginal membrane is dependent upon estrogen production, which is naturally low, and as the ovaries decline in activity.

Some conditions—in both young and old—which involve vaginal odors and itching can be treated successfully and effectively without resort to measures that often give only partial relief. In cases like yours, the dryness can be taken care of effectively with either the suppository or the cream. For just the cream, which has the same effect, would be the best.

Dear Dr. Thompson: Would you print the foods to eat to maintain the potassium level for those of us who take diuretics? I know the oranges and bananas are good, but what else?—Mrs. M. L.

Bananas and oranges are particularly rich in potassium. But your concern may be needless. All foods contain some potassium, and any reasonable diet enough for your daily needs.

In fact, you can't do it (without combining pills) that you need extra potassium. You might ask if the diuretic you are taking is a potassium-sparing" element in it. Many of them contain an ingredient that is intended to avoid the problem of excessive loss in the urine, which can be a problem with heavy diuretic use.

Such loss can be, incidentally, a factor in muscle weakness resulting in such things as leg muscle cramps, a common complaint among older readers in their letters to me.

(AP) — Joseph (Joe) Mooney, a blind musician who played piano and composed for the big bands of Paul Whiteman and Les Brown, died Monday. He was 48.

A 1936 accident which blinded Mooney did not interfere with the musical career that earned him praise and fans in North America and throughout Europe.

300,000 to Be Idle

Quebec Labor Body Orders 'Study' Day

MONTREAL (CP) — Tension between organized labor and the Quebec government intensified Thursday with a call by the Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) for province-wide study sessions by its 300,000 members next Wednesday.

Most major construction sites in Quebec, including the Olympic Games project, are already shut down by walkouts involving about 10,000 construction workers.

The decision by the QFL follows a day of meetings by representatives of the federation from across the province.

President Louis Laberge called on all other unions in the province, particularly the 200,000-member federation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), the Central des Syndicats Democratiques and the Quebec Teachers Corp., to show their solidarity by joining in the study sessions.

He said the work stoppages is to protest the "the government's repressive actions against unionized workers," specifically aim the United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. plant at Longueuil, where a bloody confrontation between police and QFL workers was briefly occupied the plant Monday evening. Workers have been on strike there for almost 17 months.

Premier Robert Bourassa said in Quebec City that the planned study sessions are a "divisionary tactic."

He said he believes they are a political gesture to protest two bills now before the national assembly.

The bills are based on recommendations of the Cliche commission which investigated violence in the construction field.

The first bill would place four QFL locals, said to be infiltrated by criminal elements, under government-appointed trusteeship while the second would bar persons with criminal records from holding key positions in unions for five years after their conviction.

Workers were back waiting off their jobs since the release of the report last week.

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said many workers had left their jobs after receiving threats from QFL "goon squads" and he has ordered the Quebec Provincial Police to back the municipal police in protecting workers who wish to remain on the job.

When referring to work stoppages at the Montreal Olympic site and the possibility that the site would be shut down in time, Mr. Laberge said the workers "can't buy a damned ticket anyway."

He would not say if workers would be back to work on the site today.

Mr. Laberge said he did not want to hold the games for ransom. "We want them as much as anyone does. We sincerely hope the (government will resolve the (United Aircraft) situation by Wednesday."

On the postal front, about 200 workers returned to work today following a one-day walkout Thursday. A spokesman for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, representing the workers, said they met last night after the ventilation system in the main post office broke down.

A backlog of about 10 million pieces of mail has built up in Montreal post offices as a result of walkouts and work stoppages by both initial and outside postal workers in recent weeks.

In Quebec City, Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer predicted that between 500 and 800 asbestos workers in the province will be helped back to continue in their jobs after medical exams are made compulsory by new provincial regulations.

He said the new regulations will also deal with the amount of compensation to be paid the workers.

About 3,500 asbestos workers in the mills and mines around Thetford Mines, Que., 90 miles south of Quebec City, have been on strike since mid-March, seeking wage adjustments and greater protection against asbestos-related diseases.

Dr. Victor Goldbloom, municipal affairs minister, said Thursday there is no immediate danger to the health of the population in the Thetford Mines and Black Lake regions where the mining center is located, contrasted with asbestos fibres.

The government, however, will continue to look for asbestos-free water in the area but he said there is no proof that the fibres represent a danger to the digestive tract.

8 Kapuskasing Men Win $100,000

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP) — Eight paper company workers invested a total of $20 and came away with the $100,000 grand prize in the first seeing of the Wintario lottery Thursday.

Alex Kot, Robert Armstrong, Lyle Atkins, Peter Barret, Gerald Bell, Malcolm Buchanan, Chic McDhamer and Donald Williams jointly held the winning ticket — 60365, series eight — for the first prize.

The men, who all live in the Kapuskasing area, about 160 miles northwest of Timmins, are employed at Spruce Falls Pulp and Paper Co. Ltd. With the $20 pool they bought 20 tickets at $1 each.

Kapuskasing also was a winner area last February when area residents had the two grand prizes in the Olympic lottery. Three women in Pagwider, about 30 miles east of here, were joint winners of $1 million and two men in Hearst, about 60 miles west, shared $1 million.

Meanwhile, in Thorold, Ont., Peter Bunnaldo celebrated his 27th birthday Thursday, one of the $10,000 winners with his ticket number, series seven, six.

There were 192 prizes of $1,000 and 1,944 prizes of $100 for persons with tickets with the last three digits of 365.

Twenty-four series of tickets were sold for the 2,100 tax-free prizes, which total $10,000.

Selection of the winning ticket at the Ontario Science Centre in Toronto was televised throughout the province on the CTV network.

Forty-two series of tickets are on sale for the second Wintario lottery, featuring two $100,000 prizes. Winners will be drawn May 21 in Timmins, and June 25 in Ottawa.

Two $100,000 prizes will be awarded in each draw for which there are 42,000 prizes — 30,000 tickets each are put on the market, the Ontario Lottery Corp. said in a news release.

Grape Boycott Picketing Postponed Till Next Week

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

A grape boycott picket line, intended for a number of Belleville grocery stores today, has been re-scheduled for some time next week, says Doug Sewell, president of the Quinte District Labor Council.

Responding to the appeal of fruit harvesters in the United States; a number of Canadian groups — including the local labor council and Nicholson Catholic College — have been drumming up public support for demands the growers provide better wages and working conditions.

Mr. Sewell said a public meeting will be held next Thursday, to meet with a representative of the United Farm Workers Union.

"Secondary sites, about that time, we will stage pickets at grocery stores — particularly those carrying non-union-picked grapes," he said.

No firm date has yet been set for the picketing.

Thailand's Ambassador To Washington Recalled

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Thai government announced today it is recalling its ambassador from Washington in protest against the United States using Thailand bases for military operations and recovered the merchant ship Mayaguez from Cambodia.

The government said the United States had violated Thai sovereignty by disregarding Premier Kukrit Pramoj's request not to send 1,100 marines to Thailand for use in the operation.

Meanwhile, the student coalition whose uprising ousted the military dictatorship in 1973 demanded an apology from Washington and said it would hold anti-American rallies all over the country.

Thailand also said it would demand a review of all economic and military agreements between the United States and its last ally on the Southeast Asia mainland.

Kukrit, after a special cabinet meeting, told reporters that Ambassador Anand Panyarachun would be asked before leaving Washington to submit a protest note to the U.S. government.

The note would explain that Thailand considers a violation of its sovereignty the bombing of U.S. Marines at a U.S-run Thai air base early morning, then a full day after Kukrit formally requested that they be withdrawn, he said.

He said it would add that "we will not allow the kind of incident to occur again."

There was speculation Kukrit would demand a speedup in the withdrawal of the 20,000 U.S. troops still stationed in Thailand. They now are scheduled to leave within a year.

In Laos, three U.S. aid officials remained under house arrest in the wake of Saturday's assault, but the U.S. embassy said they were in no danger.

The government sent a delegation to Savannakhet, 220 miles southeast Vientiane, to negotiate for their release, and the embassy denied reports that their lives had been threatened.

The campaign to purge rightists from positions of influence in the Lao government and armed forces continued with a demonstration by about 300 pilots at Vientiane's Wattay airbase. They demanded the dismissal of the air force chief, Gen. Bunthong Phoumivong.

The last of the Lao marines left Utapao air base, on the south coast of Thailand, late Thursday night.

About 300 of them were reported to have taken part in the attack on Koh Tang Island, off the Cambodian coast, despite Premier Kukrit's demands that no forces from Thailand be used against the neighboring country.

Reports from Washington said some U.S. planes from Thai bases took part.

Kukrit's brother, Seni Pramoj, leader of the Opposition in parliament, suggested that the government protest the U.S. action to the United Nations. Several other political leaders called for expulsion of all U.S. troops.

Students in Bangkok formed President Ford in effigy at a rally Thursday night. Today about 50 youths held signs saying "America, Take Your Troops Home" at the U.S. embassy.

Canada Recognizes Viet Cong Regime

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada officially recognized the new Communist government of South Vietnam Thursday, but it is expected to take several months at least to establish diplomatic ties and to reopen the Canadian embassy in Saigon.

The recognition announcement made in the Commons by External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen, follows the Canadian policy of recognizing governments which hold clear control of a country.

The Provisional Revolutionary Government (PRG) of South Vietnam took power April 30 after forcing the former United States-supported regime to surrender unconditionally.

Mr. MacEachen said a telegram requesting the PRG for the "sole legal government of South Vietnam" was sent in Saigon Wednesday.

He was a reply to an earlier message from the PRG saying it had taken control of the country.

The Canadian telegram invited PRG officials to open negotiations aimed at establishing diplomatic ties. But an external affairs spokesman said this might be a lengthy process.

Which negotiations have taken up to two years to complete. This on the case with the People's Republic of China and talks with North Korea were almost as protracted, he said.

Canadian officials closed the Saigon embassy and fled the country about a week before the PRG took over.

The spokesman said there are no major barriers from the Canadian side in extending diplomatic ties. He speculated that the process might be completed much more than the case with China or North Korea.

There are now a growing list of countries to recognize the PRG, included are Sweden, India, Australia, Japan, the United Kingdom, France, Italy, New Zealand and Jamaica.

Wellers Bay Hunt

Toronto Pair Feared Drowned

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

GARDENVILLE — A Canadian Coast Guard Boston whaler and a provincial police boat are combing the waters of Wellers Bay today in search of two missing Toronto fishermen whose 15-foot, aluminum boat was found washed ashore and unoccupied early today.

The two men believed to be father and 21-year-old son, were reported missing in Picton OPP late Thursday.

A Hercules aircraft from CFB Trenton is also being used in the search, the Toronto men's wives have been notified by police.

The search by the coast guard vessel and armed forces aircraft began early today after a request for help was made by OPP, Picton police. The OPP boat was dispatched from Belleville today.

An OPP spokesman in Picton said the boat was found washed ashore at Barcowan Beach, at the north end of Wellers Bay. A report from a fisherman in Picton Beach area indicates the boat was without a motor.

About 6 a.m. Thursday, two men left for a fishing trip from the Gardenville area, about 20 miles east of Picton, to bass fishing in a cottage. They were reported missing at 6:30 p.m.

About 15 officers from the Picton and Brighton provincial police detachments are involved in the search. A Picton police spokesman said some local fishermen also have been searching on the bay.

At yet there are no plans to broaden the search to include Prince Edward County waters.

The coast guard spokesman said the search effort for the two fishermen are being complicated by a large area but many bays and bars that abound in the bay. At present, the search effort is being concentrated in a 10-square-mile area but may have to be expanded to include the entire 36-square-mile area of the bay.

Official Suggests Trenton Link with Northumberland

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Trenton's present town limits should be pushed west and north one to two miles and then straightened to allow the town to chart its own development.

The suggestion is contained in a discussion paper released by Daniel King, commissioner for the Northumberland County government restructuring study.

Mr. King suggests such a move is natural in light of expectations that Trenton will continue to grow. Servicing both to the west and the north, can be provided from Trenton over the existing lines, he says.

Such a move would "drastically reduce border arguments."

The commissioner states in the paper that the study team expects Trenton "will become part of a county in the next few years". However, exploration continues into the possibility of the town tying in directly with Northumberland.

In the preamble to the discussion paper, Mr. King says his comments are only alternatives presented to spur public discussion and reaction.

He has previously said Trenton's plans for the future are significant to Northumberland since the town sits on the lip of the county.

For the county itself, various alternatives to the existing government structures are available, he says.

— Three to five municipalities could be created and the county government eliminated.

— All levels but the county government could be abolished.

— All levels but the county government could be abolished.

— Existing municipalities could be consolidated into six or seven stronger ones within the present county organization.

Under such alternative structures, Brighton village and township, Colborne, Murray Township would fall under one government. The three municipalities could also be included in a larger grouping including Hightonand and Cramahe Township.

Mr. King, whose study is being funded by the county and the provincial government, will present recommendations based on a year-long study in December, 1975. Subsequently, his report will be open for discussion by all affected governments.

Trenton is currently preparing a brief to submit to community planners for the consideration prior to publication of his final recommendations.

Marmora To Repair Old Arena

MARMORA — At a joint meeting Thursday the councils of Marmora and Deloro villages and Marmora and Lake township decided to proceed with repairs and re-inforcings of the Marmora arena.

The project will amount to an estimated $60,000 and will also include a new roof for the arena. The work is expected to get under way as soon as approval of a 25 per cent grant from provincial government is received, said Gordon Bennett.

Mr. Bennett, chairman of the six-man committee which investigated the feasibility of replacement or repair of the arena following its closure here last December by the ministry of labor due to unsafe conditions.

A public meeting will be held in the town hall here on Thursday, May 29, at 8 p.m. for the purpose of acquainting people in the area with details of the work to be carried out. Also, Mr. Bennett will prepare a detailed repor for publication.

Bridge to Get Repairs But Nature Not Cheap

TRENTON — Work on the bridge to the Dundas Street swing bridge will begin within the next couple of months, once town council decides what steps it will take to put the bridge on a safe footing, Arie Hoorweg, town works commissioner said Thursday.

Necessary minimal repairs to the bridge will definitely be made, said Mr. Hoorweg, but the extent and method of such repairs has yet to be determined.

He said the key to council's decision is a report being prepared by Toronto consultants, Totten, Sims, Hubicki Associates Ltd. The report will outline costs the town would face if it opted to tear down the existing bridge and build a new one.

Consultants tabled a report before council in mid-April outlining the deterioration of the structure and estimated it would cost $1,320,000 to repair the bridge to produce its life 15 years.

Mr. Hoorweg said Thursday this minimal repairs will be made when council decides its course of action with the report, but did know when work would be involved.

The commissioner said the consultants report will allow the town to weigh its alternatives.

Council could move to replace the bridge, at a still unknown price. Or, it could either decide to repair it with $75,000 already pledged, or opt for spending $1,320,000 to right the structure entirely.

Mr. Hoorweg said major repairs — such as revamping the motor mechanism from electrical to hydraulic power — will not be made if council decides for replacement.

The "smaller things" such as patching load bearing beams under the bridge deck, "we have to do that, regardless of what's going to happen."

"If the town decides to overhaul," said Mr. Hoorweg, "we're not going to spend the $75,000. We'll go right into overhaul work."

Minimal repairs to the bridge will prolong its life by one to three years as opposed to the 15-year extension obtainable through an overhaul.

A Swinger

Swing bridge operator Gary Boulding checks traffic before swinging the structure to let boats through to the Trent Waterway in the river's mouth in Trenton. High in a hoist above traffic on the bridge, he operates the swing section 24-hours daily till June 30 when operation swings into 12-hour shifts to accommodate increased boat traffic on the Trent River.

U.S. Government Has Opened Doors for Host of Gold Frauds

By VINCENT EGAN

Business and Economic Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

With the U.S. government ending the gold market in American citizens, it inadvertently opened up the doors to a host of fraud artists.

Perhaps it was inevitable. For 42 years, U.S. citizens were not allowed to buy or own gold. That law, enacted during the reshaping the technical of that fall of 1933, has, 1979, unfortunately been curiously watching the price of the yellow metal fall down—mostly up—on foreign markets in other countries.

So when the ban came off late this year there was bound to be a substantial pour-up demand for gold from anxious buyers. (Not, understandably, to prevent the price of gold from dropping by hundreds of dollars since then, but substantial nevertheless.)

Predictably, there were also scores immediately people ready to overcome the innocents who were to be tempted by the thought of owning gold at last that they eagerly parted with hard-earned savings, without any adequate investigation of the "dealer."

One of the saddest stories involved a widow in Palisades Park, N.J.—a suburb of New York City—who said her entire savings of $40,000 to a mail-order firm advertising precious metals, and received nothing.

Then there was the Massachusetts electrician who said he mailed $3,175 to a New York address, in return for "a certificate of ownership in instead of the 10 Mexican gold pesos he expected, but got nothing but excuses and evasions.

The persuasive ads were written by a Madison Avenue advertising agency, on stock for his $10,000 fee. Even he didn't bother to check up on the "dealer" in question.

If the information customers did, and had investigated, they might have found that three of the officers of the firm had served jail terms for crimes of violence, or fraud.

The police recently closed in on a "gold" company in which consisted of one man who was responsible in gold trading, no financial responsibilities—but enough nerve to advertise "the equivalent of gold" that promised to buy gold "at wholesale". Yet nowhere was any sent in their money.

Several other schemes have been uncovered by law-enforcement agencies, but these are probably only a small fraction of the number of fraudulent operations that have been set up.

Most of them rely heavily on slick, colorful advertising, designed to appeal to the natural aura of gold and the growing distrust of paper currency in an inflationary era.

Even those people who bought gold pieces from dealers around the turn of the year have fared badly enough, with the market's subsequent decline.

But the trusting victims of the large number of newly established fraud artists have lost everything.

Many of those victims probably had a vague feeling that billion trading was regulated by public authorities in a manner similar to the trading in stocks and bonds.

They found that there is no such regulation, because gold and silver bullion and coins are not securities.

Anyone contemplating such an investment should deal with a bank or with one of the reliable, long established retail outlets—and never send money through the mail to a mail-order firm on trust.

It's Unanimous

Here is an interesting footnote to the great debate over who supported and who opposed a $1,000 increase in honorariums paid members of Belleville city council.

Hastings MP Jack Ellis points out that the Municipal Councillors Handbook specifies that EVERY motion in council carries unanimously UNLESS a recorded vote is requested.

Mr. Ellis speaks with some authority on the matter, being a former mayor of this city.

That being the case, since no member of council asked for a recorded vote on the issue at council's budget session last Friday, the Municipal Act assumes the $1,000 increase received unanimous approval.

For all the time it takes, we would like to see more recorded votes in our council chambers, and presume that our aldermen will conduct themselves accordingly when their raise comes up for formal approval as a bylaw.

Seeing Canada Costly

The various provincial governments are spending a small fortune in television advertisements, many of them on northern United States stations, trying to lure tourists.

PM Visits

It is a rare occasion for Belleville when it has a prime minister spend more than a while-in-stop here.

But Thursday, not only will Pierre Elliot Trudeau be coming to the city, he will be placing himself at the mercy of local critics in a "town hall" style meeting at Centennial Secondary School and even staying overnight.

Mr. Trudeau's visit, which Liberals undoubtedly hope will add some spice to their recipe for the upcoming provincial election campaign, will give Quinte district listeners the opportunity to question him about his government's policies on everything from inflation to immigration.

The 800-odd seats in Centennial's auditorium will certainly be at a premium for the event.

Teachers Seeking New Clause

Hastings County elementary school teachers are looking for a salary increase of about 30 per cent this year, the results of a survey of one-third of them apparently indicates.

They won't get it, but current negotiations with county trustees reportedly are more contentious on another issue — a cost-of-living allowance to be adjusted every six months according to the consumer price index.

Such clauses are becoming more common in labor contracts, and even the federal government has experimented with "indexing" in its pension programs.

The issue may decide whether the traditionally placid teacher-board relationship in Hastings is to remain constant.

Angola's Independence Bid Won't be Smooth Transition

by JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Portugal's equivalent of the former British colony of Nigeria in Africa is Angola. And the Nigeria 15 years ago, this large, rich and potentially influential former colony is on the verge of its independence.

This will come next November when Portugal's largest former possession in Africa, whose gross national product exceeds Portugal's becomes a new state in Africa.

Already there are plenty of signs Angola will not move into independence as smoothly as did Nigeria in 1960. In that year, the huge British colony, also in west Africa like Angola, slipped painlessly into independ hood assisted by Canada as well as Britain in forming a federal constitution.

Recently a new electrically-operated speed timing device was put into operation by city police and with it traffic officers can determine the speed of passing motorists to the exact number of miles per hour. First use of the device was made on Dundas Street near Bleecker Avenue, when residents of the block looked at anywhere up to 40 m.p.h.

Funds will be derived from the Ontario Department of Health, the city of Belleville, Hastings County Council, and Prince Edward County Council.

PC Party Had One of Worst Political Feuds

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

As we all know, at least those of us whose reading has extended beyond Fred Merrifield and the Bobsey Twins, even the best of families have their internal fights and dirtiest. In fact most of them have been.

The PC's we probably can consider at perhaps our best organized family.

At least in the past 30 years it has been top dog.

And yet it had one of the worst fights in our history.

And strictly natural, at that.

For all times it was over who should be president of the party association.

As I have mentioned here before, in the late Premier George Doucett was a power in the PC party.

He had pretty well put Leslie Frost in office and had the title of deputy premier.

He also had a pet hate.

He couldn't stand what was known as "the Big Bay Street crowd".

This was a bunch of officials who during the Drew days had largely run the party.

And though Frost had largely curtailed them, Doucett, who was a rural man, wasn't satisfied.

So in particular seized on an A.L. MacKenzie who was president of the party and chief organizer.

Doucett was a power in the PC party.

He had pretty well put Leslie Frost in office and had the title of deputy premier.

He also had a pet hate.

He couldn't stand what was known as "the Big Bay Street crowd".

This was a bunch of officials who during the Drew days had largely run the party.

And though Frost had largely curtailed them, Doucett, who was a rural man, wasn't satisfied.

So in particular seized on an A.L. MacKenzie who was president of the party and chief organizer.

He figured that as long as MacKenzie was there his friends would prevail and he determined to knock him out of office.

At first he was going to run for the office himself.

But then he persuaded James M. Allan, at the time thought to be the strongest field, but a long-time and respected man in Conservative circles in Haldimand to go after the job.

Allan did and the convention was one of the bitterest scenes on the Conservative record.

There was heavy, intense lobbying that one normally sees at a leadership convention.

Doucett was in it up to his neck. So also was Frost, in his quieter way, for recollection is that Drew was down from Ottawa.

Certainly there was a day and a half of antagonism and bitterness.

Finally the vote was held and MacKenzie won. His margin was said to be 25 votes out of more than a thousand. And with talk of stuffed ballot boxes.

As far as I know, what happens thinks the party was probably the big loser.

MacKenzie actually was an excellent man for his job, and to that extent it probably was a winner.

But Doucett and Frost were never really friends again.

Jim Allan, of course, was brought into the house and then the cabinet in 1951 and his allegiance switched to Frost.

There were other broken friendships which were never really made up.

And the most consequential point of all probably was that the whole thing was unnecessary.

For Frost really disliked the Bay Street crowd as much as Doucett did yet he made sure that, even though MacKenzie stayed as president, their influence dwindled to practically nothing.

Nigeria like Canada has large geographical regions inhabited by separate racial groups, distinct languages, each of them wanting autonomy in the new state.

Angola is in this sense is the same with somewhat similar large tribal areas. But they are not as clearly defined as in Nigeria where hoard cities of hundreds of thousands, with the military schooled in Britain, assumed leadership in the state.

A Nigerian class of millionaire businessmen, some of them knighted by the British, also wielding influence over rights, like the Ojibway family whose military has become prominent of break-away States, still dominate business and politics in Nigeria.

But in Angola a major white community, African traders, that of South Africa, will either be a stabilizing influence in the new state or a disruptive one.

Either way, there has not yet been a major fight from Angola of the 20,000 whites as it taking place with them in Mozambique on the other side of the continent.

Also with the Mozambique, where a single black revolutionary movement, Frelimo, which will assume power, Angolan resistance movements are in the field, three, one vying for control of the big former colony will fail.

The movements are The Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, the National Front for the Liberation of Angola and The National Union for Total Independence of Angola.

Only the first of these significant to be Marxist and all three Portuguese-educated African leaders claim they will incorporate white Angolans into their new administration.

Already there have been clashes in the territory's south east between whites, blacks and between the various black groups. Portugal's army is maintaining Portuguese troops and its police supervise the whole process.

Since Portugal herself is going through a time of political turmoil, with many leftwing political groups and the Communist Party in Portugal, it will not stay over control of Portugal, as Britain has expected from the former "mother country" in Nigeria in 1960.

What the future Angolan state will be, whether it will be acting over and above some kind of United Nations, it is hard to say. They will cope with the usually intervention by outside interests of their rich region.

This means both multinational companies like Gulf, which dominates the oil field, which bags oil output and on which Angola's future economy will be made who rules or in what manner.

Political Labelling Becoming Obsolete?

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

In the eighteenth century, a grocer, whirling a hundred times a minute, was a device used to calm cases of insane madness. Anyone living in the twentieth century must know the feeling.

Surely, in this age of computers and cybernetics, in a world of nuclear discipline and boiling resentment, we are marshaling strength to deal with the inevitable clicks of Cybernetics, when problems arise.

By definition, both democracy and communism have to be for the same end, that is the disappearance of class struggle, coupled with the possibility of arriving at social equality. They are, in fact, political variations on the Golden Rule, which is perhaps the oldest ethical proposition of a distinctly universal character.

It is ironic that the fathers of American democracy owned slave owners, and that the author of the Communist Manifesto had anti-Semitic tendencies.

Political man has never seemed to be able to give up his central myth, that there is only one way of achieving an end, his way. It is perhaps no coincidence that many of the prophets have adopted Thorean as their saviour. He condemned a national government for being in the highest of human values, and resolved to live his own time by his own terms.

The Hungarian uprising, among Moscow, Peking and the West for influence in the world, had his pointed out the unconvincing slenderness of unrealized social systems.

There is a glimmer of hope that the world might be coming of age. Saturday through trial and error, and most of all necessity, the world might become a community in the fullest sense: a community of compassion, of understanding, and of mutual assistance.

But for heaven's sake let's not revert to the childish game of labelling and name-calling. In the nightmare of the Holocaust common treatment for the inmates was lacking these labels.

FRED BURKITT.

He Fears Educators Brainwashing Pupils

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

The deadly interplay between communism and education is finally graduate to the public-opinion forming media was recently exercised in a single word by one of Canada's most noted journalistic authorities as "Catastrophe."

I. As long as the field of arts, history, economics, sociology, philosophy, and political science, taught according to the gospel of Marx and Mao, have been in the possession of the publishers are becoming more and more restricted in their choice of graduate employees by the fact that they are barred from a number not contrary to the national interest.

While Alderman Keegan has shown exceptional timidity and hesitancy, he has undertaken the possibility of a Viet Cong takeover in Canada. I am certain not being survived in Canada, the chances of a public-spirited official has been even more naive and hesitant than Alderman Keegan to evince any interest or resistance from either the Viet Cong or the children involved or the school board.

While the hatail has received not one word from either the Viet Cong or Alderman Keegan — several from teachers, educationalists and people advancing outgoing views have appeared in print.

In recent weeks, pro-communist letters have outnumbered such indicating a significant turning of the tide of public opinion in even this conservative, supposedly anti-socialist Belleville.

Alderman Keegan can draw his conclusions from his lack of public support.

I. As long as the field of arts, trades, boats and other toys are in the possession of the parents could care less if their kids become Viet. Cong. Kissinger or Mao Tse Tung or Girl Guides.

The home negative expression of opinion indicate that the parents of kids of today are more likely to co-operate with the inevitable takeover drift of Communism than to risk brainwashing which will open the doors to a better life and more overpowering.

The tendency of the free world to swallow propaganda hook, line and sinker has been the result by by brainwashing. Alderman Keegan is a "suicidal desire to be brainwashed."

Trudeau and Muggeridge, two of the most deeply profound thinkers of modern times, have described this apathetic lethargy drift as "The Death Wish of Western Civilization."

I believe Alderman Keegan really never had a chance!

Council Pay Raises Poses Some Questions

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

The Intelligencer article on the self-awarded pay raise our council members recently gave themselves poses some interesting questions.

Alderman Jack Ireland is sure he didn't vote for it personally. Wally Dever says he voted "No". Paul Russell was not present. Bill Vandervoort says he voted "No" also, and Alderman Jack Ellis is sure he voted — she is not sure whether or not she raised her hand in favour of the "probably did". Now's that for democracy?

The hard core bandits, Alderman Mills, Alderman Corbett and Meeks have no doubts where their hands were when the time came for the payers.

It was not so serious it would be funny but when we consider that Alderman Ellis cannot recall whether or not she voted "Yes" or "No" — it is maybe time she sought medical advice. Alderman Vandervoort, bless her soul, may be spare from this, but it is hard to keep track of exactly which way we voted when it comes to some of the large sums of money that are voted away regularly at council.

Perhaps a doubt this is the most mendacity crew of municipal councillors that has ever raved and ranted in this town. Could all this hard raloing was going on the captain of the ship was there — if not somebody should have been at the helm. Never mind, let it drift along to the next election and then turf the whole lot out. They are not worthy of our confidence.

WILLIAM C. HOCKLEY

I was quoted erroneously and to clarify the situation — I did not say the $1000 pay raise for aldermen.

Quinte Dance Centre student Laura Bayne in first arabesque position.

Laura's on Her Way To a Ballet Career

You can tell that Laura Bayne is a dancer when you first see her coming down the hall of Moira Secondary School where she's a Grade 11 student. She has the graceful, erect posture and toe-out walk of a professional ballerina she hopes someday to be.

Laura Bayne is on her way to that career after years of diligent study. She recently passed the first major professional examination, the Cecchetti elementary exam, a step that is taking her to ballet school in Britain.

Since her family is moving to London in September, Laura applied to, and was accepted by both the Royal Ballet and Elmhurst Ballet Schools, and has chosen the Royal in London. There she will take concentrated ballet instruction as well as academic options.

Born in Kingston, Jamaica, Laura moved to the isle of Jersey when she was three, the year her mother enrolled her in a ballet program "to help me find friends", she says.

"But I was so much younger than the other girls, I didn't really make that many friends. What happened was I decided to be a ballet dancer. I asked my mom if anybody ever danced for a job, and she said, yes, there was Margot Fonteyn. I really became my idol then.

"There's no one in ballet dancer I want to be like', because bringing your own complete personality to your dancing is part of what it's all about — you can't follow or imitate someone else. But I still admire Fonteyn the most, maybe because she is such a complete dancer."

That total involvement is part of every aspect of ballet, practising at the barre as much as performing on stage. Dancers must be constantly in tune with themselves, minds and bodies working in harmony.

"When you're dancing, you're stilled," says Laura, "but afterwards, when you analyze your dancing, you separate yourself from your legs and arms, and look at your faults. You have to be critical to keep getting better. But your faults keep changing; there's always something new to work on.

"With me, for example, extensions are difficult because my body is still tight from all those years of casual, and improper training I had before I moved to Belleville five years ago."

Since then she has studied under the direction of Brian Scott at the Quinte Dance Centre, and is enthusiastic about how much she has learned and improved with his help.

"Really, if my parents weren't moving, I wouldn't want to leave Belleville at all," she says.

Laura's life, like that of the other students at the Quinte Dance Centre, revolves around ballet. Regular practice is absolutely essential and they spend up to four hours at the centre six days a week.

"It's hard, but I never get fed up," Laura says. "The more I'm pushed, the better I do. Its so stimulating. If I've had a good session practising, I can go home and just sail through my homework!"

Doing well at school is typical of dedicated ballet students, who learn that self-discipline leads to satisfaction. And that sense of discipline pervades all areas of Laura's life.

"As long as I'm dancing every day I don't need to watch my weight," she says. "But I have to be careful in other ways. I wouldn't go skiing for example.

"Most of the reading I do is about ballet, and I don't have any hobbies, really, there just isn't time.

"But I don't feel like I'm 'missing out' on anything. You have to remember that a ballet dancer's career time is limited, we have to work hard while we can. That's why dancers are so single-minded. We're all working for the same thing — to be the best ballet dancer in the world!"

Still a schoolgirl, Laura dreams of a ballet career ahead.

At the meeting, tentative plans for a dance to be held in the fall in conjunction with the Argyle Chapter IODE, were made.

Members will participate in citizenship court being held June 22 and a blood donor clinic scheduled for May 20.

BROWNIES

Tuesday evening the Shannonville Brownies held a Mother and Daughter banquet at the newly decorated Community Centre.

The guests were welcomed at the door by brownies, Vivian Breadman, Darlene Stratton, Janice Cook and Susan Haverstock.

Brown Owl, Grace Cook, invited the guests to look at the display of crafts made by the Brownies.

Following the singing of O'Canada, the brownies made their promise. Rev. Beverly Thompson said the blessing, a meal was served by several ladies, friends of Brown Owl Cook.

Head table guests were Commissioner Georgian Oxon, East District, The Rev.'s Robert and Beverly Thompson from the Melrose, Deseronto charge, Mrs. Trudy Williams, Guide Capt. of 1st Shannonville Guides, Marilyn Kirkman, Division Camp Advisor, Tawny Owl, Dale Lightowler, Mrs. Grace Cook, Brown Owl of 1st Shannonville, Lela Twigg, Division Public Relations.

Mrs. Kirkman showed slides of Brownie Pack holidays at Da-bin-oth Arra camp at Waupoos. She asked the mothers to encourage the leaders to take training, so that they could take their Brownies on such an outing. The evening closed with Mrs. Cook thanking the Mothers and Guests for coming and all who helped make the dinner a success.

Ann Landers

Relatives Put Him Out Regularly

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 16-year-old boy who has two problems. My mom and my dad.

They live 800 miles from here and some days, mom and dad stay for a week. They have to give my bedroom and sleep on the living room couch. They are "Female."

This mom and uncle have two children who live in this town and I don't know why they can't go stay with them.

When I complain to my mom and Dad they say I am at "that age" and I answer back. Dad ever think about a kid getting treated this way? — Displaced Son

Dear D.S.: If you were asked to give each your income for a couple weeks at Christmas or Easter or for only occasional weekend, I'd say O.K. But so many days? Have you ever thought spending 25 per cent of your income supporting the family? I don't think it's fair.

How about a pull-out sofa or a cot for your parents and uncle since they are such relatives? Be disgusted, but and quote me. (P.S. You might make the point that you, too, are a relative. Relatives, like fish, begin to smell after three days.)

Dear Ann Landers: I was both amused and infuriated when I read the letters from the guys who complained I am a "female-loving" 15-year-old virgin. They called her a "tease" and a dozen other not-so-nice names. You talk about them pressuring you into sex, guys. I know all their and sister's tricks. I am a girl who has been subjected to the same sales talk.

I'm glad I'm a virgin. I'm glad I'm a prude. Silly, but I decided when I listened to the guys talk about their dates, I'd rather be regarded with Alice the first night. Maybe the guys Sally and Nell was a sure thing—that these guys were dumb boneheads. And I wasn't going to be added to the list. Quite a research project! I wonder if anyone else found that over half of my sixth grade class had "lost it at the Astro." This information was given me by the girls as well as the guys. It made me sick.

When the chicks get wise to the fact that sex for most teenage dudes is an ego trip, they'll be in a lot easier. As for those sex maniacs, who revved up at 15 and by the age of sixteen and five green girls, a week for a year, I say, I'd have for them is disgust.

It's a rotten rip to unload post-up energy. Sign me — Glad I Was Saving My Life.

Dear V.: You sound like a solid lady who needs no advice from Ann Landers. I'm just for giving some. After all, you're 18. I'm a 50-year-old sinner. What do I know?

Dear Ann Landers: Under what circumstances would it be proper to invite guests to attend a wedding and exclude them from the reception.

I know of a couple who drove 300 miles to attend a wedding and when they arrived they discovered they were invited to attend only the wedding. Nobody had told them they were invited to attend the reception. I can't imagine inviting a couple to come from out-of-town for the ceremony and not offer them the sociability and refreshments that follow. — Disappointed

Dear Perp: It sounds like a gross misunderstanding. The reasons are often omitted from the wedding (especially if it's second time around) for the bride or groom) but they are invited to the reception. I can't imagine inviting a couple to come from out-of-town for the ceremony and not offer them the sociability and refreshments that follow.

'Seed Money' Built Church

Home Note: Recently it was announced on T.V. news that the Rev. Hodder, New United Church, minister, distributed several hundred 5 dollar bills to the congregation, illustrating the theme of the parable about the servants who had been given silver, by their master. Some invested, gaining a return, while one hid his silver (the talent) in his mattress — a true parable.

Well, Rev. Hodder's investment, (the talent, manifold) but more important, it built a true centered spirit in the congregation. It was much talked of this imaginative idea, initiated by shown by the Rev. Hodder.

Bob Lindvay.

Dear Bob: An excellent idea. Here in Hamilton, the Rev. Hodder, we did the talent, money and 25 years ago, when we had to build a new church. We asked every family to contribute a hundred dollars, which said the talent, and all who started with a project, were given 10 dollars as seed money.

We've got another project going now and I have bought the most beautiful African violet. Friday a retired teacher who happens to be my close friend, Miss Ethel Dodds, and I, visited Dodds' home. We have been in Canada for a few years and we found a very, very, very, very, very very much. We now installed Ethel's parents, two children of our own and we have been blessed with parents for several years. We have had in our care 15 children with ages from month from newborn to teen-agers. After the children have left, we still always have to have a good very.

All of these children when coming to our home had to be washed on hand and foot, with soap and water, then dressed in everything for themselves. Ethel's mom and dad could not a lot of some. They are taught to think for themselves, so everything they have had to do decisions that even an adult would have to learn to make. Life should I stay where I am or go back to my mom and Dad, because if they don't go back those family and they can them off completely.

All our children have an allowance each week which they have to learn to manage because one week a month which we call "Blue Monday."

Two Expensive.

Dear Two: You love them, you give their parents room to grow and by teaching them how to do things you are also making it possible for them to take care of themselves if they go back to a home where things are somewhat less than perfect.

I can understand your hating to part with little one to whom you have given so much love. Dear Parents: parenting is one of the noblest jobs there is. Double kudos.

Dear Ann Landers: Strange things happen in funny places — for some unknown reason a few vague, disjointed lines of a poem I learned years ago proceeded to scamper across my mind in double time a long ago. Now I can't get rid of them. Help me please.

I don't know who wrote it. As I recall, it begins: "I saw a tree in dawn was breaking. And I staggered to my rest, — softly shaking. From the cart-road to the creek." And it ends: "And I wept as children weep 'Till the dawn wind slowly, softly sweeping Bore away my burning eyelids, sleep."

"And another one stood upon a rock that begins: "The moon is deep, the night is still — "There's mighty mischief overhead" — "Mischief, I will, I will." Is wife exclaimed, "What air you about?"

Maybe someone will recognize the poem.

Dear Old Timer: I am intrigued. Who or what staggered to rest at dawn? Readers, can you tell us? I incline to agree with the noble's verdict of "mischief" when it moves!

New Organization Will Provide United Voice for Indian Women

OTTAWA (CP). An organization to provide a united voice for all women of North American Indian ancestry" was established Sunday after bitter debate between native women registered under the Indian Act and those who have lost their status under the Act.

The Saskatchewan Indian Women's Association, led by president Mrs. Isabel McNab, walked out of the two-day Indian Rights for Indian Women conference, saying it was not truly representative of Indian women and could not claim to be their spokesman.

However, two representatives from each of the other provinces and the two territories remained, and conference organizers were hopeful that native women, whether represented or not by Ottawa as being Indians, now would work together.

Many of the non-status delegates were shocked at the rebuff by the Indian affairs department, saying they married status Indians.

"Does an Indian woman who married a white man lose her color?" asked one delegate Saturday.

"No wonder many of our Indian women are divided, they are afraid to lose their status," said another.

The new organization had its roots in 1974 when the Jeanette Laval case was before the courts. Mrs. Laval, who had married a non-Indian, wanted to go back to her reserve with her children.

The Supreme Court of Canada upheld the Indian Act section on status were within the powers of Parliament to enact and did not discriminate against Indian women.

However, under the Indian Act, Indian men marrying non-Indians keep their status and pass it on to their wives and children.

There were early signs of dissension among some delegates at the Saturday workshops.

A Saskatchewan delegate said women who married non-Indians "are about as much like what they believed in when they got married" and it was felt by some that they got married to the white society.

Mrs. Mary Two-Axe, who lost her status through marriage, said she wanted to go back to Caughnawaga, Que., to help her mother, and also wanted her children to spend time on the reserve.

Mrs. Two-Axe, like other speakers from the non-status group, referred to non-Indian wives of Indian men who they would did not pass on native culture to their children.

All five of the officers of the new organization are women who lost status through marriage. Included in Mrs. Margette, elected first vice-president and Mrs. Two-Axe, second vice-president.

The president is Mrs. Doris Seager of British Colombia, a non-status woman at the conference.

AROUND TOWN with LANA ROBINSON

(. . . an advertising feature designed to keep you better informed of what's new around town.)

Matching Prices

No, that's not a new advertising gimmick from shoe stores. We've got enough of them, thanks. But it certainly is a concern for all of us no matter what we are shopping for. Prices are high and we can be also be as much about spiralling prices, but we can do something about shopping around before we make any purchase. Trenton Optical is one of the exceptions. Even when you shop around for optical service, you'll not find Trenton Optical wanting in any department — including the price category. Trenton Optical says their prices are competitive and they are. But you get more than just a good price; you get the quality of service to match right from the time you walk in the door. And you don't need an appointment to do that either. Visit Trenton Optical located at 54 Bridge St. East. You can't miss the big blue eye. And it's certainly "worth looking into".

Great Weekend, Great Clothes

Another high spot for you and your friends to visit this weekend, is the West Wind Boutique at Actinolite on Hwy. 62. Whether it's for great sportswear, evening wear or summer wear, or special gift items, the "West Wind" has Ball Golf enthusiasts will find golf fashions; sunbathers will find halters, shorts and sports rainwear; and the fashion-conscious will find high fashion in the best of materials and style from all over the world. Celebrate summer in style — Jean Smith, owner of the West Wind Boutique, open Monday to Saturday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sundays until 5 p.m. Just drive up to Actinolite is a great favorite. And what rewards when you get there! Have a great weekend, with some great shopping at West Wind.

Cameron Gallery Notes

William Keats of Belleville was the lucky winner of a Donnah Cameron painting at the Belleville Cancer Society Tea Party held in aid of the Arthritic Society in Trenton. The name of the winner was Mrs. Gord Cameron. Congrats to Mr. Keats on your new about the Cameron Artists. Daughter of painters Allan and Donnah Cameron, Donnah Cameron Finnegan, graduated from the Ontario College of Art this summer. You may remember the write-ups about Donnah's outstanding performance in the Canadian Cancer Society Quinte Arts Festival. The Cameron Gallery will be open this weekend, and Donnah will be there to welcome you. And what a great place to go on a holiday! You can't show all your friends all the great things we have around here, but the Cameron gallery is a very good start.

Holidays With Holiday

If you're thinking of holiday in the near future — then Holiday Car and Truck Rentals at 11 West Moira St. shouldn't be a hard name to remember. Holiday is the company who can get you from point "A" to point "B" at reasonable rates. Can get you that truck to get all your belongings up to that cottage. Or, if it is a car you need, Holiday can get you's practically on the road. Holiday can help you with mileage estimates and rates. Call 968-7511 — it's still on as well. Hoover bags are 89c and bags for all other vacuum start at 79c a bag. Gibbs and Son will also make a thorough check of your vacuum and balance and guarantee it. New hose start at $5.50. An investment of your time to visit Gibbs and Son is very little compared to the price of a new vacuum. Keep the old one in good shape.

Air-conditioning Weather

I bet you thought after all the wide remarks I made at the weather back in the winter months, that I would never have another need to say another word. That is not! It's glorious. But it's also air-conditioning time too. Ruddy Electric's Consumer Division, 281 Coleman St. is ready for it too. They have Westinghouse units in 5, 6, 7, 8, 10 and 12 BTUs (British Thermal Units — that's what I learned this week, so there!) These units are all easy to install window units and can accommodate either vertical or horizontal placement, depending on the kind of windows you can use. So for your place of business, or your home, Ruddy Electric's Consumer Division is THE PLACE for air-conditioners.

Not Just For Softness

I think that sometimes I get so carried away on the rainwater effects of an Aquafine Water Refiner in your home, that I don't emphasize the safety factors as much as I should. But those of you in rural or hamlet conditions, where the water is really bad, should read this column and follow it up with a call to Moira Schooler at 962-6841. After all, we are talking about a water refiner and that's just what an Aquafine Water Refiner does: refines your water so that the impurities and hardness are controlled. And there is no more vital part of our existence than our water. And that just isn't part of the dialogue of the environmentalists. It's your home, so you should protect yourself in it. And that means safe water. That also means Aquafined water.

View From The Terrace

Sounds like the name of a novel doesn't it? I think it is. But what I had in mind is the lovely view from the Terrace Lounge of the Four Seasons which you'll have when you have lunch in these relaxing surroundings. You can see the bay, complemented by the lovely widths of greenery in front of it. And now that the trees have unfolded their leafy gifts, we are once more entering into the fullness of spring. But while you're experiencing all of Nature's richness in the closest dining surroundings around, your bill will come to a price you. The Terrace Lounge luncheon features hot roast beef on a tasty bun at $1.85 and hot pastrami on rye at $1.65. Have the lunch you deserve — at the Four Seasons, of course.

What You Can't Do

Undoubtedly, you're feeling pretty proud of yourself for getting the house looking spic and span. But what you can't do a good job on, no matter how ambitious you are, are the carpets and the furniture. You and your others that aren't adequate and that's no reflection on either of you. But ServiceMaster is another kettle of fish — or I should say, another resource of expert cleaning. ServiceMaster has the people and the elbows too, but they also have the equipment and know-how too. ServiceMaster is an international company with an international reputation for getting anything that's cleanable clean. They'll do a great job on your carpets and furniture and you and your friends and family will be very glad they did. Call for your ServiceMaster service at 967-1672.

Don't Let the Petunias Show You Up

This is traditionally the weekend for putting in the annuals. But if the house needs a new coat of paint, Nature's bounty is only going to show you up, and it up, not hide the situation. Why not handle the aesthetic problems once and all, with a little help from Highland Construction? Vinyl siding will solve your exterior decor problems once and for all. And for the next 30 years or so, all you're going to have to do outside is just keep the lawn cut and plant the flowers. Vinyl siding has far more advantages over aluminum siding, as you'll see when you visit Highland Construction's Home Improvement Centre at 257 North Front St. Here, you see exactly what it looks like on the display there, read the brochures and talk to the consultants. Then let Highland Construction get at it. Then all you have to do is to enjoy the flowers.

Health Unit Awaiting Queen's Park Decision on New Budget

By ROBIN CHASE
Staff Reporter

Staffing by the provincial ministry of health is the main stumbling between the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Board of Health and Local 31 of the Ontario Nurses Association is preventing the Hastings County health unit from finalizing its 1975 budget requirements by the March 31 deadline, Ken Corbett, unit business administrator and treasurer, said.

In an interview with The Intelligencer, Mr. Corbett explained the ministry is awaiting submission of an provincial health unit budgets before approving any single budget.

However, all budgets cannot be submitted until contract talks involving nurses have been completed, he said. The health unit has offered to submit an estimated budget, pending final contract agreement, but the ministry has refused to accept such budgets and has advised provincial units to submit supplementary budgets when agreements are finalized, he said.

"I'm getting a little fed up with their ministry officials' handling of it," Mr. Corbett commented. "That (negotiations) could go on into the summer."

He pointed out the health unit is short-staffed at present and has budgeted for a clerk, dental hygenist and other public health nurses plus funding for new health programs which require ministry approval.

The health board has decided to send a delegation to the ministry, Mr. Corbett commented. Mr. Colton and board members to convince the ministry to change its policy.

Mr. Colton noted the board will attempt to secure the support of both counties provincial members of parliament for added clout.

As for talks between the health board and its 30 nurses, they have gone to conciliation, Mr. Corbett said the provincial ministry of labor has appointed Paul C. Gardner as conciliation officer to meet with both parties and endeavor to effect a collective agreement between them.

Mr. Gardner will hold his first meeting on May 28 at 10 a.m. in the Four Seasons Hotel.

Re-opening of Mine to Inject $1.5 Million into Bancroft Area

By NAN WHITLAW
Staff Reporter

BANCROFT — The future planning, growth and development of North Hastings received the attentions of local secondary school students, members of the community and area politicians during a lunchtime seminar held here Thursday.

The seminar, which had been organized by the North Hastings High School geography department, dealt with the housing developments at Stanrock, near Cox Hill, and with the Faraday Heights subdivision in the village as well as with the Hastings County Plan, future commercial development within Bancroft, the opening of Faraday mine and provincial park and forestry development.

In referring to the Faraday Heights enlarged subdivision in Bancroft, Gordon Wainwright of Bowes and Cockle Realty said "75-100 additional homes will be built in the area in five phases with the first homes ready in four to six months".

Mr. Wainwright indicated that the normal development of the village along with the expected influx of mining families indicate that there is a need for the subdivision.

Jack Hattin, former reeve of Bancroft, said the influx of mining families will add another $1.5 million to the local economy.

Mr. Hattin said "The Bancroft area has to be considered in the future development for the miners and their families, because provincial statistics indicate that a subdivision has to be accessible to shopping and other facilities."

Mr. Hattin also said that the management of the Faraday mine had no intention of providing housing for the employees this time and that the miners would be encouraged to purchase or rent their own accomodation.

Also speaking at the seminar was Faraday Reeve Jack MacKenzie and former warden of the county.

Mr. MacKenzie said that it is now time for the various municipalities of North Hastings to consider a merger of the municipal governments.

"What affects one municipality in the North Hastings affects them all," said the Faraday Reeve.

Also present at the seminar were Mr. Hunt, recent appointee to the Ontario Provincial Parks Council and Frank Walter of the ministry of natural resources forestry division.

Planner Warns County Tourism Shaky Base

BANCROFT — The planner for Hastings County, Niall Carney told a group of Secondary School students and community members at a seminar held here Thursday that "I am not a prophet and I don't know what we'll be doing in the next 30 years, but I do know that we can see from today what might arise tomorrow."

Mr. Carney was speaking during a seminar organized by the geography department of the local high school about the future of Hastings County within the setting of Ontario.

"A great degree of change is at work within the county, said the local planner, caused by the mechanization of farming, the urbanization of agricultural land and the movement of people to the rural environment.

"There's a lot of beautiful land in Hastings," Mr. Carney said, "and it is within a two-hour drive of a very large population centre."

Mr. Carney indicated the Hastings County is regarded by most as being a "recreational" area and most of the lakes are developed with cottages. He believes will the population of the next 10 years go to places in the north.

According to the proposed official plan for the county, the prime recreational lakes in the county will be in a cluster vote or more commercially developed recreational areas.

"We can't afford the development of land locked lakes," said Mr. Carney. "Lakes are part of the public domain."

Mr. Carney said Hastings is supposed to be a tourist area; however, industry is not providing jobs on a continuing basis nor is it improving the economy.

"The official plan for the county sets a tourist industry, but not just in cottages. That's why there are certain lakes which are designated for commercial development.

Mr. Carney indicated to the group that the plan, although it must be reviewed every five years and can be amended as the need arises.

Society Screens Old Film

Members of the Hastings County Historical Society will have an opportunity to relive life in the Victorian mid-west era United States Tuesday when they will view the Orson Welles classic, The Magnificent Ambersons.

Few people realize the Hastings County Museum (Glanmore House) at 257 East Bridge St. on the evening will be held at 8 p.m., dates back to the same era as depicted in the film.

A post format during meetings will be re-introduced for the final session of the year prior to the summer vacation on June 3 in a drop-and-dine segment which will see members bring an object and be prepared to talk about it.

In other society news, honorary life membships have been granted to Duncan MacDonald and Barbara Ritchie for their contributions to the success of Glanmore House.

Still Attractive

St. Thomas' Anglican Church on the corner of Church and East Bridge streets stands damaged by fire but it still is attractive to artists, especially students who require a subject for their class. A Grade Nine student at Belleville Collegiate Institute found such a use this week with the church as a subject for her acrylic painting.

Future Discussed

Guest panelists at a seminar held in Bancroft on Thursday included county planner Niall Carney, Ivan Fowler, member of the Land Division committee, moderator Ernie Carswell, North Hastings High School student Brad Doney and local teacher Dave Hobson, who is also the provincial riding Liberal candidate.

High School Addition Includes New Classrooms, Triple Gym

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

The $1.6 million addition to Moira Secondary School is expected to be completed by August — just in time for the school's 1,320 student enrollment this fall.

Keith Hawkins, controller of plant for the Hastings County Board of Education, said Thursday work on the site is proceeding according to schedule and many of the site problems have been overcome.

Mr. Hawkins said the current construction work is part of a two-phase program which will bring the total square footage of the high school to about 11,000 to 140,000. The addition will increase the size of the school by 33 per cent.

The first phase, which involved alterations to existing facilities, was started in 1973 and completed by 1973. This first phase cost about $300,000.

The board in 1971 estimated that the total renovations and additions would cost about $1 million. However, since that decision the high rate of inflation has skyrocketed this figure close to $1.6 million for both phases.

Mr. Hawkins said the impetus for the addition came early in 1971 when the board felt there was a great demand from the community for improved facilities, including a theatre-arts section. Board officials also felt the facilities were cramping both staff and students in their academic endeavors.

The new addition, being constructed by Charles Nolan Ltd., a Toronto firm, will contain a triple gymnasium, a music room, four new classrooms and agricultural rooms with a greenhouse. It is expected the community will make use of these facilities.

The board is also anticipating a high growth factor in Belleville's east end. Moira is the only secondary school serving this part of the city. Belleville Collegiate Institute is the closest school to Moira Secondary School.

Mr. Hawkins said the old gymnasium will be renovated into a new resource library facility with adjoining reading rooms and study.

Members Required

Julie Carty, president of the Hastings County Historical Society, says the society's board of directors "are vitally concerned about the well-being of our society".

"Attendance at a recent general meeting has been minimal," she points out. "Committees are functioning at less than peak efficiency owing to limited committee membership."

Mrs. Carty emphasizes members must do their part in contribution to the function of the society so that it can "be an active force within our county".

She urges members to "tell others about the society's existence".

Insurance Gets Check

The Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Board of Health will investigate the status of liability insurance on its members following news that the Toronto Board of Health is in the throes of a lawsuit, says Clifford R. Colton, business administrator and secretary-treasurer for the counties health unit.

Mr. Colton told a board meeting this week he is checking with the board's insurance company. He said the board is covered with public liability and professional insurance.

Aid. Stan Smith of Belleville, a board member and newly-elected to the Association of Boards of Health of Ontario (ABHO), related the Toronto situation was discussed at length during the ABHO annual convention.

Mobile Home Robbed

A mobile home parked at Elliott Motors was broken into Thursday night, city police report, and an AM-FM stereo system valued at $475 was stolen. Investigation continues.

Police Urge Caution On Holiday Weekend

If 1974 Victoria Day statistics are any guideline, 25 people will die on Ontario Highways over the long weekend beginning today.

"And that's exactly 25 too many," states a provincial ministry of transportation and communications spokesman, who urges all motorists to "go safely" — not only this weekend but throughout the year.

The Victoria Day weekend is the traditional opening of the summer season. And with it is addition the to the 25 fatalities during the 1974 long weekend, another 28 were seriously injured.

Unhappily, it's also the time of year when ministry statisticians register big increases in the number of injuries and fatalities resulting from motor accidents.

Accidents are not simply accidents. Research proves conclusively, they result from poor driving judgement, motorists driving unsafe automobiles, even aggressive drivers who won't or don't yield the right-of-way.

If motorists would remember that they too could be victims, perhaps they would all drive to survive.

In addition the to 25 fatalities during the 1974 long weekend, another 28 were seriously injured.

Nature Lover

Corby Park once again is emerging as the horticultural showcase of the city as the first blooms poke their color through the greenery. One who took notice of such spring things is one and a half year old Bruce Latter this spring roses — the trademark of the park on William St. — will come into bloosom, the result of a major re-planting program.

Teachers Plan Candidates Night to Express Views

County elementary and secondary school teachers will jointly sponsor an all-candidates night as a part of their policy to gather and disperse information to the voters of Hastings.

Representatives from the area division of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers Federation (OSSTF) and the Ontario Public School Men's Teachers Federation (OPSMTF) met with county political parties last night at Bayside Secondary School.

Hastings division president of the OSSTF Jude Carty said both the Liberal and NDP party organizers attended the meeting but Conservative party officials failed to attend.

Last week representatives from the Ontario Teachers Federation (OTF), the parent group for the other federations, decided not to support any one political party in the next provincial election but to act as an information gathering and dispensing agency for area voters.

Mrs. Carty said the meeting was held to inform all party organizers of the concerns of teachers in Hastings County. She said the teachers will be interested in non-educational issues as well. Bayside public school teacher Wayne Wickson represented the OPSMTF.

Marksmen Frustrated, Sabres Fall 4-1

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — It was a weird night for Buffalo Sabres. It's something they should expect when they meet Philadelphia Flyers in the Spectrum.

The Sabres dotted the defending Stanley Cup champions 32-10 in the first periods but couldn't score against goalie Bernie Parent who led the Flyers to a 4-1 triumph Thursday night.

The win, before 17,007 fans, gave the Flyers a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven National Hockey League playoff final with the second game here Saturday afternoon starting at 3:30 p.m. EDT.

Left winger Bill Barber scored two goals for the winners. His first came at 2:42 of the final period to stop a scoreless tie.

Goalie Gerry Desjardins of the Sabres was handcuffed on the play when defenceman Ed Van Impe fired a shot from the blue line that went past the left side of the net. Desjardins turned to his right, looking for the puck to come out on that side but it bounced on the left and Barber knocked it into the open net.

"Our forwards outplayed them, our defence outplayed them, but their goalie outplayed us," Desjardins said. "Parent played a hell of a game."

Commenting on his saves in the first period, Parent said: "The breakaways were when (Tim) Perreault cut in front when they had the puck. You have to be lucky when it's one-on-three to stop five or six shots.

The loss kept the Sabres winless at the Spectrum since joining the league in 1970. Counting Thursday's game, the Sabres have lost 13 and tied two in Philadelphia. Buffalo hasn't beaten the Flyers at home or here in the last 14 league, exhibition and playoff games dating back to March 28, 1973.

Barber got the Flyers started and they added two more goals on power plays, one by Ross Lonsberry and the other by Bobby Clarke before Barber got his second and an empty net at 19:32 of the final period with Desjardins out for an extra attacker.

Rick Martin scored the lone goal for the Sabres who were playing their first game since May 4 when they eliminated the Montreal Canadiens in the semi-finals. The Flyers defeated New York Islanders in the seven game of their semi-final series Tuesday.

Martin scored on a power play with Don Luce in the penalty box and the Sabres trailing 3-0 at 11:07 of the third period. However, Clarke made it 3-1 less than a minute later when he was with a teammate in the Buffalo end and beat Desjardins after pulling the goalie out of position.

"We weren't outplayed in the first two periods," said Philadelphia coach Fred Shero. "I'll show you the films. What did they do except on the power play? Parent was the difference."

Philadelphia's Dave Schultz took two minor penalties in a scuffle with Buffalo's Danny Gare in the second period and set a career record for playoff penalty minutes. He now has a total of 364 minutes in his playoff games over three years. The previous record of 350 minutes was held by former Montreal Canadiens scrapper John Ferguson in seven years and 83 games.

"We played pretty well in the first two periods but they got a lucky goal and going and Parfalo coach Floyd Smith. "Until they scored the goal, they weren't going anywhere.

"We couldn't put the puck in the net, then we gave up the first goal and then we gave up a couple of easy ones and that was it.

"We had some excellent chances. We didn't put them in and we made a few mental mistakes in the third period and that's what hurt."

Bernie Parent – Too Much for Buffalo

Penalties Could Hurt Agree Philadelphia Players

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — There was general agreement in the Philadelphia Flyers dressing room Thursday night that the club had better watch the number of penalties they take against Buffalo Sabres in their Stanley Cup final series.

The Flyers took nine of 15 minor penalties assessed by referee Art Skov but still managed to win the opener of the best-of-seven National Hockey League final 4-1 Thursday night.

"I think we've been successful this year without taking as many penalties as last year," said Flyers captain Bobby Clarke.

"I think they (Buffalo) have a tremendous power play. Any time you take a bad penalty against them, it could cost you.

"We had to kill a few penalties tonight and that took away from our offence. We looked a little tired night, too, but with a couple of days rest we'll be stronger."

Philadelphia was assessed eight of their nine penalties in the first two periods and, for a 94-second span in the opening period, had two on in the penalty box. But goalie Bernie Parent was outstanding, stopping five of Buffalo's eight first-period shots during the skater-on.

"We were a little bit tired after that seven-game series against the Islanders," Parent said. "But then again, we came back strong in the third period. I think on Sunday, we'll play the same way in all three periods.

"In the first two periods we didn't forecheck, we let out our game to sit back. In the third period we came out and played our style."

Most people in both dressing rooms after the game thought Bill Barber's goal at 2:42 of the third period which broke a scoreless tie was a turning point for the Flyers.

But Philadelphia coach Fred Shero did not agree that his Flyers were playing badly in the first two periods when they managed a total of 10 shots, including only two on the power play.

"Sure, we were outshot," said Shero, "but we were short-handed a lot. I think we had an edge in territorial play."

Hawley Credits Work of Agents

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Sandy Hawley, who rides Native Jim in the Preakness on Saturday, says the work of his agents responsible for his record-setting pace at Hollywood Park.

"My agents have done a really good job getting the mounts for me," says the Mississauga, Ont., rider. "It's the horses that make the ride. You have to ride hard, but if you put some live mounts, you're going to win some races."

"I don't think I do anything that much better than anybody else," says the North American riding champion of 1971, 1972 and 1973 who has scored 37 victories in 35 days at Hollywood Park to Bobby Ussery's record of 146 victories at the 76 day meeting.

"I just try to get a horse to relax as much as I can. I don't try to rush them into something they're not ready for as that we'll both have more energy for the finish or whenever else we need it.

"He thinks very well," says Jerry Fanelli, Hollywood Park publicist. "Willie Shoemaker says he isn't the best jockey he's ever seen, but he's one of the best jockeys."

"That's the key to his success. You've got to see it every day to understand it. He never gets flustered."

It was Sandy who first lured Hawley to the West. Until 1972, Hawley had ridden on the Ontario Jockey Club circuit with Bridgewater's Hall of Fame inductee Sam Boyd at Woodbine tracks. Then Benoit saw

SANDY HAWLEY

Hawley ride at Oaklawn Park in Arkansas in 1973.

"We couldn't promise him anything," Benoit recalls, "But we told him if he did that he had a chance for bigger purses out there than he's ever raced for."

"And, frankly, we believed he'd make it. He had talent, he was willing to work hard, he could ride as light as you wanted him to ride, he knew physics can do, and he was a gentleman of the highest order. He was very likable."

At Hollywood Park he has ridden more than twice the winners of second place jockey Fernando Toro, with 34 and 14 multiple wining days have come as frequently that writers and fans have dubbed the track the "Hawley Park" instead of its nickname, "Hollypark."

Top Draft Choice

Two Leagues Select 16-year-old Trapper

TORONTO (CP) — Gaston Gingras, a 16-year-old centre with North Bay Trappers of the Ontario Hockey Association Provincial Junior A League, was selected Thursday as the first-round draft choice by two leagues.

The midget-aged Temiscaming native was selected by Kitchener Rangers during the 11-team Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series. Earlier in the day Holl Festivals of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League also chose him.

A total of 298 players, the majority between 16 and 17 years old, were selected in the 1975 OHA midget priority draft. Cornwall Royals chose in the second draft—the only QMJHL team to do so because the team resides in Ontario.

The QJMHL draft was held earlier Thursday in Montreal.

Although Gingras' family lives in Quebec, Ranger president Ted Mahl says the player is legally a resident of North Bay.

"As far as we're concerned he's Ontario property," he said after the draft. "We have his release from North Bay . . . and we have him on one of our contracts.

"I'm sure there'll be a lot of mud slinging over this."

OHA commissioner Clarence Schmalz said a QJMHL representative contacted him Thursday "and said he knew there was going to be trouble" over Gingras.

Meanwhile, Gingras said Thursday he would rather play in the OHA.

"I have always played hockey under an Ontario card," he said. "I played eight years of minor hockey in Temiscaming but we always compete in Ontario leagues.

"I feel the leagues in Ontario are better, that's why I want to be in Ontario," said the six-foot, 180-pound defenceman.

Gingras had 11 goals and 37 points in 41 regular season games last season.

Seven midget-age players were drafted in the first three rounds Thursday. Under OHA rules, each club may draft one player who has five seasons junior playing eligibility.

Windsor Spitfires, an expansion franchise which begins operation this fall, took 44 players in the draft.

Frank Boucelle, manager of the Memorial Cup winning Toronto Marlboros, picked up two centres in the draft—Scott Neubough of Simcoe Junior C series and Robert Gartner of Barrie Colts.

Peterborough Petes picked Raymond Martkin from Wilcox Lake, as their 22nd choice. Oshawa Generals took Dave Hunt, a Newmarket player, as their 17th choice.

Walter Shoaer, general manager and coach of Kingston Canadians, also is impressed with his team's first draft choice—Tim Stitzer of the Elmira, Ont., Junior B club and brother of Darryl of Toronto Marlboros and of National Hockey League.

"We need right wingers and in getting Tim Stitzer we've got a very promising hockey player," he said.

"He'll probably be about the same size as his brother Darryl. He's got to fill out a little more yet but he has gets a lot of goals and points."

Aaron Finds Range for Brewers

Milwaukee Finally Gets Past Rangers

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It took Milwaukee Brewers 22 minutes Thursday night to accomplish what they couldn't do in three hours and 39 minutes the previous night—beat Texas Rangers.

After battling 14 innings and nearly four hours to a 3-3 stand-off Wednesday night before an American League curfew forced a suspension of play, the Brewers and Rangers returned to pick up where they left off.

It took just one more inning for Milwaukee to emerge with a 5-3 triumph when Texas reliever Jackie Brown walked two batters, committed a two-out error to load the bases and then hit on Money with a two-strike pitch, forcing in the winning run.

Then, they went on to the regularly-scheduled contest and Milwaukee got just one hit, with Hank Aaron contributing a three-run homer and a sacrifice fly.

Elsewhere in the AL, Kansas City Royals blanked Boston Red Sox 2-0 behind Steve Busby's four-hitter and Minnesota Twins edged Cleveland Indians 7-6 on Rod Carew's ninth-inning single.

In the National League, Philadelphia Phillies swept a twi-night doubleheader from Chicago Cubs downed Houston Astros 4-3, Montreal Expos and Atlanta Braves were rained out and Montreal Expos hammered Atlanta leading 4-1 on two-run homers by Darrell Evans and Dave May.

Aaron's 398-foot homer, his fourth of the season, capped a four-run fifth inning which included a run-scoring triple by Bobby Mitchell, who also hoved and singled, and gave the Brewers a 7-1 lead.

The barring the pitchers but Ive still got a lot to learn," said the 41-year-old Aaron, who spent 21 years in the National League.

Pete Broberg, dealt away by the Rangers last December following a 0-4 season, earned the victory with last our belp from Ed Rodriguez.

Brown came on to start the 15th inning of the suspended game and issued a leadoff walk to Aaron. Lezcano sacrificed and Darrell Porter was given an intentional walk. After Pedro Garcia struck out, Brown hobbled Tim Johnson's grounder, loading the bases. Then he hit Money, ending the Rangers' five-game winning streak.

Kansas City scored no unearned run in the sixth off Boston ace Luis Tiant, 3-5. With two out, Hal McRae was hit by a pitch after his foul pop dropped between Boston catcher Bob Montgomery and first baseman Carl Yastrzemski in a fielding.

McRae attempted to steal second and appeared out by 30 feet on Montgomery's throw. However, shortstop Rick Burleson dropped the ball while applying the tag and was charged with an error. After John Mayberry walked, Harmon Killebrew blooped a single to shallow right center, scoring McRae.

The Royals added two runs in the seventh on a double by Al Cowens, a bunt single by Fred Patek and singles by Buck Martinez and Vada Pinson.

Cleveland reliever Jim Perry walked Steve Braun to start the sixth and pitch runner Dan Ford was sacrificed to second. After an intentional walk to Danny Walton, Dave La Roche came on and fanned Tony Oliva but Carew then hit his ninth winning single to centre field.

Philadelphia's Dave Cash beat third baseman Tim Foli's throw to the plate on Gerry Mackey grounder in the second inning of the nightcap to break a tie. The Phillies had the opener when pinch hitter Ollie Brown's three-run homer off Don Gullett with two out capped a four-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Cash reached second with out out in the seventh inning of the nightcap when shortstop Dave Concepcion threw his throw past first base. He moved to third on Larry Bowa's single and slid under catcher Johnny Bench's tag on Madlock's grounder.

Philadelphia also used a two-base error by centre fielder Cesar Geronimo to win the opener. The error made all four ninth-inning runs unearned.

The Cub Tim Foster hit a the breaking two run double in the ninth inning to back off Ron Reed's three-hit pitching of Rick Reuschel. Three Philadelphia runs were unearned.

Hoosier's double off J.R. Richard drove in Jerry Morales, who led off the eighth with a walk and Pete LaCock, who followed with a bunt single. Rick Monday's ninth-inning homer tied the score 3-2.

Indiana Nipped 95-93 By Kentucky Colonels

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Artis Gilmore's basket with five seconds left in the game Thursday night carried the Kentucky Colonels to a 95-93 victory over Indiana in the American Basketball Association final playoff series.

At that time, Indiana's Billy Keller fired one from outside the circle and connected, but officials ruled it was too late, ending all a dispute.

Indiana coach Bobby Leonard came in the floor, saying that the basket was good, that it had gone through before the buzzer. While moments, a crowd had collected around the scorers table and police moved in to break it up.

Until Gilmore's final basket, had been held to 19 Dropsie by the Indiana defense.

The game was tied to 30 for the Pacers and Kevin Joyce added 16.

The teams now move to Indianapolis to resume the best-of-seven series.

With 1:30 to go, Indiana's Roger Brown connected from the corner to make it, 93-91 and McGinnis tied the score with 50 seconds left.

With 23 seconds left, Indiana had possession but lost the ball in its own court on a bad pass and Kentucky took over, with 19 seconds remaining.

Top scorers for the Colonels were Dan Issel with 22 and Henry Roberts with 16, followed by Louie Dampier with 15.

Indiana was placed 20-45 at halftime and during those first two periods McGinnis scored seven points for the Pacers to back strong in the final two periods to spark Indiana's closing drive.

Billy Knight and Brown finished with 18 each for Indiana.

Brenner to Bombers

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats said Thursday they have traded the Canadian Football League's negotiating rights of defensive halfback Al Brenner to Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

AL BRENNER

In return, the Ticats received linebacker Bruce Bennett, a rookie who signed with the Bombers this season after a tryout in 1974 with Detroit Lions of the National Football League, and Brian Lazarenko, who "hasn't been paid of the trade yet."

Although Brenner wasn't available for comment on the trade, Tiger-Cats manager Ralph Sazio said he "tried to do what was best for the boy" by sending the personal all-star to Winnipeg.

Brenner, 27, who holds the CFL record of 15 interceptions in one season, currently is retired from the league, his latest move in contract negotiations with the Eastern Football Conference.

By putting his name on the league's reserve roster, he before June 15, Brenner could still play this season. He was facing the option year of his contract with the Ticats which expired after the 1974 season.

The former Michigan State grad was an all-star on both the Canadian and Eastern all-star teams in 1973 and was named to the Eastern all-stars in 1974.

Milwaukee Finally Gets Past Rangers

It took Milwaukee Brewers 22 minutes Thursday night to accomplish what they couldn't do in three hours and 39 minutes the previous night—beat Texas Rangers.

After battling 14 innings and nearly four hours to a 3-3 stand-off Wednesday night before an American League curfew forced a suspension of play, the Brewers and Rangers returned to pick up where they left off.

Aaron's 398-foot homer, his fourth of the season, capped a four-run fifth inning which included a run-scoring triple by Bobby Mitchell, who also hoved and singled, and gave the Brewers a 7-1 lead.

"I'm barring the pitchers but Ive still got a lot to learn," said the 41-year-old Aaron, who spent 21 years in the National League.

Pete Broberg, dealt away by the Rangers last December following a 0-4 season, earned the victory with last our belp from Ed Rodriguez.

Cleveland reliever Jim Perry walked Steve Braun to start the sixth and pitch runner Dan Ford was sacrificed to second. After an intentional walk to Danny Walton, Dave La Roche came on and fanned Tony Oliva but Carew then hit his ninth winning single to centre field.

Philadelphia's Dave Cash beat third baseman Tim Foli's throw to the plate on Gerry Mackey grounder in the second inning of the nightcap to break a tie. The Phillies had the opener when pinch hitter Ollie Brown's three-run homer off Don Gullett with two out capped a four-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Cash reached second with out out in the seventh inning of the nightcap when shortstop Dave Concepcion threw his throw past first base. He moved to third on Larry Bowa's single and slid under catcher Johnny Bench's tag on Madlock's grounder.

Philadelphia also used a two-base error by centre fielder Cesar Geronimo to win the opener. The error made all four ninth-inning runs unearned.

The Cub Tim Foster hit a the breaking two run double in the ninth inning to back off Ron Reed's three-hit pitching of Rick Reuschel. Three Philadelphia runs were unearned.

Hoosier's double off J.R. Richard drove in Jerry Morales, who led off the eighth with a walk and Pete LaCock, who followed with a bunt single. Rick Monday's ninth-inning homer tied the score 3-2.

2 Countries Fight To Stay in Olympics

ROME (AP) — Taiwan and Rhodesia, two little territories with political problems, faced the first stage today of their fight to stay in the Olympic Games.

Both were due to be discussed at a meeting involving the executive of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) and the Assembly of National Olympic Committees.

Taiwan is in danger of being ousted by mainland China. The Chinese have applied to the IOC for recognition, on condition that recognition is withdrawn from Taiwan.

Rhodesia is the subject of a long report by a three-man commission of the IOC which visited the country. The report needs at lack of equipment and sports opportunities for black Rhodesians.

Both matters are due to be decided by the IOC at its annual congress at Lausanne, Switzerland, next week. The assembly of national governments has no authority to make a decision, but its views could sway influence the IOC.

Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, said China will be treated the same as any other country wanting to join the Olympics.

The IOC has first to satisfy itself that the All-China Sports Federation, which made the application, conforms to Olympic qualifications.

Rhodesia was the subject of a bitter controversy in the IOC at Munich in 1972. It was locked out of the Munich Olympics. And the Council of Sport for Africa takes the same hard line against Rhodesia now.

The Rhodesian problem first arose after the African country had rebelled against British rule and proclaimed its independence. The IOC tried to make a compromise by allowing Rhodesians to compete in the 1972 games with British passports.

At the eleventh hour, the African countries threatened to walk out in protest. The IOC leaders want to make a final decision on Rhodesia now and to avoid a repetition of the scenes at Munich.

Many observers believe there is enough in the report in Rhodesia to get it drummed out of the Games, or South Africa was five years ago.

Without Co-operation We're All in Trouble

With summer sports off and running it seems appropriate and about to get up a full head of steam in many sports, now is as good a time as any (and better than most) to put our cards on the table.

This column is organized largely continues to grow. And with that healthy growth, there is a corresponding increased demand on the time and energy of the sports department.

Without dwelling on the problems we face, suffice it to say we're human.

More than ever, there is the need for co-operation from all the leagues.

Already we have a problem with the Quinte Lacrosse Association.

Game reports are slow to come in.

Others come with only the winning team's scorers included.

This won't do.

But at the moment, we'll take the excuse that it's early in the season and some rough wrinkles remain to be ironed out.

If we work, we get tough.

If game reports are not forthcoming on time, we won't send them.

If we can't have all games reported, we don't want any of them.

All leagues are hereby notified that this policy will now be taken when appealing those reports are not forthcoming. Many of the people who accept the appointments are not doing much by way of work — never mind a salary.

Don't let them off with complaints when your league is missing from the Sport Check to make sure who is responsible.

If they don't do their satisfaction that way, start a petition to have them replaced.

But before you do anything, remember that those appointees who are happy with this department are the ones who realize that co-operation is a two-way street.

SLIZE — or Sleeze to me, the Quinte Football League (QFL) opens Monday. Still no schedule, man. How about it?

And the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League got another season under way, Monday. Can't good luck to Donna Lucas and the other energetic members of the executive — we've had that schedule for going time now.

Looks as if Ellis Juniors are ready to make them all sit and take notice in the QFL. The squad each exhibition wins over Deseriks Mohawk and Howard and Robert Printing.

The Ellis Sealtite-coached juniors are raising eyebrows.

Don't forget, Victoria Day fireworks are on at Maxport this weekend.

Also on the Bulova Championship title holders David Lerfel and Tonto Bowlers are slated to return to the arena which this weekend moves into the second round of the seven-race series for Formula 125 and 2.5 sedans.

But spectators play the dominant role with Steve Baker, Ameliasburgh, leading the two-wheeled fraternity. He took a pair of firsts in the races entered during the 1974 Motocross Grand Prix of Canada.

Additional campsites are under construction at several existing provincial parks, included on the list of new hideaways are Bon Echo, Killbear, Fairbank and Rene Lake.

Remember a discourse on youth in the National Baseball League? Well, just in case you're informed that the youngest player in the Major Leagues is Expos' right-hander Dennis Blair.

Junior citizens in the league are St. Louis Cardinals' Bob Forsch and Cincinnati Reds' Jim Trey Taylor. Both are 19 years old.

How old is Blair?

Well, say dear, he'll be 21, June 3.

How about this for a theory? Chicago Cubs' (they're in first place) Rick Reuschel (in case you hadn't noticed) Bob Locker and Pete Broberg tell you theory issue: Locker's Law: Reuschel's results tend to stay in motion.

Cincinnati Red's Star Pete Rose on baseball: "The game requires more of the mental challenges of any sport. It's the most individual team sport there is.

"In basketball, you have guys setting picks for you. In football, you have guys blocking for you. But in baseball, no one can help you hit the ball and no one can help you catch it."

Switch back to local, you say?

Glad to.

But someone may be sorry.

Remember that exhibition softball — turned — baseball game featuring CJBQ-C/NH (they've got a name but who knows what they're using today?) and the executive and coaches of the Belleville Minor Baseball Association?

Well, it happened. It was. We couldn't be there.

And although organizers say it we were armed with the ammunition to help promote the match, no one has bothered to let us know what happened now that it's history.

Cranky today, aren't I?

Slow Down Ball!

Thomas Maxwell, an inside forward with the Belleville Olympics breaks in on Quinte Bowlers' goalkeeper Angelo Haghristos in a slide-foward while the Belleville Olympics breaks in on Quinte Bowlers' goalkeeper Angelo Haghristos in the Quinte Soccer League contest in Trenton. Maxwell couldn't quite catch up with the ball as the goalie came out to scoop it up. The Olympic attacker didn't have to worry about putting any balls past Haghristos during his brief appearance. Haghristos had two anyway. The Olympics won the contest 3-0.

Olympics Blank Hellenics 2-0

TRENTON — Many soccer enthusiasts, looking forward to the first meeting of the season between Quinte Bowlers and Belleville Olympics, had to settle for an abbreviated exhibition match here last night.

Referee Bob Arsenault called the scheduled Bay of Quinte Soccer Association game off. He had no other choice when it was discovered that several piles of fill placed in Centennial Park were on the playing area.

Arsenault agreed to referee when the two team captains decided to play an exhibition game.

But in the second half, the referee called a halt to proceedings after sending a Bellevile player from the game. Olympics led 2-0 when the match was halted.

Chris Johnson opened the scoring in the game just before the intermission.

Zdravko Pundic completed the scoring when he slipped from the penalty spot, late in the second half.

Gary Donovan, in goal for the winners, wasn't tested often but earned his shutout with a fine save early in the game.

Centre half Billy Lucas was a standout for Olympics.

Wednesday, Belleville Panzas and Quinte Italo-Canadians made their first league starts winning.

Playing at Centennial Secondary School, Panzas had half of a late Canadian Forces Base Trenton drive and hung on for a 3-2 win when they met Park in Trenton, Italo topped Brighton 3-1.

Parsons scored the only goal of the first half for Panzas when Belleville squad added a pair early in the second 45-minute period. It appeared to be all over for Park.

Injuries took their toll on Parsons and CFB fought back to pull to within a goal. It was it close.

The winners got two goals from Tommy Brittain and one by Ross MacLeod.

Joe Iannone's goal from the penalty spot gave Italo the lead. Brighton was looking for in the win over Brighton.

After opening up a 3-0 lead in the first 15 minutes of play on goals by Nick Del Grande and Sterling Wilson, Italo got an argument from the Brighton side which narrowed the gap on John Thompson's counter and remained in contention until Iannone swapped it up with about 10 minutes to play.

BCI Dumps Napanee

Belleville Collegiate Institute put it all together on its home field, Thursday, coming up with a high-paced offense and an airtight defence to blank Napanee and District Secondary School 11-0 in Bay of Quinte High School Lacrosse League action.

Gord Wilcox and Steve Deacon each scored three times.

Robert Thompson earned three assists. Scored Van Vliet had two helpers.

Sharing the credit for the shutout were Gary Donovan and Duncan Boyce.

Earlier in the week, Quinte Secondary School scored a record from behind 7-6 win over Centennial Secondary School. The teams are tied for the lead in the west division.

Tom Lucas captain Roger Chapman led Quinte with four goals.

DeBUSSCHERE NAMED

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave DeBusschere, 34, former all-star player, coach and, most recently general manager and vice president of New York Knicks, Thursday became the seventh commissioner in the eight-year history of the American basketball Association and the youngest commissioner in the history of professional basketball.

BISL First Innings Decisive

It was a night where first innings made the difference in games. The Intelligencer scored seven runs in the first frame and went on to defeat the Lenders 16-14 and the Independents rolled up eight runs in the first inning of their game and finished up on the long end of an 11-6 score over Canadian Tire. The third Industrial League contest scheduled to go Thursday night was cancelled.

Greg Bellis ad Colton split the duties on the Intelligencer mound. The pair combined for five strikeouts and two walks while giving up just three hits in the defeat.

John French and Andy Prudon threw for the losers. French took the loss in the first inning.

Ken Bertrand and Paul Trumpour punched out a double and a single apiece to top the winners attack and Doug McKay added a double.

Ron Colloden went the distance on the Indell mound as his teammates crashed out 13 hits and took five walks off the losers, Marr and Wellman.

Bill Cooney gave Colloden all the support he needed—with a home run and a pair of singles. Fred Stickle had a double and two singles and Tony Goncalves and Glynn Reynolds added a single and a double each.

John Maloney was tops for the Lenders with a four-sacker and a pair of singles. Bob Ostrander had a homer and double and Minnaker had a home run and a single.

Bill Cooney, Intelligencer first baseman, just missed on this attempt to pick off the Lenders Wayne Marr. Cooney not only played soundly defensively, but also crashed a home run and a pair of singles for the Intel as they outlasted the Lenders 16 - 14 in Thursday night's Industrial Softball League contest.

Harness Racing More Than Meets the Eye

By DOUG JEFFRIES

Harness Racing means much to many people. For most, it's a way of life.

Have you ever stopped to think about the sport?

It seems to be stereotyped into a spot for betting, for the sole purpose of gambling and gain. Some probably feel the sport is a vice, while by far business whose sole interest is capital gain.

Not true. The Quinte Exhibition Raceway (QER) is a non-profit organization primarily interested in providing a community service. Officials are from Belleville and area.

By Mrs. Richard Alden Knight

The schedule of Solar Periods, as printed below, has been taken from Mrs. Richard Alden Knight's Solar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory or hoeing in good soil. Observe these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

Use Eastern Daylight Saving Time.

| May 17 - 25. | Major | Minor | Minor | Major |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Saturday | 11.10 | 5.30 | 11.40 | 6.00 |
| Sunday | 6.30 | 12.15 | 6.55 | |
| Monday | 12.40 | 7.15 | 1.10 | 7.40 |
| Tuesday | 8.05 | 1.35 | 8.30 | 2.00 |
| Wednesday | 2.18 | 8.54 | 2.42 | 9.15 |
| Thursday | 9.40 | 3.35 | 3.30 | 10.05 |

| Sunday | 5.30 | | 6.00 | 12.10 |

to meet legislative demands and operating costs totally unassisted.

For instance, $840,000 was wagered in the 1974 racing season. Of that amount, 85 cents of every dollar is returned to the bettor. Of the 15 cents, the federal and provincial government takes seven-tenths of a penny. That leaves the raceway with a profit of only 13 and three-tenths cents on every dollar spent.

On a night when $80,000 is spent, the raceway grosses approximately $1,000.

No racetrack in North America can break even on the betting alone. They depend highly on their gate admission, and concessions, to break even.

Harness Racing is one of the few sports in the city that tabulates attendance. Records show last year there was an attendance average of 700.

There have been a number of top class horses which have raced at the Belleville track. Ali Vant, Ontario Dominion" is just one prime example. Families in the area such as the Wannamakers and the Zebedee's all breed top notch racers.

Harness Racing is known as an industry. Many people live off the sport. Farmer's sell their products of hay, oats, grain. The companies who make the harnesses and the reins and the blacksmith whose job depends on the sport, are vital to the operation.

The QER last year paved out $24,000 for local maintenance help. They employed five full time helpers, and about 75 part time employees, who were mostly students in need of jobs.

They helped the community. The sport means so much to so many people that officials want to keep the industry alive in Belleville.

BCI Girls 2 for 2

In the B contest, Nicholson got a hard earned victory on Jennifer Harvey's two goals Add six point.

Opening lead — 9 ♦

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Hard luck Joe won the disrood lead and wasted no time with the next couple of plays. They were a trump to dummy and a club back toward his hand.

East played low and after a little thought Joe played the jack of clubs. West plunked on the queen and shifted to a trump. This left Joe with three clubs in his hand and only two trumps in dummy to ruff them with and he wound up in his usual spot—the sink can.

"Drat, darn and deleted," muttered Joe. "Such club honors wrong and West had to lead a trump. I'd play backgammon for my luck would probably be just as bad at that game."

If West's opening lead had been a trump instead of a diamond, Joe would have been entitled to complain. That would have been real hard luck. After West opened opening Joe had no one to blame but himself. He should have led a low club from his hand at trick two. After that play there would have been no way for the defence to get in two rounds of trumps: Joe would get to ruff his last three clubs in dummy and the rest would shine.

To Your Good Health

Baby's Slow Gain No Real Problem

By G. C. THOMPSON, MD

Dear Dr. Thompson: My daughter has a 2-year-old child. She is breastfeeding. The baby weighed eight pounds at birth, and just since she was first three days in the hospital. By the time he was 3½ weeks old he had lost a total of 18 ounces.

He seems to be listless and drowsy most of the time. I feel the baby is dehydrated.

In the very way breast milk can be tested to see if it is nourishing enough? I would also like to know why a baby doesn't need water. Doesn't everybody need water?—Worried Grandmother

The first weight loss is to be expected. By the end of the first month of life, however, the baby should be gaining about an ounce a day. You didn't indicate the child's height in your letter, and this would be important as the weight is being evaluated properly. An eight-pounder can be a "tall," and a lot of that weight can be liquid.

Breast-fed infants also tend to add weight at a slower rate than those on a formula, especially during the first few weeks, when the mother's lactation may be less in volume and its control not quite as rich as later.

I wouldn't worry about the mother. If the baby is getting the proper amount of milk, it is getting sufficient water. About 85 per cent of breast milk is water, the rest being protein, fat, carbohydrates and inforganic salts.

Some physicians recommend a water supplement between feedings (boiled water in a bottle), but this is not always needed. In fact, it may actually not be forced upon the infant. The mother, though, should be getting enough liquid herself, at least enough to equal that taken by the breast-fed infant, plus more for her own needs. This is especially true in hot summer months.

The quality of mother's milk is usually constant among women, although vitamin deficiencies can occur. The most common problem in breastfeeding is that there is inadequate volume. This becomes quite apparent early. Infants have ways of making this fact known, and quite vocally.

If the baby is contented you can assume he is getting enough for his needs. In fact, what you interpret as drowsiness and lethargy can be evidence of the satisfaction that comes with a full tummy.

I would stop worrying. Don't underscore any anxiety you have to your daughter, who is attempting to make success out of her first breastfeeding experience. Let the pediatrician be the judge of whether or not the baby's growth rate is satisfactory.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I have a papaya growing in my yard, and have been eating a lot of them.

Are they injurious in any way to my health?—Mrs. M. E. D. Neharn

Dear Dr. Thompson: I will be having surgery soon. I am 5 ft. and my health is pretty good, except for arthritis.

My doctor tells me I can't have any aspirin (for my arthritis) for six weeks before surgery. I'm afraid I'll be crippled up before then.

Can you offer any information with regard to this?—Mrs. I. Ward

Large doses of aspirin can slow blood platelets, creating a tendency toward bleeding. Controlled, low dosage aspirin, however, this could explain your doctor's reasoning in telling you not to take the large amounts of aspirin you apparently are taking.

There are other medications besides aspirin you can use for your arthritis in the pre-operative period.

Your physician can recommend a suitable substitute. There is no reason you should get "all crippled up" while you are waiting.

Dear Dr. Thompson: I am 48 and going through the menopause. I have heard that when men have fat fishes you should drink a great deal of water. I never drink water, but I do drink a great deal of tea.

Can tea take the place of water? — T.U.

I'm not sure that drinking liquids is going to have any effect on your hot flashes. With or without menopause you need an adequate amount of liquid. Tea is only flavored water and will do as well as anything else.

But you are getting a good amount of caffeine in your tea, and this can make you jittery. The same is true, of course, of coffee.

The hot flashes are a result of a sudden change in vasomotor control (that affecting the size of blood vessels). This often accompanies menopause.

Dear Dr. Thompson: Does swelling and some tenderness in the lymph glands in this case wonder in small always means cancer, or can it be caused by something else?—A. S. T.

No, it doesn't have to mean cancer at all. It can result from the body's reaction or from a blood disorder or one involving the lymphatic system. Hodgkins' disease, for example.

You should be examined to see if there is evidence of glandular swelling elsewhere. That could indicate a general blood disorder. For the sake of conservatism, a biopsy should be made.

This is never to your question, no, each lymph gland swelling is not presumed to be cancerous. In fact, statistically, the odds are it isn't.

Showbiz Short

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A 17-year-old youth who is alleged to have threatened life of singer Helen Reddy has entered Friday when he tried to collect a $6,000 extortion payment at a Western Union office, the FBI said.

The youth is alleged to have made phone threats to the singer's husband, Jeff Wald, demanding the $6,000.

The FBI said they arrested Gerald Hall at a Western Union office, apparently after he had been told that the money would be wired to him.

Hall is being held at a youth detention centre for a hearing Monday, the FBI said.

NDPer Protests Judges' Pay Boost

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament orders workers back to their jobs with "appalingly poor increases," but restraint does not the winnings from sacrificial sacrifices, New Democrat Ed Broadbent said Thursday in Ian Ross Channel.

He spoke just before the House gave approval to principle to a bill that would give hefty pay raises to federal appointed judges. Later, MPs started considering the judges' salary increase for Montmorency.

"There seems to be a difference when this Parliament goes about determining wages," Mr. Rodriguez said.

The government was asking workers to hold annual increase at 12 per cent, "yet here you certainly nothing nigardly about the very Parliament, what about setting its own pay."

MPs and senators recently voted themselves a 21.3-per-cent pay increase, bringing the basic MP salary to $24,000 a year plus a $10,000 tax-free allowance.

Government figures show the proposed increases for judges range from 34 per cent to 79 per cent. However, some opposition MPs say the percentages are higher.

The judges' pay raise bill, retroactive to April 1, 1974, would give about 300 judges in the Supreme Court of Canada, Federal Court, provincial courts, superior courts and county and district courts.

The federally appointed judges received their last increase about 9½ years ago.

Chief justice and county court judges would get increases to $40,000 by next April 1 from $37,000 annually. They have been equal since late 1971. Associate chief judges in the same courts would get the same amount.

Salaries for other district and county court judges would go to $40,000 next April 1 from the current $35,000.

All parties said judges deserve more money, but the New Democratic Party said the increases should be smaller.

Of the 300 federally appointed judges, 225 are county and district court judges. They are the only ones for whom increases beyond 1975 are provided in the bill.

The 100 provincial superior court and 15 Federal Court judges would get an increase from $50,000 to $60,000.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin of the Supreme Court of Canada would get an increase of $65,000 from the current $57,000 and the other eight supreme Court judges would get an increase to $60,000 from their current annual salary of $62,000.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) referred to the government's search for a voluntary consensus on wage and price restraints and said judges should comply with what is agreed upon on the consultation program.

The government has suggested that wage increases be limited to 12 per cent a year, or $2,400, whichever is less.

TORONTO (CP) — Property owners around Pickering airport will use a balloon barrage to defend land by the British during the Battle of Britain — step ahead taken for the airport, says the People or Planes (POP) group.

The federal government has said it will take possession May 28 of 18,000 acres of land appropriated for the airport just east of here.

In a newspaper advertisement, POP—which opposes the airport—has called for leaders for 1,000 balloons with a minimum diameter of 16 feet.

Quebec Workers Trickling Back

MONTREAL (CP) — Some construction workers returned to their jobs Friday and Olympic Games officials announced that work on the Games site, halted since May 8, will resume next week.

But about 8,000 workers mostly members of Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) affiliated unions, remained off the job, crippling major building sites throughout the province. Most of the workers are protesting the government's Planned Implementation of recommendations included in the Cliche report on the construction industry.

Games organizers said workers ready to return to their jobs will be allowed on the Olympic village site Monday and the main stadium site will reopen Thursday.

Returning workers will be required to show identity cards, a move designed to keep out the more militant members.

The Games spokesman said police will be on hand to protect workers against threats from "goon squads" blamed for intimidating workers into leaving the job during the last week.

Games officials also said they remain optimistic that construction will be finished on schedule.

"If we can't pick up 14 days of work in the 14 months left before the opening ceremony we don't deserve to hold the games," one official said.

Meanwhile, there was no immediate answer from key Quebec unions for a call Thursday by the leaders of the 300,000-member QFL for a province-wide "emergency" session next Wednesday to force the provincial government to stop in and settle the 17-month-old strike at Pratt and Whitney of Canada Ltd.—formerly United Aircraft.

The rival Confederation of National Trade Unions said Friday support from its 150,000 members was "very unlikely."

"We will likely leave the choice up to the individual unions," the spokesman said, adding he thought support from the QFL executive itself would be "sporadic."

The 20,000-member Quebec Teachers Corp. said it had not yet decided on its reaction to the walkout appeal.

The Pratt and Whitney plant was the site of a bloody confrontation between police and workers Monday evening when 34 demonstrators briefly occupied the plant, with hostages.

The 34 men have been charged with forcible detention, breaking and entering and causing more than $250,000 in damage to the plant.

Thirty of the 34 were released on their own recognizance Friday on five conditions set by the court. Included in one order taking they would not participate in any further demonstrations and were not to go near the plant in suburban Longueuil.

The other four were held in jail because of pending charges in connection with earlier violence at the plant.

The legislature to place four QFL locals under government-sponsored trusteeship, which sparked the initial walkout, received third and final reading in the Quebec national assembly Friday and the government was reported considering strike weapons against the Cliche candidates to fill the positions.

Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer and Premier Bourassa said they would announce their choices next week.

The Cliche commission report on the Quebec construction industry released last week identified the local locals as being particularly infested with criminal elements.

Clause-by-clause study of a second bill aimed at preventing convicted criminal records from holding influential union positions was put off after their conviction to to resume Tuesday.

Andre Desjardins, former head of the QFL, commenced the bill with a complaint against Premier Bourassa in Montreal on Friday alleging the premier had made public the fact he had a criminal record.

Lawyer Michel Proulx said Mr. Bourassa violated Criminal Code provisions concerning persons when he revealed in a news conference last week that Mr. Desjardins had been granted a pardon in 1972.

Labor Minister Jerome Choquette told the National Assembly Wednesday he has written Attorney General Jean Allmand asking him to revoke Mr. Desjardin's pardon.

A closed hearing is scheduled for May 27 to determine whether the complaint warrants criminal charges against the premier.

Mr. Desjardins now is a technical consultant to a labor union union affiliated with the QFL.

Wage, Price Controls Remain Possibility

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau hinted Friday to rule out the possibility that the government may bring in compulsory wage and price controls.

He told Patrick Newton (PC—Annapolis Valley) there is a difference between what is "intellectually acceptable and politically viable."

Mr. Newton was asking about a comment by Finance Minister John Turner Thursday that "at least now there is an intellectual argument for controls."

Mr. Newton asked if this meant Mr. Trudeau had been "intellectually dishonest or sophistically at least stupid" when he argued against controls in the 1974 federal election campaign last summer.

Mr. Trudeau said the nature of inflation has changed and that costs are pushing the rate up. Prices increased when international commodity shortages drove prices rises west in case a year ago. This still did not mean controls would be the necessary public acceptance.

The government's continuing plan of controls has been in place for four or five years, but no decision has been taken yet to proclaim it, he said.

He said outside the Commons there is an intellectual argument for controls, but "I've no taste for them."

Mr. Turner refused to comment about the possibility of controls in the next budget, date of which is to be announced next week.

With the failure to win a national consensus on voluntary wage and price restraints, the government has few options left. A restrictive budget, with higher taxes and likely resulting higher unemployment, is one possibility.

Unemployment already is running at 7.1 per cent of the labor force—the highest rate in 34 years—and the inflation rate is about 11 per cent.

The government has proposed limiting wage rises to a maximum 13 per cent, down a year, and to keep price rises down to that mark. But several major unions affiliated with the Canadian Labor Congress have turned down the proposals and last month 37 of 1 minutes Wednesday failed to win an endorsement for the plan.

Apology Demanded

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thailand has demanded an apology from the United States for one of its bases in the Mayaguez incident against the wishes of the Thai government.

Foreign Minister Chatichai Choonhavan said today the expression of "regret" from State Secretary Henry Kissinger is insufficient, saying:

"United States must give us a satisfactory answer for what it has done during the last seven days."

More than 2,000 students gathered at a Bangkok park for a march on the U.S. embassy. Some held signs reading, "Bay, Pearl! You dirty pig."

Chatichai greeted three South Vietnamese diplomats who arrived in Bangkok for a two-day visit to look at their new embassy and hold talks with Thai officials.

Marines Missing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two United States destroyers still off the Gulf of Thailand, searching for 13 missing marines and six Navy helicopter crew members, lost in the early minutes of the assault on the island of Koh Tang.

Meanwhile, the rescued U.S. freighter Mayaguez arrived today in Singapore where its crew was taken off to be released for inspection by reporters to discuss Cambodian charges it is a spy ship.

Secretary Henry Kissinger, speaking at a press conference Friday, the forcible recovery of the ship and its crew and 39 members from Cambodian Communist pirates in a rescue operation was little beyond which the United States cannot be pushed."

Co-ordinator Proposes Ambulance Committee

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Belleville ambulance service may soon come under scrutiny and guidance of a standing committee of appointed officials, it was learned Friday.

Jerry Bahr, regional co-ordinator for ambulance service in Ontario, is making this recommendation following a six-week study of Belleville ambulance services.

Earlier this year the provincial government came out saying Belleville is a "high cost" area for ambulance service and asked Mr. Bahr to the task of creating a more "cost effective" delivery service.

"One of my recommendations to the province will be the formation of an advisory committee to monitor the performance of the two ambulance companies working in the city," said Mr. Bahr during an interview with The Intelligencer.

The committee, tentatively named the District Ambulance Committee, will be made up of operators, medical staff from Belleville General Hospital and citizens, said Mr. Bahr.

He said such a committee would provide liaison between the three groups "on a more formal basis."

Recommendations from Mr. Bahr's report must first be given ministry approval before they can be implemented.

He said copies of his study will be in Queen's Park by the beginning of next week.

Operators Stand Pat

A provincial government study into Belleville ambulance service drew mixed reaction from operators here today.

Neither owner, Sis Meeks of LaCalle Ambulance Ltd. nor Steele of City Ambulance, had any word of study findings before they were called for interview today.

The study made a number of recommendations that included a central dispatch for ambulances in the Quinte area, formation of a local advisory committee to monitor ambulance service and a long-range goal to amalgamate the two Belleville firms.

Mr. Meeks said in a telephone interview, "I have no idea what he's (study co-ordinator) talking about." Commenting on the committee "I don't see them saving one penny on a central dispatch system."

The major factor for a study to be taken in the city was the province's verdict that Belleville is a "high cost area".

Mr. Steele said he had not seen the study and said he preferred not to comment deeply.

"I don't think there's anything wrong with central dispatch but they'll have to make some improvement on the dialling system," said Mr. Steele.

News Briefs

New York Broke

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States largest city took its eleventh hour search for $1.5 billion to Washington and to the New York state capital this week, but came back empty handed. New York City, which must find the money to pay off short term debt coming due later this month and in June or risk becoming the first major U.S. city to default since the Depression, failed to procure from the Ford administration or the New York state legislature the money it needs.

Woman Tops Everest

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — A Japanese housewife became the first woman to reach the top of Mount Everest, the world's highest mountain, shortly after two men were reported dead on another Everest peak. The Nepalese foreign ministry said today Junko Tabei, 35, a member of an expedition of 15 Japanese women, reached the summit of the 29,028 foot mountain known locally as Sachurungma, or Mother Goddess of the Earth on Friday.

Bill Support Slipping

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal backbencher suggested Friday that the government may back down on legislation to eliminate special tax status for Time magazine and Reader's Digest.

"There are an awful lot of people on our side of the House who do not go along with it," Ralph Stewart (Cochrane) said in the Commons.

He speculated that the government may withdraw the bill, possibly as early as next week, if enough Liberal MP's speak against it.

Weather Ideal

OTTAWA (CP) — Farmers in eastern Ontario, plagued with too much spring rain the last few years, have had almost ideal weather conditions this season to date. An Ontario agriculture department spokesman says most seeding has been completed already, thanks to little rainfall in the last six weeks. But if dry, sunny weather continues, crops suffer from lack of moisture.

Turner Defends MPs' Pay Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner defended Friday his right as a member of Parliament to a 23 1-2-per cent pay raise while asking others to settle for no more than 12 per cent.

But his office had trouble explaining the arithmetic he used in the Commons to justify the increase that MPs voted themselves last week.

Mr. Turner, whose own pay and allowances rose by $221 a week to $1,828, argued that the raise lagged behind the cost of living. But other calculations show the MPs outpacing inflation.

He offered his defence shortly before the Commons agreed in principle to raise the salaries of the 25 provincial lieutenant-governors by margins of 16 to 18 per cent to $38,000 a year.

Mr. Turner said a group of businessmen Thursday that the timing was lousy" for the parliamentary pay raise in view of his current efforts to get business and labor to agree to a program of pay and price restraint to combat inflation.

In the Commons Friday, Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) asked whether Mr. Turner would arrange to tax away the money MPs are getting above the 12 per cent or $2,028 a year, whichever is less, proposed for Canadians this year.

The annual salary for MPs went up by $8,500 to $24,500 and for cabinet ministers by $12,000 to $44,000, plus the tax-free expense allowance of $10,000.

To applause from Liberal and Progressive Conservative MPs, Mr. Turner replied that "the 23 1-2-per-cent increase, measured over the period since the last increase, was still less than the rise in the cost of living for the same period and, if projected, would be more than per cent a year."

Lobster Marks 100

Peter Reston seems to be enjoying himself as he celebrates his 100th birthday at Hastings Manor Friday. Mr. Reston was treated to a birthday dinner of lobster by an old friend, Finley Roy of White's Meat Market. Born in Scotland in 1875 Mr. Reston has worked as a chef on various ocean liners and also as a chef on CNR travelling from coast to coast. Mr. Roy asked Mr. Reston, "What is better than one lobster?" and was quickly answered with "Two".

A Piece of the Past

From the pages of Nova Scotian history, Bluenose II slipped quietly into Kingston Harbor Friday — its reputation making it seem larger than life for the crowd that waited on shore or bobbed around in a tiny flotilla at the harbor's mouth. The one time cargo freighter — a replica of the original Bluenose which brought racing prestige to Canada — heads westward today continuing its trek to ports of call around Lake Ontario. Toronto will be its main port with Detroit its final destination. The ship is promoting Nova Scotia as a tourist spot.

Don't Sweep Issue Under Carpet

By RON CARSON
Staff Reporter

It's been two months now since the Hastings County Board of Education nearly swept the special program for the pregnant students under the carpet. Their reason? Too much ado about nothing in the press.

The issue was relegated to the chairman's committee which is just another way of saying "let's put it out of the limelight and hope everyone forgets about it." Since then rumors have indicated the special class may be abolished due to too much publicity, Board officials, of course, deny this.

However, the fact still remains the subject has not yet been dealt with in open session since March with trustees giving their honest opinions. And likewise, the administration has done little to present the pros and cons on the issue in public.

For those who missed the early controversy, the program would have established a class for pregnant students to help them continue their education and prevent them from leaving school. It has been estimated about 30 girls left the Hastings system last year due to pregnancy.

The program would have been an extension of the existing home-hospital instruction services.

In a later meeting it came to light that there was one elementary school student pregnant but for some reason the number was down this year.

There are some problems with this program, including transportation from the south portions of the county and how to find those girls who, under normal conditions, would just quietly drop out of school.

Since this time Ontario's minister of education Thomas Wells has publicly stated there should be more sex education in the province's schools. No doubt, an emphasis on knowledge of contraception would be a part of any realistic course on sex education.

"Most of our young people are clearly in need of more sound information and perspective than they are receiving at home," said Mr. Wells.

In view of these statements it does come as a surprise that the Hastings County Board of Education continues to ignore the issue. The name of the game is to get the best data available and then make a decision on it — to date it hasn't been accomplished.

How can we expect responsibility and maturity from students if the board itself can't come to grips with the merits of the class?

Arbitration Results Expected Next Week

TRENTON — "Next or firmer may know next week the decision of the arbitration board that heard a dispute with the town over their 1974 wage contract according to International Association of Fire Fighters representative Jack Jessop.

In a telephone interview from Ottawa, Mr. Jessop said the award may be handed down as early as next week.

The award, normally handed down 60 days after a hearing, is over the top about four weeks. Town ad firm department representatives presented their dispute over wages and their disputed offer to the board in Belleville in mid-February.

At that time, the town offered a 12% per cent wage increase that was conceived by the 11-member Trenton department with a demand for a 24 per cent increase.

Mr. Jessop said Friday the award hasn't been finalized. He said he believed the delay in its announcement is likely a wording problem, "but it would be of minor nature."

"It's probably due to some language that hasn't been clarified," he concluded.

Town firemen continue to work under terms of a 1973 agreement which provides for the salary of a first-class fireman at $10,46. Firemen want the wage to jump to $13,001. All salaries would rise by a similar percentage.

Lack of the award has been holding up the start of talks between firemen and the town over the 1975 contract.

FUNERAL QUESTIONS
WE ARE OFTEN ASKED

JOHN R. BUSH

R. DOUGLAS RUSHNELL

Q. "IS A BURIAL VAULT NECESSARY?"

A. In many cemeteries, some sort of outside container, other than a wooden box is mandatory. The reason for this ruling is that a softwood box quickly disintegrates underground and the resultant sinkage causes problems of maintenance and, as often happens, a disturbing sight for visiting families.

However, it must be said that many cemeteries have no regulation and the use of an outside case, whether it be wood, concrete or steel, is a matter of family preference. Local custom sometimes varies as to what should or should not be done and your funeral director will be aware of these and will explain them to you.

Soil conditions and water levels are factors which have made the use of vaults commonplace in many areas.

These outer cases vary in price depending on material, scientific design and durability and for many families the investment is surprisingly small.

Q. "WHO ARRANGES FOR A FRATERNAL SERVICE?"

A. Whenever it is desired that a fraternal organization conduct a portion of the funeral service in accordance with the rites of that particular group, the funeral director should be notified promptly. He will make all necessary arrangements.

You will find that your funeral director is familiar with the rites of all fraternal organizations and is prepared to make all arrangements for these services and to properly cooperate in the conduct of such services.

Province Plans Museum For Farm Artifacts

By B. W. CARBERY
Staff Manager
Ontario Agricultural Museum
Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food

The story of the evolution of Ontario's agricultural industry from pioneer days to the 1970s is a fascinating one, but it has never been placed in one document, or tied together in one comprehensive package. This is the challenge that faces the Ontario Agricultural Museum, a new project of the ministry of agriculture and food.

The Ontario Agricultural Museum had its origins in 1966 when 93 acres of land at Milton Heights was acquired by the province for the purpose of creating a permanent home for the artifacts and archives of Ontario agriculture. Now, in 1975, that dream is becoming a reality as the museum starts to take shape.

The main administration building will soon be ready for occupancy to house an exhibition hall, a reference library and conference room, office facilities, workshop and storage space. The total acreage is undergoing development, and the staff is involved in planning, building and arranging the exhibits and displays that will bring the past alive.

Also planned for the site is a 45-acre Pioneer Farmstead Park where a half dozen complete sets of farm buildings will be assembled, each of a different era or a different part of the province, or a different type of architecture.

These buildings will be display areas, housing the furnishings, tools, equipment and machinery of the period.

The first set of farm buildings has already been acquired. The Lucas Farmstead, scheduled for demolition to clear the path for industrial expansion, was donated to the museum by the Steel Company of Canada. The 1835 home has been moved intact to the site and will be restored in 1975, while the two barns will be rebuilt, recreating as accurately as possible the Burlington North settlement of 140 years ago.

There will be a demonstration area consisting of a large amphitheatre with an oval track where machinery can be paraded and where competitions and entertainment can be held. The grassy slopes will provide an excellent setting and a chance to rest tired feet. There will be a picnic area, and eventually catering facilities.

This museum will let the people of Ontario relive some of the nostalgia of the "good old days" and it will also show the primitive tools, the back-breaking, time-consuming chores that occupied the lives of our grandparents and great-grandparents.

Since it will be a "people museum" we want the public to play a role in its planning and development. Many plans have been influenced by an advisory board of private citizens dedicated to the objectives of the museum. We also want to hear what other residents of Ontario would like to see in their agricultural museum. We want them to be involved, to feel a part of the whole process. Already, the fair occupies. Council committee appeared, the fair board should have control of its property to allow it to make long-range plans and investments. At present the fair board leases its property from the city parks board, but other leases confine the issue. First step, it was agreed, is to clean up and rewrite the lease on a long-term basis.

Action Needed Now To Keep Industry

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Trenton lost the big one this week.

Fabricon Manufacturing Co. announced that it will be operating at least, potentially employing up to 800 people, in Belleville.

The news hurts Trenton because the town company, since the beginning of this year, had been trying to find adequate siting on 20.3 acres of land in the town's southwest.

It couldn't be done and according to an estimate by the mayor, about $250,000 in tax revenue was lost to the town. Not good news, and not much better news is coming.

Fabricon's Trenton manager has indicated that the possibility exists that the company's plant here may be phased out over the next year or two as employees are moved from Trenton to fill the plant in Belleville. Trenton's 140 employees may be no more.

The reason for Fabricon's decision to move from Trenton was simple — not enough land, properly serviced, was available to hold the company in Trenton, when it first looked.

Although serious, the loss of the firm can be chalked up to bad luck. It's happened before. But it shouldn't happen again.

Sadly, the loss of a large industrial plant to another municipality is likely to happen again.

In releasing a report outlining Trenton's efforts to locate one new plant here, clerk Aubrey Sharp blamed the lack of large tracts of serviced land in Trenton as the reason behind the company's change in original plans.

Where it happened once, it can all too readily happen again. And the town will lose a sizeable potentially large employer.

That prospect, for the progress-oriented citizens in Trenton, can only be looked upon as next to sacrilegious. And those same citizens can, without feeling any pangs of remorse for attacking council, blame the town for what appears to be its inaction in attempting to find more land.

For indeed, that does seem to be the case. The industrial and economic development committee had tentative plans to talk to Murray township over a possible land-services deal. Nothing has been heard from the committee to indicate that talks have been held.

Cries periodically come from councillors over the lack of industrial land in Trenton. Well and good. Worry. Councillors' cries are given evidence by the Fabricon move. But besides bemoaning the situation, has council itself done anything to alleviate that shortage?

Has council followed the policy of talking, to indicate its good intentions, but not acting? It seems so.

To be fair to the town, it did bend over backwards, as the mayor indicated, to accommodate the new plant planned by Fabricon.

But such contortions are not enough. It must actively seek out a solution to the land shortage now, before another company comes looking for land and is turned away by an empty-handed Trenton.

Complaints, and briefs to various task forces and study teams in Northumberland County, are plainly not enough.

Young Farmers Get Credit

The Government of Ontario, has announced a guaranteed credit program for young farmers. Under the new program, young farmers or potential farmers between the ages of 18 and 35 will be able to obtain provincial guaranteed intermediate-term loans for farm development purposes.

The program will apply to young farmers entering farming for the first time; for farmers wanting to rent land or for farmers owning land and wishing to rent additional acres.

Each loan will be for a period of up to ten years, without an upper limit. The first two years may require only the payment of interest, depending on conditions and circumstances, with the remaining eight years requiring a combined plan in terest payments. The rate of interest will be prime plus one percent.

Nursing Home Needs Thought

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The group of Picton residents who protested the expansion of a nursing home in their neighborhood are not as narrow-minded toward the elderly and mentally handicapped as some would make them out to be.

As controversy was quashed when the town's committee of adjustment approved an addition to Kestwood Nursing Home, although there was what was termed "a minor variance" in this land use.

The area residents appealed the committee of adjustment's decision to the Ontario Municipal Board and at a recent OMB hearing the appeal of the expansion was rescinded.

Now, several public-spirited citizens have decided the home owners who objected to expansion of the nursing home are the villains in the piece because they were against the project.

"The protesting residents in their presentation to the OMB said that the residents of the nursing home were a nuisance" and "an imposition" in the neighborhood.

On the surface these terms seem harsh and lacking in sympathy for the aged and the mentally handicapped.

Studied more closely they suggest not a group of bigots but a street of concerned residents who have some basis for their views.

When nursing homes, rest homes and convalescent centres became vogue several years ago, many large private homes and vacant public buildings in Picton were converted to serve the needs of the sick and elderly.

Kestwood Nursing Home is a re-modelled recreation centre, once known as the Palamar.

Many of the residents of these homes are not elderly persons admitted to receive the care they can no longer give themselves. A large percentage are referrals from psychiatric hospitals and they are not necessarily old.

Since many are not old or bed-ridden, naturally they venture in the immediate area outside the nursing homes. Unfortunately, their special problems may not generally be understood outside the protective doors of the care centres.

Their behavior may be confusing and perhaps annoying to nearby home owners who do not want to cope with the occasional bursts of profanity or other petty disturbances that may occur.

One nursing home resident in Picton walked up and down the street in front of the home for years swearing a blue streak. His profane monologues went almost unnoticed by home owners on the street but for strangers who passed him on the walk it must have been slightly offensive.

The residents of Picton's nursing homes should not be victims of any sort of discrimination.

They are in care centres because they have special problems and require special care.

It is town council's responsibility to ensure that nursing homes are not constructed in the middle of heavily populated residential sections where home owners may object to patients' behavior.

Home owners who feel ill-equipped to cope with residents of the care centre should not be relored as the bad guys in black hats. Their attitudes should be considered as more than just unreasonable prejudice.

What goes on in any of the town's nursing homes should not have a direct effect on any Picton home owner. Those who live near care centres should not be expected to cope with the problems of mentality.

It should be the responsibility of the nursing homes to offer facilities with spacious lawns for ambulatory residents to enjoy. Those permitted on the streets should be accompanied by staff members at all times to ensure there are no uncomfortable incidents for the residents or area home owners.

Conglomerate of Communist South East Asian Nations Emerging

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

It may be too soon to speculate about the political implications of Indochina, except that it appears a tripolarity of Communist South East Asian nations is about to emerge.

When the still mysterious Khmer Rouge finally take Phnom Penh city and the remaining few enclaves under Cambodian government control, a people's republic will spring up with its structure as we now know them, everyone hoping that this point in time that the victorious Communists will not backslide South Vietnam's pre-American elite of military and civilian rulers.

Its successor state will probably be the creature of the people's government formed in the south about 30 years ago, the Viet Cong, a third Communist Asian state emerging with the 21-year-old People's Republic of North Viet Nam in Hanoi and the lonely-emerging Cambodian Communist state.

Add the immense physical presence and substantial anticipated economic back-up of the People's Republic of China and for the Americans it presents frightful prospects.

In the historical sense, going back to the late 1940s and the failure to keep Ching Kai-shek in power, it could represent a generation of American foreign policy failure in Asia.

At present, U.S. policy-makers, if they think such thoughts, are more concerned with how to forestall a final bloodbath in Saigon either by South Vietnamese or, if they can even against Americans, all 5,000 of them remaining and about to be evacuated, or the terrifying one of a Saigon under communist control as a place of mass executions.

We should not criticize President Ford for not making a swift decision in what is a frightful predicament for America. How can the Americans skitter out the South Vietnamese pro-American elite without bringing on the immediate, swift lapse and end of it all in Saigon, thereby self-creating a massive blow to American prestige?

On the other hand, how can they and their South Vietnamese, South Vietnamese loyal to America even up to this point, are left to the mercies of the Communist Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese, with the horrer potentially the most unspeakable?

Should we then, condemn prominent South Vietnamese for making their children the hostages of so-called orphans if they are classically fatalistic and already know they will die without American help but with the hope, nearly of Communist victory?

The dilemma for everyone, Americans and Asians, Asians-in-Asia is staggering. Immensely tragic and fraught with prospects of more bloodshed in Southeast Asia.

We should be cautious in our thoughts and if possible understanding in this deep time of travail for the Americans. If Mr. Ford sounds as though he is delivering high school essays in political science as presidential policy statements, remember there is only so much he can say in seeking a formula to save what could be 100,000 lives in Asia.

Perhaps in the long run, if the bloodbath does not prevail, nations all become client states of Peking and Moscow instead of Washington, Canada could find herself in a new and even more challenging role as a Canadian nation in the Pacquonian traditio of Sir Sir.

A contingency plan for this eventuality is something the department of external affairs (not given to such forward kind of policy thinking), should develop even at this early time.

Olympics at Stake

Prime Minister Trudeau and Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa find themselves in a sticklish situation.

They are placed in the vortex of a labor dispute that threatens to cancel an event that would rival Expo 67, in enhancing Canada's prestige as a sophisticated member of the global community — the 1976 Olympic Games.

Circumstances place Mr. Bourassa's government in the unenviable position of trying to push through legislation to bring the violence-ridden Quebec construction industry under more stringent controls.

As "goon squads" reportedly roam the kile Olympic Games construction site, discouraging workers from returning to their jobs, Mr. Bourassa — with Prime Minister Trudeau's endorsement — tells Canadians that social order within this country is more important than any damage our reputation might suffer abroad if the Games had to be cancelled.

They are both, of course, correct.

Any egg that Canada might feel on its face if extended construction delays force abandonment of the Montreal Games would be nothing compared to the floodgates of anarchy that could be opened if government yielded to union intimidation tactics.

With all those Olympic coins already struck and sold, a special series of commemorative stamps due to be issued June 11, not to mention the millions of dollars worth of lottery tickets bought by Canadians to support the Games, the militants and defiant Quebec unions appear to be holding a good hand in their wait-and-see game with the national assembly.

Fortunately, the unions are not being permitted to decide what is trump.

Bell Business

Bell Canada has introduced free emergency call service in western Ontario pay phones.

The system precludes the necessity of anyone having to scour their pockets for change to report a fire or accident.

Closer to home, Ma Bell's representatives must have been more than a little chagrined to discover that their new blue 1975 directories mistakenly gave Thunder Township Fire Department's number to the Family Planning branch of the Hastings-Prince Edward County Health Unit.

We don't envy someone phoning for birth control information and having someone answer: "Where's the fire?"

Economy Full of Ironies

(With the way the economy is going these days, one must learn to take the bitter with the sweet.

Thus, while shoppers may be elated to find that they can buy certain cuts of meat for what they were paying for hamburger a year ago, the fact they might shell out as much as 49 cents for a cucumber takes the edge off their meat counter glee.

And all those 20, 30, and 40 per cent wage increases we're hearing about by of little consolation to the one in 12 Canadians out of work.

Locally, the addition of Fabricon, Ltd., to our industrial community brings promise of more jobs for city workers, but, almost simultaneously, we are informed that more lay-offs may be in the offing at Belleville's beleaguered Northern Electric plant, where more than 400 have been given walking papers since November.

We live in a society filled with economic irony. Pensioners in London were recently awarded raises that put them over the $12 hourly mark, and some 27 per cent of Canadians are living below the official poverty line of $5,620 for a family of two.

Some elderly people in this country have been forced through their fixed incomes to add dog food to their diet, and Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan tells us that the average Canadian wastes 300 pounds of food per year.

There is much talk among economic experts about the widening gap between the rich nations and the poor nations.

But there is still plenty of room within the confines of our own country for government action to remedy some glaring fiscal disparities.

Mackasey Losing Patience with Post Office

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — When Bryce Mackasey, the most high-profile member of Prince Minister Trudeau's cabinet, begins showing signs of running out of patience with his own people something's got to be terribly out of whack.

Bryce Mackasey's people at this stage of his career are the people who wait for the Post Office.

He is a colorful and compassionate man.

In the other department, the cabinet has had nothing to complain about his bagpeak because the day he marched, in a green kilted uniform, at the head of Montreal's St. Patrick's Day parade.

In compassion, he displayed it in great magnificence and abundance — and at a price now topping $2-billion annually — when as Labor Minister he brought in Unemployment Insurance.

He argued at the time, with some skeptics in Parliament, that it placed immediacy in the economy.

And the current recession has borne him out.

The price of "pogey" this past long, hard winter was just about the cost of a Vietnam war, a great many smaller, one-and-two industry communities — not to mention uncounted thousands of hard-pressed families — from going under.

In those three years, as Labor Minister, he was the great conciliator.

There was a strike — almost any strike — that defied the best efforts of the collective bargainers and the mediators to settle — so they called in Bryce Mackasey.

And usually, he settled it, settling as many he became unique among labor ministers, federal and provincial, as the master diplomat of the working world.

Then as Manpower and Immigration Minister, heading a department that took over Unemployment Insurance, he took the rap for its excesses in the chaotic days when everything that could go wrong with it usually did.

So — Bryce Mackasey's credentials as a politician undoubtedly and government-minded labor's viewpoints and problems have been established beyond any reasonable doubt.

Which makes it all the more surprising that he has to get tough now with some of his people in the Post Office.

For if easy-going Bryce gets sore enough to read out a few of them publicly as deliberate, e t c. professional troublemakers — "Maoists," he tagged them — the Post Office has got to be a frightening shape.

These "Maoists," he has charged, who have been disrupting the mails — what again, or more accurately, still, you ask — are concentrated in the Toronto and Montreal postal terminals through which passes the bulk of the nation's mail.

They had to push Bryce Mackasey hard for him to blurt it out.

He has been the stoutest defender, among all recent Postmasters General, of the often postal non-service.

Sometimes it's slow, he says, but if you know a better and faster and cheaper way to get a letter for eight cents from one end of this country to the other, then feel welcome to try it.

And yes, he admits, mail does go astray. Like that Christmas turkey which arrived three months late at the designated address and was forwarded, in some fury, to Mr. Mackasey.

But what really made him mad is that the "Maoists" and their other troublemakers who fool up the mails are costing the Post Office — and the taxpayer — some impressive money.

Like the millions of dollars the Post Office no longer gets for catalogues it used to deliver, that now are dropped off at your door by private services.

And like the $17 million to $22 million that the Post Office says it is losing annually to special couriers. There are several hundred of these services, most of them using aircraft, operating now in all parts of the country.

They guarantee safe, sure, quick delivery at a price not so high that their competition isn't cutting deeply into postal revenues.

The ultimate result, coming down the line, will be a big increase in mail rates.

How would it or even 15 cents for a first class letter hit you?

Clinic Treats Alcoholics

West German information Service

A new type of clinic is being built in the north of Germany by Schleswig-Holstein state government for the therapeutic treatment of people suffering from addiction to alcohol and combination of ailments.

The Ministry of Health in Bonn has provided DM 1.5 million in subsidies.

The hospital staff, headed by a psychiatrist, neurologist and psychotherapist, will specialize in curing alcoholics with serious side ailments such as diabetes, polyarthritis, liver ailments chronic stomach troubles, and so on.

The clinic will house, apart from medicinal baths, a gymnasium, a workshop and a social centre. There will also be accommodation for relatives to help look after the patients in the final phase of rehabilitation.

The planned therapeutic treatment facilities and rooms will provide the patients with a chance to regain bodily and mental health. This is regarded as an important prerequisite for healing mental and psychical defects and neuroses that have caused addiction.

No Programs Conserving Resources

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

The cancellation of the Belleville paper pick-up for recycling clearly demonstrates that the Ontario Government and the Ministry of the Environment have no effective programs to conserve natural resources in Ontario.

The message is coming through loud and clear to citizens in Ontario that their concern for the wasting of natural resources has little meaning to the Ministry of the Environment.

The pulp and paper industry shave been allowed to poison our water and air and destroy our natural environment. Then the processing mills, as good corporate citizens, decide they do not want to recycle paper, as it is more profitable to destroy the trees in our forests, than conserve a great natural resource for the future inhabitants of Canada.

It is evident that the people of Ontario can no longer depend upon the Ministry of the Environment to find solutions for the environmental problems we face in society today.

The Boy Scouts, Cubs and beavers from Belleville planted approximately 30,000 trees to improve the quality and conserve waste land. This confirms what many people have known that the citizens of Ontario are concerned about the environment in which we must all live.

Paper recycling programs that had become a community effort in many areas of Ontario, have been wiped out. Who cares about the tremendous destruction of waste and the needless destruction of our forests?

When will Environment Minister Kerr Fisherman and Premier William Davis of Ontario, show the leadership that is necessary to protect the natural environment and stop the squandering of resources? For it has become clear it is possible for the citizens to get the laws and the enforcement officials to enforce the regulations of the Ministry of Environment Protection Act of Ontario.

Article Lists Communist 'Rules'

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Enclosed is the copy of an article I found in a "Reader's" — a magazine done in Dearborn, Mich. by the Christian Fathers, originally taken from Knight's Call, Canon City, Colorado, U.S.A.

MRS. F.J. MORRIS.

"Communist Rules for Revolution."

In May of 1919, at Dunsdeed, Germany, 1 of the allied forces obtained a copy of some of the "Communist Rules for Revolution", and now, nearly 50 years later, we are still being affected by them.

1 — Corrupt the young; get them away from religion. Get them interested in sex, make them superficial, destroy their ruggedness.

2 — Get control of all means of publicity, thereby:

(a) — Get people's minds off their government by focusing their attention on athletics, sex perversion, plays and movies;

(b) — Divide the people into hostile groups by constantly harping on controversial matters of no importance.

3 — Destroy people's faith in their institutions and cause the latter up to contempt, ridicule and disgrace.

4 — Always preach true democracy but seize power at fast and as ruthlessly as possible.

5 — By encouraging government extravagance, destroy the credit, produce years of inflation with rising prices and general discontent.

6 — Incite unnecessary strikes in vital industries, encourage civil disorders and foster a lenient and soft attitude on the part of government toward such lawlessness.

7 —Cause breakdown of the old moral virtues — honesty, sobriety, self-restraint, faith in the phoolosophy of atheism.

C — Cause the registration of all firearms on some pretext, with a view to confiscation then and leaving the population helpless.

That is quite a list, isn't it? Now, stop to think — how many of these rules are being carried out in Canadian today?

Dickering For Pleas Common

Kitchener - Waterloo Record

Plea bargaining does go on in many provincial courts in Ontario. It may not be a technique of which anyone could be proud.It is not in the highest tradition of the system of British justice that this country has inherited and modified. It does happen, and there is no sense in blinking at the facts.

You can pick up any daily newspaper in the province and read a routine report of court proceedings which goes on something like:

"Richard Roe, defence lawyer, entered on behalf of his client a plea of guilty to the lesser charge of failure to yield the right of way, Crown attorney John Doe informed the court that no evidence would be offered on the charge of careless driving."

Between the lines of court proceedings of that nature you can properly guess that some kind of dickering has gone on backstage. The defence, not being crazy, could avoid a conviction on the careless driving charge. It thought it prudent to settle for a small fine. The Crown, not being certain it could get a conviction on the greater charge, was willing to settle for a sure thing on something less.

The practical argument in favor of plea bargaining is that it saves time and money. If every charge laid had to proceed its full course, to a trial, the hearing of evidence and legal arguments, the courts would be more cluttered than they are. Five minutes of quiet dickering between lawyers may save a couple of hours in court.

The argument against plea bargaining, of course, is that it violates the proper concept of justice. Judges may easily find themselves registering convictions and deciding on penalties for offences of which they know little or nothing. The facts do not come out.

CP News Roundup

Province Won't Add to Program

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government is not about to create "non-productive, make-work programs" to provide summer jobs for students, Treasurer Darcy McKeough said Friday.

Program Introduced

TORONTO (CP) — Union Carbide Canada Ltd. announced Friday a program it hopes will save $2 million to $3 million a year in its Canadian plants. The company, which expects to pay $25 million for energy this year, has set up a committee to advise on efficiency matters and provide technical support for conservation program co-ordinators. Methods under consideration include waste-freezing waste materials and changing certain operating procedures so less energy is required.

Beer Alcohol Cut

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Attorney-General Howard Pawley said Friday that major breweries in the province have agreed to produce a "light" low alcohol content that will cost 20 to 30 cents a dozen less than standard brands. He said the new brand will have an alcohol content of less than four per cent and should be available by the end of June. Mr. Pawley said he hopes the new beer will lessen the dependence of young and casual drinkers on beer with a high alcohol content beer and the lower price might encourage heavy beer drinkers to turn to it.

Soviets Visit

OTTAWA (CP) — A 13-member Soviet delegation has begun a three-week study of Canadian products and services it might use best to utilize the $500 million being made available through the Export Development Corporation. The corporation's $500-million credit was announced last week by Trade Minister Jean-C. Gillespie.

Visit Planned

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Patrick Hillery, European Common Market Commission vice-president, will pay an official three-day visit to Canada starting Tuesday, the commission said Friday. Hillery, who is in charge of social affairs, will hold talks with Canadian Labor Minister John Munro, Health Minister Marc Lalonde and other officials. He will visit Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal.

Layoff Announced

DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. said Friday it will shut four car lines, a truck plant and an engine plant Monday, laying off 14,500 hourly workers for the week. The temporary cutbacks are the most extensive since the week of March 31, when Ford had eight plants shut and 27,500 workers on temporary layoff. Altogether, Ford will have 34,000 workers on layoff Monday, up from 30,700 the week

Mackasey Says Ready Anytime

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said Friday that members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) are ready for negotiating committee to stage of him.

"Your negotiating committee hasn't been near the negotiating table for two weeks," Mackasey said. "I'm ready whenever you're ready."

About 15 CUPW members picketed outside a school where Mr. Mackasey was about to speak to a meeting of the yMM-Association.

The union has asked that pay for inside postal workers be increased 25 per cent and that work week be reduced to 36 hours from 40 hours. A union official in Toronto this week said the pay for postal employees is $9,000.

Mail Volume Picking Up

OTTAWA (CP) — The volume of mail handled by the post offices has been showing an increase in recent years after a decline in the late 1960s and early 1970s, figures tabled in the Commons show.

The post offices handled about five billion pieces of mail each year.

The figures show that in the fiscal year 1973-74, the volume of mail handled increased by seven per cent over the previous year. In 1973-74, the volume rose by one per cent and in 1971-72 by four per cent.

By contrast, the mail volume decreased by five per cent in 1969-70, three per cent in 1968-69 and one per cent in 1966-67.

In the last decade, the highest percentage increase in volume was in 1964-65, when it rose 10 per cent.

The statistics were tabled recently in response to a question from Harold Herbertson (Montreal-Vaudreuil).

New Home Warranties Possible

TORONTO (CP) — Housing Minister Donald Irvine said Friday that Ontario might act on its own to provide legislation for new home warranties by the fall.

He was replying in the legislature to Jim Deans (NDP—Wentworth) who asked when legislation might be expected.

The housing minister said he had been advised federal legislation in the field would not be ready for 18 months to two years.

He said he has consulted Sid Ainsley, Kaufmann, minister of consumer and commercial relations, who would introduce the bill, and the province would try to have it prepared for introduction in the fall session of the house.

Inflation Mounts

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's inflation rate last month received a further twist in April when retail prices went up by a record 3.9 per cent, figures released Friday show. The April retail price index raised the inflation rate to a new peak of 21.7 per cent over the year.

Trenton Man Wins $10,000 in Lottery

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Lottery Corp. paid out $100,000 of the $718,400 in prize money Friday following the first drawing of the Winstarlo lottery, a lottery spokesman said.

The spokesman said eight people winning tickets matching six numbers in the lottery drawing Thursday. Each of the 8 people who came to make their claims at the corporation said.

The number of the ticket winning first prize was 8092, series eight.

Holders of winning tickets can claim their money by presenting the tickets personally or by registered mail to the corporation.

Hector Alves of Toronto, an electrician who was laid off work Wednesday, is among the winners of $10,000.

Mr. Alves, who has a wife and two children, said Friday the money was already in the bank.

Other $10,000 winners who claimed the lottery office Friday were Stewart R. Burns of Eventon, Ont., Mrs. T. Hunstiel of North Bay, Ont., Kenneth Bag, Jean Matelsen, Brenda King, Mrs. E. Lloesel, Michael Kay, Mrs. Paul Barker and Syd Spector, all of Toronto, and a Kitchener, Ont., man who wished to remain anonymous.

There are 23 $10,000 prize winners with tickets ending with the numbers 0085 and 1,944 prizes of $100 for persons with tickets with the last three digits of 085.

The second Winstarlo lottery, with two $100,000-prizes, will be drawn May 29.

Psychologist Hits Lotteries

OTTAWA (CP) Lotteries are a cheap way for governments to raise money, says Dr. William Walker, an Ottawa psychologist and vice-dean at St. Patrick's College. He says they play on an individual's economic worries and raise false hopes for quick riches.

People may go over their heads in debt while assuming a lottery ticket will miraculously open the way to financial security, he said.

"Dreaming can be a useful way of getting rid of frustration but it becomes sick if it prevents people from dealing with the real problem. It's a defence mechanism."

Pointing to the booming sales for Olympic lottery tickets, Winstarlo tickets and other games of chance, including horse-racing, he suggested that five years ago, when the economic future seemed more certain, gamblers were less eager to buy.

Institute to Move

CALGARY (CP) — The Arctic Institute of North America, now located at Montreal's McGill University, will be moved to the University of Calgary, says Robert Currie, institute chairman and vice-president of Pancanadian Oils Ltd. of Calgary. The non-profit institute was established in 1945 to encourage and support historical and scientific research in the polar regions. Its library of 30,000 volumes, regarded as one of the continent's best collections of Arctic literature is expected to be moved to its new home by next spring.

Pension Increase To $300 Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should increase the old age pension by $50 a month, age pensions to $300 a month, Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg-North Centre) said today.

MPs and senators last year voted themselves 23 3-per-cent pay raises and it is time they thought of people living on old age and veterans pensions and gave them a similar advantage, he said in the Commons.

The old-age pension is $113.45 a month, rising to $125.79 in July. There is also a supplementary maximum of $62.97 a month for eligible single persons under the guaranteed income supplement plan. A married couple, both pensioners, can receive a maximum of $153.76 if they qualify.

The Commons gave second reading, approval in principle, Thursday to a bill to raise the salaries of federally-appointed judges 31 per cent and is debating a bill to increase the pay of Commons-government by $25,000 from $18,000 to $50,000 depending on the province.

Bargaining Plan Finds No Favor

TORONTO (CP) — Enforced industry wide bargaining would slowly accelerate the race to nowhere and at an even heavier cost to the public, a representative of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association (CMA) said Friday.

R. P. Riggin, chairman of the CMA's industrial relations committee, said the CMA will "do everything within its power to ensure that, in the case of manufacturers, industry-wide bargaining takes place only where it is the will of both parties."

Federal Labor Minister John Munro has proposed an industry-wide bargaining law as a step toward such goals as industry-wide bargaining.

Opening lead—A ♠

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

If West made a normal lead South gets in hopeless trouble. The best of trumps gets in again, ruffs the last trumps and makes his contract without any finesse. On a spade lead, an overtrick if a spade is led.

When we watched this hand played West was asked enough to upset the rhythm of chess and continue the bid. After this start South could not make a trick short if he had gone right after trumps. East would take his ace and give his partner a club ruff. West would get out with a diamond and ruff a spade trick.

South was well aware of this unpleasant possibility. He thought for quite a while and finally played out a line of play that might bring home the bacon. The trend what is known as a partial elimination play.

Instead of starting on trumps he cashed dummy's ace and king of diamonds and ruffed a third diamond with a high trump so as to guard against a possible overruff.

Then he led a trump. East took his ace and gave his partner a club ruff but that didn't do the defense any good. The partial elimination had worked. West was down to spades and had to lead one right up to declarer's nice tenace.

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Oswald: "The bidding of today's hand is almost too good to be true. It started out normally enough with a standard notrump opening and Blackwood with a Stayman two-club response, a double by West to ask for a club lead if North intends to declare, a normal two-spade rebid by North and a normal raise to five diamonds.

"Little did I realize that I had better bid than a raise to four diamonds and South would bid four hearts to show his four-card heart suit. North decided to let South gamble the hand out at the four level."

Oswald: "It was a good decision. Five club tricks would have ruined my game anyway. Two spades and a club would doom my game to defeat and four hearts made rather shaky."

Jim: "It did require some good play by South. Dave was opened and continued South shifted a low spade on the third club in order to hang on to his four trumps. Now it didn't matter what we played next. South was able to take the lost tricks and make a well-deserved rubber bonus."

Prehistoric Stone Tools Gathered Near Edmonton

BUSHY, Alta., (CP) — The old-time trappers surrounded through early cardboard boxes in his basement and selected a thin, orange slice of rock, the edge curved into a delicate bush.

"As soon as you pick up something you can tell if it's something someone used to prize," he said, handling it lightly in his hand.

The rock, which he believes was made by early Indians to remove sinews from deer and moose, forms part of a collection of prehistoric stone tools and weapons which Leroy Krisher has unearthed during 48 years of hunting near this community 35 miles north of Edmonton.

The hooks, axe heads, diggers and "fleshers" are as distinctive as pottery in his basement as they were under the sod. But Antonio Rogolino, an Italian-born neighbor who has his own small collection of relics, is seeking recognition for the find.

"We have proved man was here at the dawn of history and nobody seems to care or even know about it," said Mr. Rogolino. "I would like to see the discovery accepted as such and Leroy given the reward."

An archeologist from the provincial archives came to the site on George Lake last October, took a few photographs and described a type of arrowhead that may prove man settled there 20,000 years ago.

"We found it," said Mr. Rogolino, indicating an elegant white arrowhead that looked out of place among the dull grey, bluish-pointed rocks. Kind if that's 20,000 years old, the chances are pretty much older because they're less sophisticated.

"Only eight or 10 inches were uncovered by the plow, who knows what is deeper down? But the archeologists say they don't have the staff to come out again for some digging."

Bob Kidd, chief archeologist for the provincial archives, said the men appear to have found "a site of Indian occupation" and acknowledged it is impossible to tell what is buried further under the soil.

"But there's nothing particularly remarkable about what we've seen. There are 4,000 recorded sites in Alberta, mostly of native origin."

The provincial archives is not planning to send anyone else out to the site, although "if Mr. Rogolino finding in some material of considerable interest he indicates he might have another look."

Meanwhile, Mr. Krisher continues to pick rocks from the furrows and imagine how uses by his native predecessors.

He began farming in northern Alberta in 1928, uncovering dozens of Indian graves. "I always kicked the bones back. Those fellows led a tough life; we should let them rest."

"After I bought my first tractor I was good at digging, digging up graves and throwing back the bones when all of a sudden water flew into the hole.

"I said, 'Holy smoke, what would that let?' and went to look. I'drun over a bad mess in a bottle bone jaded shaped like a knife. Ran clear through my foot and the doc cut me nearly $75 to get it fixed.

"When the man pulled it out of the tire he slipped it right into a pocket. I'd always wished I'd had that."

Although he had that particular relic, he has since found about 100 pounds of stones which appeared to be functional. Some of them appeared unbroken, other chipped by nature, while others were polished symmetrically or chipped into wedges. Some appeared indented where they might have been held or tied to wooden handles and leather thongs.

Mr. Krisher is particularly proud of a round stone which he said was used to pound pemmican, a mixture of dried berries and meat, and a limestone plate on which it was ground into powder.

A large, square "fire-starter" with a hole in the middle in which a stick was twirled and another stick was bowed perpendicularly to ignite a blaze.

"I remember sitting at the bottom of a cliff south of Bracken, (Sask.), and collecting bones from the (buffalo) parties," he said.

"Years ago I used to ride the Red Deer River where the big beach and yards are. I could look up on the ridges and see a lone sticking out there as big as a watchtower."

Wagon Train Is Seen Giving Time for Dreams

ESPANOLA, Ont. (CP) — Overland the wagon trains through the plains while 100 people in the wagon train trucks bump along the not so much highways.

The scene in the field below the farm of security guard members of a wagon train heading for Alberta from a year and the dream of hope and dreams.

"It becomes you've got an job and security, that doesn't mean all dreams have to stop," says Canadian actor Paul Bradley. "We're just starting all over. All this means is that we're continuing another phase of our lives."

He has got tired of the trials and tribulations of that city (Toronto) and urban life, adds wagonmaster Gordon Roberts.

Mr. Bradley and Mr. Roberts are just worried about three dozen city folk on their way to the Peace River area of Alberta by covered wagon.

Once upon a time, most of the people on the wagon train hope to become farmers. Other, like Mr. Bradley and Mr. Roberts, are seeking forward to starting something.

They had hoped to travel the 4,300 miles in six months, arriving toward the end of August after leaving the Toronto area April 1.

But things have not gone according to schedule. In six weeks, the lead portion of the train has covered barely 300 miles. The trailing section of newcomers to wagon driving has made a little more than 200 miles.

They had hoped to be in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., by April 25, but that's still 150 miles away.

Originally, Mr. Roberts and Mr. Bradley had planned to make the trip just with their own families, but publicity resulted in 1,000 people asking to come along, Mr. Roberts said.

"We even got some letters from people in Israel who wanted to come along," Mr. Bradley said.

"Most of the members of the train have arranged places to stay until they can get settled on their own. Those who want to homestead must put in a year's residence before being eligible to own their own place.

Mr. Roberts and Mr. Bradley have applied for a grazing lease so they can start their own cattle operation. Mr. Roberts says that there's no need for a year's residency if a grazing lease can be acquired.

The wagonmaster realizes that they might be turned down by the province.

If they do get the lease then they'll be starting their ranch from scratch.

"Whether it's a challenge or not at least I will be peace," said Mr. Roberts. "Perhaps all that time in Toronto I never had a Peace Square beside like this like we'll experience in Peace River."

"I think maybe it's quietness that really sells," said Mr. Bradley.

Former Actor and Friends Restoring Old Buildings

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — Former actor and singer Don Francks described his adventures on the bank of the Fraser River as "going back to the basics of life."

Mr. Francks, his wife Lil and daughter Cree Alanna moved with their friends Harry Lonsdale and Gordy Durkin into trailers beside four abandoned brewery buildings. Most of the buildings, some dated back to the turn of the century, have disintegrated over the years.

Now, north of the South arm of the Fraser, the planned expansion of Sea Island Airport, Canada's busiest airport.

The former Toronto-based actor said anyone can join his "family" if they are willing to work. He said he sees the groups life-style as a course in survival.

"Most people would know how to survive if they were deprived of a regular income and the ability to buy things," he said. "We believe the time has come to learn how."

The family project is to repair the old buildings with the hope that Fraser Brewery will become a centre for people to do craft work, work, sing and play musical instruments, dance and talk.

The family met in Toronto where they all were associated with the entertainment field. Mr. Francks came to B.C. coast late last year to visit Mr. Francks' mother in Burnaby, B.C., and Barry and Dave decided to join them.

"I remember these stores when I was a boy and we were living in Richmond," said Mr. Francks. "I loved the look of them then, but I never thought I'd be helping to restore them."

The family landlord, Carl Gruppi, lives next door and said he appreciates the work the family is doing. He said he sees Grazer's General Store, part of a family business that operated for 50 years ago.

Mr. Grazer and his brother Julius were the last to leave the buildings the family is repairing. The federal government has long expropriated the block and the Grazers are part of a group of 70 Sea Island residents battling the government in court to stop the expansion.

Food for the family has fixed windows, mended roofs, cleaned away plaster from the chandeliers in the interior, stripped down walls to their plaster and covered walls with cedar shingles. They said the men in the buildings was unbelievable when they began their task.

"We have spent almost no money except for the rent we pay Mr. Grazer," Mr. Francks said. "We make use of things other people throw away. We collect things and then we figure out how and where to use them."

The storage room is filled with things the group has received as donations or salvaged from the trash bin. There are chairs and tables, cans of paint, dozens of glass bottles and stacks of bolted-wood, much of it presumably pine.

For the main building Mr. Francks designed and built a wood-burning stove from an old discarded iron drum with a stovepipe attached. In another room is another wood-burning stove, made in 1938 by a long-extinct firm called Pride of Vancouver.

Will You Use Nutrition Labels?

The Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food has available a 15-page system called "Salads All Year Round." The new consumer publication is available free of charge from the Ministry, Information Branch, Parliament Buildings, Queens Park, Toronto, Ontario M7A 1A5.

It will be interesting, I think, to watch packages as a change in the labelling system is effected. A litre is slightly smaller than a quart, for instance. When milk or other liquids are sold by litre, will the cost go down or will we just get less for the same price?

Some U.S. food products already bear nutrition labelling, a move long sought by consumer groups and long avoided by food processors. Now that it's becoming a reality, what will it mean to you? Nutritionists say, for many things in the field of consumerism, it depends on you, the case of nutrition labelling it will be the purchaser's responsibility to use the information if it is to serve any purpose. Most likely nutrition labels will tell you the percentage of the required daily allowance — for example a product might contain eight per cent of your protein need and four per cent of your calcium requirement. Labelling will also indicate calories and carbohydrates.

Reservations currently being expressed, for example by Food Science people at the University of Guelph, are concerned with the value of the labelling.

As A.M. Pearson writes in a recent Agriculture and Food article: "The point of concern here is this — in the supermarket of the near future, items will be checked out by computer to speed up the process of buying food. How would this type of nutritional labelling fit into the scheme of more rapid food purchasing procedures?"

In other words, will you have the time and the inclination to read and digest label information or will you simply not bother?

A new system of naming beef cuts will be implemented on a voluntary basis in retail outlets.

It will end, hopefully, the 300 different names currently in use — fanciful and meaningless descriptions like Delmonico steak or cowboy steak.

Standard names will be brisket, shank, chuck short rib, blade cross rib neck and shoulder cuts from the forequarter; Short ribs may come from the plate (a wholesale cut) or the rib; ribeye steak is cut from the rib section. The hindquarter is cut into three wholesale cuts: flank, hip and loin. Retail cut from the hip are round, rump, shank and sirloin tip. The loin is cut into wing, tenderloin, porterhouse, sirloin, sirloin tip and T-bone.

Coined names may still appear but the label will include the standard name "Beef Delmonico Steak — Ribeye" for example.

Can halt baldness Finnish scientists say

LONDON (Reuter)—Two Finnish scientists said they have developed a scalp treatment that can halt baldness and even start new hair growing in many cases.

The scientists, who are putting the treatment on sale in the form of a solution, say that among volunteers who applied it to their scalp for 28 weeks, hair growth resumed in 60 per cent of the cases and hair loss decreased without further ill effects.

The claim, however, was greeted with initial reservation by some medical experts.

The product contains a synthetic detergent, which clears away dead hairs and other dirt clogging the follicles—the tiny sacs in which hair grows.

Another ingredient, a compound, then sets in motion a process which allegedly results in the growth of new hair.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rae

Rae — Warren

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was the setting for the April 26 wedding of Debbie Denise Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Warren, and Robert Jeffrey Rae, son of Mr. and Mrs. G.C. Hills.

Rev. Laurie Sutherland performed the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk jersey with a high mandarin neckline, long sleeves, a front bodice and featuring iced pearl trim, and a long slim skirt with an unattached train. The fourtier veil was caught in a crown headpiece of guipure lace. She carried a cascade of orange tea roses, yellow carnations and an orchid.

Barbara Chave was maid of honor in a sleeveless yellow jersey gown with a frilled cape jacket, carrying a bouquet of roses and carnations similar to the bride's.

Jill Warren, the bride's sister, was bridesmaid in an identical costume.

The groom's best man was John Gibson of Montreal, and the bride's brother Scott Warren served as usher.

A buffet dinner in the Officers'Mess of the Belleville Armouries followed the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Rae will reside in Thompson, Manitoba after a brief wedding trip.

Ontario Eye Care on Wheels

TORONTO (CP) — A travel Mrs. MacArthur suggested she was filled out as the Ontario Mobile Eye Care Unit will be office and clinic for two Toronto women for seven months.

Mary Forsey and Judy MacArthur of Toronto are in Northern Ontario, taking eye care to about 3,000 people in 23 communities from Kenora in the west to Cochrane in the east.

For 36-year-old Mrs. Forsey even the idea of mobile eye care was foreign only two months ago.

A secretary in a broadcast engineering firm before being hired as the mobile unit's driver-cleaner, she had never driven a truck and was "a little skeptical about eyes" when her friend asked if she would accompany her on the unit's journey.

She said she expected the van's average patient load of 25 a day would be more realistic after attending a truck driving course at Toronto's Go-go ophthalmologists for each disease as glaucoma, cataracts, strabismus, crossed eyes and amblyopia (lazy eyes). Of the 2,187 people examined in 1973, 49.9 per cent had difficulties with the mobile unit as it covers its 5,000-mile route.

Mrs. MacArthur is the ophthalmic assistant and operations manager of the unit provided last three, it has given free eye exams to 11,00 residents of Northern Ontario, checking 10,000 worth of equipment cases which would have gone undetected were it not for the unit.

This is the fourth year of the mobile unit's existence. In the by The Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Besides being responsible for the volunteer ophthalmologists who come from across the province to spend one or two weeks with the mobile unit as it covers its 5,000-mile route.

She Just Takes Messages

Dear Ann Landers: My employer is an independent businessman who is caught in a tight economic crunch this many others. He is also a swell guy.

The people who owe him money aren't paying and he is in a temporary financial bind which is troubling him. While I hate it's not my proper role to handle the problem, he is avoiding all phone calls from people he owes money. Frequently I go out of town on business and I take the messages.

May I say a word to his creditors?

Dear Ones: I only answer the phone around here. I am not responsible for your collection problems, nor am I interested in your opinion of my employer who owes you money. I can only deliver your message. I can't put his finger in the dial and force him to return your calls.

Please save your four-letter words for HIM. If you don't stop getting any results from your letters, cards and telegrams, don't yell at me. I only work here.

Dear Girl: Here's your message and it is from me. "Dear Ones" take heed. You realize, of course, they are merely in the ting off season when they yell at you. It is not you who been lie in a game of marbles and comes home and kicks the cat because he's the one closest to the door.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter will be something of a "real-life" problem. It will have a problem. In fact, I've been blessed. I'm a mother who has worked with children, and come to know exceptional people well.

They need to know they are loved and cared about. They need someone to confide in. It is important that youth be listened to. Home should be a place to bring friends, a place to laugh and a place to cry.

I have a question for every parent who has a child this year. Do you know where your child is at this reading this parent who cares enough to find out? Who is what? What is he doing? Could you be reached if he needed you? Do you settle your teenagers for your child? Do you demand something of them? Do you don't demand yourself? Perhaps your problem and I take the message.

Children need at least one parent who cares.

Not a beautiful house or fine clothes. Take this heart heart — A Lover of Young People

Dear Friend: Thank you for a provocative letter. It made me uneasy, uncomfortable I'm glad. It means you delivered your message.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I like to go out to dinner once a week with two other couples.

I can't drink and neither my husband nor I can stand big eaters. These two couples like their cocktails and they always order steaks with the trimmings. My husband insists that we split the bill three ways. I do a lot more than I figure the arithmetic in my head. We get stuck at least $5 every time we have dinner with these friends. Last night it was more like $8. Both women ordered crab omelettes.

The other men have never set up a red pencil to check which I feel is wrong. They know good and well a three-way split is unfair. What do you should we do? — The Seekers

Dear Seekers: Tell your husband he already made it clear he will not ask for separate checks, leave the guy his dignity and figure the $5 or $8 is a consumer tax."

It's Hard to Face Life Alone

Dear Doris: How do I again become a member of the human race? For the past five years I have been living by myself, and now when I do venture out among relatives and friends, I feel like a lost soul.

My husband died some years ago. My three sons are living in a city 300 miles away. My mother, who is ailing, is living in a senior citizens' home.

My brothers and sisters fail to understand why I do not move to the city where my sons are. They know that Mom is well cared for. Why should I stay here by myself in order to visit her at the home?

They seem to forget that I have been here for 60 years and it is hard to face life alone whether I live here or elsewhere. Mother is in failing health at 80 and gradually losing her sight. I thought I was making the right decision.

They all see me as Big Sister, and I am the one who keeps in touch, not only with my brothers and sisters but with my mother's family. I guess they appreciate what I do for them, but I too shouldn't receive as well?

At 48 I have learned to accept what I cannot change but being an epileptic is hard to face at any age. When friends find out and shy away that, you could forgive, but when family keep you at arm's length and you hear: "She might have a fit", do you wonder why the invitations are few and far between, and you wait at times to retire from the human race? In this day when epilepsy is controlled, should there be such a stigma attached to it?

Epileptic.

Dear Epileptic: Of course there should be no stigma — not any more than is any other disease — diabetes, high blood pressure, pimples! But there is a certain fear of the unknown which makes people cruel in their neglect of the sufferer.

Families ought to learn all they can about anything that troubles one of them; and should be the support the handicapped one craves.

Obviously you have coped with many difficulties, and your self-estimate of the situation indicates understanding and intelligence.

At 62, and with a disease which is controlled, you may well have many companionable healthy years ahead of you in which to achieve enjoyable goals.

My advice is to turn away a little from the family except your mother. Turn towards a new and happy life. Be selfline with your interests. Not everyone is afraid of being near when a brief "blackout" happens to you.

What about seeking volunteer work for the hospital auxiliary? Some of the kinds take human weaknesses in their stride if anyone can.

Another good thought is to consult the volunteer bureau or family agency for your own home town and offer what you have to give.

Dear Readers: Every now and then I hear from a reader who spots himself in the column and asks to tell HIS side of the story. Today's column is truly extraordinary. Here's the original letter that prompted the follow-up:

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I accumulated $2,500 in a local bank by depositing $5 each week. Our 30-year-old son, who does not live at home, entered our home when we were on vacation. He stole our passbook and withdrew $100 by forging his father's signature to our joint account.

He then proceeded to forge his father's name at this bank and other branches in the city. Within two weeks he emptied the account of all but $5.

He requested a duplicate bankbook, returned the original to our home and kept the duplicate, in the hope that he could replace the money before we found out what he had done.

We might have been spared all this grief had one person been alert. Why did they give him a duplicate passbook? Why could so many people in the respected professions by bankers have used such poor judgment — not only once, but many times?

Dear Syracuse: I find it fascinating that your complaint is against the bank. Shouldn't it be when the real tragedy is that your son is a crook?

My Chicago banking consultant suggests that you contact the senior officer of your bank and seek his counsel. My advice is to try to get that boy into therapy at once.

This letter arrived today:

Dear Ann: I am the 30-year-old son who stole my father's bankbook and forged my father's signature.

First I'd like to tell you a little about my past. At age 16 my parents considered me a discipline problem and had me committed to a psychiatric hospital in Syracuse. After six months the doctor said, "This hospital is no place for you. I'm recommending a private school."

The day after my 17th birthday, off I went. I soon discovered it was no private school but a reformatory full of criminals. I learned every trick of the trade in that rabble. Forgery, robbery, flim-flam—you name it. You called me a crook. Ann, Granted I did some criminal things, but I didn't pick them up on my own, nor would I have associated with such people if I hadn't been exposed to that environment.

I've tried every which way to help myself. I've sought the help of professionals when things got rough. I'm now 21 and still as bad off as I was back then.

But I can't do it on my own. I was thrown out of the house at age 18 and have had no relationship with my parents whatsoever. It has been one hell of a struggle. It only I had parents I could talk to. Just they've disowned me and I am running against the tide without help.

Dear Want To Stop: Your need for love is heartbreaking. But don't give up—you CAN be helped.

Call the Mental Health Clinic in Syracuse, N.Y. Ask for an appointment with the psychiatrist in charge. I've already phoned in your behalf and they are waiting to help you. Please let me know how you get along.

Black Women in Canada: 'Little Chance for Life'

TORONTO (CP)—Blacks are discriminated against everywhere, says a 35-year-old native of Trinidad who has chosen Canada as her home.

She is poet Liz Cromwell, mother of two children, who moved to Toronto from New York after she had been robbed twice at gunpoint in day-light while living in Greenwich Village.

Of particular concern to her now is the exploitation of many black women in Toronto, women who she says are open to exploitation by the unscrupulous.

And of discrimination, Ms. Cromwell said: "One of my friends visiting me from New York happened to be a white male. Nobody said anything openly, but when we got on the subway together you were conscious of eyes stabbing at you.

"Some of those little old white ladies are the worst. You see them physically freezing and turning up their nose as if there was a dreadful smell."

In Trinidad she worked as a journalist and radio commentator before travelling extensively throughout the Caribbean, Latin America and West Africa.

DID ANY JOB

To finance her travels, she worked at whatever job was paid, waitress, anything that available.

"Nobody discriminated against me in that country and still let me enough time to write poetry and short stories."

The United States, where she obtained a BA in sociology from New York State University, at first excited her, but its attractions soon palled.

"New Yorkers are concerned with material things which they must have at any cost. Toronto is a pro-human city. It is a place blacks can make a contribution to its development."

Her first job in Toronto was as a writer and associate editor for Contrast, a weekly paper which describes itself as serving the black community from coast to coast.

Canadian Jungle Tea, her first book of poems, was published in February. The dedication is to International Women's Year.

Ms. Cromwell said the basic problem of the preponderance of black women in the black men in Toronto has been compounded by a change in attitude of black men.

"They have deserted their wives and children. Many previously stable relationships have fallen apart.

"Maybe it is the culture shock, the social pressures, the desire of the immigrant to be accepted and integrate, that has got them into these racial situations."

She said white men seldom marry black women.

"New black women are being deserted and divorced by black men. Their chances of finding a partner of their kind are decreasing and this could mean more single parent families and more dysfunctional black youngsters in the value system falls down."

Still, Liz Cromwell is not all pessimism.

There is no much in Canada that I love and want to see preserved. The pockets of reaction and bigotry have to go."

Greek Wives Learn 'Equality' in School

ATHENS (AP)—In a downtown Athens school, hundreds of Greek wives are learning how to limit their household chores, boost successes ties with their children, pursue hobbies and education, and fight for equality with their husbands.

In the Greek context, Maria Chourdaki's parents' school is a controversial institution, even if 1975 is International Women's Year.

"In Greece we are living through a period of 'male leacracy,' where the woman is only used as a filler when needed," Mrs. Chourdaki said.

"Some laws, but mostly the mentality, tradition and male establishment, pose the greatest obstacles to Greek women's advancement."

Mrs Chourdaki, a doctor of psychology at Athens University, shut down her school in April, 1967, when the military backed dictatorship took over. She said she would rather do that than operate under decreased curriculum.

Today, the school has about 400 wives attending classes. Next month they will be given courses in politics, economics and sociology "to make them more politically aware and active."

The school maintains close ties with Greece's several women members of Parliament—a record number for a country where women still are often regarded as second-class citizens.

Unlike the German, Italian and Soviet constitutions, for example, the Greek one offers no guarantees for women's rights, apart from a general article stating, "All Greeks are equal before the law."

The civil code specifies the man is the head of the family and responsible for all major decisions.

The commercial code, forbids a woman to undertake any business enterprise without her husband's consent, while labor laws make Greece the sole western European country which has separate minimum wages for men and women. The women's minimum is always lower.

Greek women total only 38 per cent of the labor force, the lowest in Western Europe, where the average is 35 to 40 per cent.

Recent surveys by women's organizations have attributed the phenomenon to the widely accepted view here that the woman's place is in the home, to bias of employers and to women's lower professional and educational qualifications.

Under the circumstances the Greek woman prefers not to work. Lena Dokidou said in one of a series of recent newspaper articles. When she does work, she either does it through nepotism or family necessity, but rarely to make a career.

Government statistics show Greek employees average monthly salaries in 1973 were the drachma equivalent of $236.50 for men, compared with women's $127.

In the latest government-fixed daily wages for unskilled workers are 96 for men and $5.35 for women.

Statistics show that of a total of 1.81 million illiterate Greeks in 1971, 59 per cent were women. Of 2.41 million not having finished primary school, 69 per cent were women.

Dr. Helen Koumpounari-Coudouris, a Harvard-educated pediatrician, said she believes there is a substantial gap between the older and younger generations of women and between those in the countryside and urban centres. In both latter cases, women have made major advances.

Thirty-one per cent of entrants at higher educational establishments were women in 1971 and 41 per cent in 1973.

But, Dr. Coudouris said, good education is largely another means for women to secure a well-established husband, and early settlement of this pressing matter for most Greek girls often makes graduation unnecessary.

Only a quarter of the graduates of technical and other higher schools of learning in 1971 were women, and most of them specialized in housekeeping or professional assistantships.

Congregationalist Influence Strong in United Church

By
Dr. Gordon C. Smith
On June 14, 1925, the inauguration service of the United Church of Canada was held in the old Mutual Street Arena, the large hall in downtown Toronto available for such a service, and packed with 9,000 people.

In that part of the service dealing with the hallowing of church union, representatives corporately expressed the Doctrinal Standards of the Denominations.

The Methodist representative moderator brought "the manifestation of the Spirit in vigilance for Christ's Kirk and Covenant, in care for the spread of education and devotion to sacred learning."

The Methodist general superintendent spoke of "evangelical zeal and human redemption, the inspiration of spiritual experience, and the ministry of sacred song."

The chairman of the Congregational Union brought "the liberty that Christ gives, the love of spiritual freedom, and the enforcement of civic justice."

Congregationalism had its rite during the Puritan Revolution in England. The traditional demand for uniformity in worship by all Christians was vehemently resisted by the Independents, who called themselves Congregationalists.

In the course, they were the first nonconformists to settle in what is now English Canada. Ironically, they were criticized by many of their ministers returned in the New England colonies to fight under the banner of George Washington. Their growth was later limited by their proportion in the emigration waves from the Old Country.

At the time of church union, Congregationalists represented less than a half of one per cent in the population. But they were to go far into the influence of their convictions.

(1) They are to it that the new constitution provided as much liberty as possible for congregations. The "Spirit" had the right to "call", the right of every individual minister to be supreme in his pulpit, the right of every congregation to select its own forms of worship and Christian education program.

(2) They are to it that not even the General Council can alter the statement that "no change or admission to full membership shall be demanded of other Churches laid down in the New Testament."

Thus the new United Church was equipped to live in various climates of history and to exhibit a spirit of tolerance that our age so desperately needs.

It seems to me that one whom I was privileged to have as a friend, the late Clarke MacNaughton, fellow United, typified the best in the Congregational stream that flowed into union.

He was a scholar, pastor, lecturer, social reformer and ecumenist. He collaborated in writing "The Ten Commandments, Protestants and Jews". He wrote "Jesus and the Sermon" "Jesus and the Sermon on the Mount" and "Jesus and the Law of God." He was the famous "earthview birth control case", establishing the freedom of couples to endeavor to regulate the size of families. Queen's University bestowed on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity (Honoris Causa). He suddenly passed away during National union discussions in a Toronto Anglican Church.

The whole Canadian Church and nation have been enriched by principles that the U.C. Church embodied. He was himself enriched by a twofold test. "The world passes away, and the lust of it; but he who does the will of God abides for ever" (1 John 2:17).

Sisters of Charity Formed By Young Widow in 1808

By GEORGE CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Through open country the young widow travelled by wagon, carrying her children and all their possessions. It was a rough, hilly road and a hot sun beat down on them.

"We are obliged to walk the horses all the way and have walked ourselves half part of the time," she wrote from one stopover. Farm villagers and Indians passed to stare.

"The dogs and pigs come out to meet us, the people stretch their necks in units demand to know who we are, any of their sort, to which we gave answer."

Such was the good-humored spirits of Elizabeth Bayley Seton on her wagon trip in 1809 in a wooded valley near Emmitsburg, Md., where she started a community that was to grow into a major network of Christian service.

That pioneering woman, the mother in a family was designated in Roman Catholic canonization proceedings at the Vatican last December as the first native American citizen to become a saint.

She had once been a New York social figure made by her husband, called Betty by her friends, popular in the city's theatrical and fashionable club circles. At 19, she married the heir of a shipping-banking fortune.

But her husband's health and fortune later collapsed. He went from bankruptcy and died shortly afterward, leaving her an impoverished widow of 29 with three daughters and two sons.

She went to work as a teacher, then began a boarding school "to cook, wash and mend" for the children, one of her letters relates. She had been converted by her husband's children, but rejected to watch them eat "their bread and milk with good appetites."

It was a period of religious as well as economic struggle. She was an Episcopalian, but on a visit to Italy she had become known and interested in Roman Catholicism. About a year after her husband's death, she entered that church, despite sharply opposed family relatives.

In 1808, she moved her family to Baltimore and opened an academy for girls. Shortly afterward, she and four other women in the school took religious vows, marking the start of the Sisters of Charity of St. Joseph, the first native American religious community.

Its handful of members and her children later made the wagon trek to the Emmitsburg area, launching another girls' academy and a tuition-free school for the poor—a forerunner of the parochial school system.

Out of that beginning has grown the Sisters of Charity, a Charity community, with branches now in Maryland, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Nova Scotia, New Jersey and Pennsylvania and about 8,000 members.

They serve in about 600 schools, eight colleges, 67 hospitals, 35 nursing schools, 13 homes for orphans, 12 child-care institutions, nine homes for the aged, six schools for retarded children, in addition to working in a half-dozen foreign countries.

Mother Seton left more than 700 letters and 1,000 other personal documents. She once wrote to a woman friend in Philadelphia that a French band was visiting to "send you a tune by my brother's one, mind, no more, or you will be putting notions in the man's head."

Nova Scotian Professor To Work at Israeli Tell

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — A professor of history at St. Francis Xavier University plans a trip to the politically troubled Middle East this summer on a journey that will take him to Israel for a dig at a tell that is habited the Gaza Strip 5,000 years ago.

Rev. Burton MacDonald plans to go to Israel in June to begin work with a joint archaeological expedition to Tell El-Hesi, a mound of fortifications and habitations believed to date from 3000 BC. It will be Rev. MacDonald's fifth consecutive summer of working in digs and his third trip to the Tell El-Hesi site.

Last summer he was involved in work in Cyprus when fighting broke out between Turkish and Greek Cypriots.

The group was working at Maldon, a seaside city of Greek Cypriots, when the Turkish forces entered the area in mid-July and the expedition was evacuated a few days later after about 3% weeks at the site.

"We didn't find out until we reached London that the Turkish forces attacked the village where we were less than three hours after the evacuation," Father MacDonald said.

He anticipates no trouble in the Gaza area this summer.

"There's no imminent danger in working on the Tell El Hesi dig. The tell is mound, used by the Israelis during the six-day war in 1967 and was an important outpost.

"In fact, they dug trenches along the top of the mound and destroyed some of the previous archeological work.

"Father MacDonald said none of the fighting in 1973 was in or near the Gaza. The Tell El-Hesi is a year from the United States, is to train students and teach them about the archaeological work.

In 1975 participants will represent 12 universities, institutes and museums.

Father MacDonald teaches two courses in the St. Francis Xavier University Department, one of them dealing with the biblical history of the Middle East.

He is interested in the Bible and understanding its historical context, he said. "Archeology is the best means at our disposal to understand the Bible outside of the text itself."

Tell El-Hesi is located in the Plain of Philistia, about 16 miles northeast of Gaza, and is believed to be the site of the biblical city of Eglon, which was destroyed by Joshua.

United Church Centre Faces Opposing Views

NARAMATA, B.C. (CP) — They don't push religion at the United Church lay training centre here, but it is available for anyone who wants it.

The centre, one of four across Canada, includes in its year-long programme crafts-only ski weekends, workshops in gestalt therapy, training in arts and crafts and seminars in the women's movement.

Naramata, located in the Okanagan Valley, now is in its 27th year, and last year attracted 8,300 persons to secular and religious events.

Nancy Jackman, staff associate, says the centre tries not but to cancel religious events because of lack of registration, while some other religious courses get people flying in from Edmonton.

However, she sees a recent movement towards secular sign. Reality in the United Church, perhaps brought on by the youth-led resurgence in charismatic worship groups "who are not afraid to make a noise."

She says the centre has begun to inject more theology into its year-round activities, but the question of how to balance religious and secular events is unresolved.

One faction depicts the apparently secular nature of the centre, while the other wants it to be a counselling agency for "other structures," says Jackman, staff associate.

"Should we program for the spiritual nature of adults and youth? Or meet the program needs for community agencies and groups? Or provide for the Christian choice of options?" he asked, indicating his support of the latter alternative.

Nancy Jackman says people in the late teens and early 20s are often drawn to the secular activities in spring and winter, while most summer registrations are from church-going families.

However, she added that many persons attracted to non-religious events come away with some sort of consciousness of superior being.

Facilities at the 20-acre centre include a cafeteria, a tent and trailer area and a 50-bed residence, with plans under way for seminar facilities and a new residence.

Non-religious events come per cent by registrations, 18 per cent by the United Church, and the remainder from subsidies, bequests and investment interest.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, MAY 31, 1975

Cyclist Injured

A 23-year-old Belleville youth was hurt in Belleville Friday night when the bicycle he was driving was in collision with a vehicle near Bayside.

Jim Chalmers, RR 3, Belleville, was taken to CFB hospital about 11:45 Friday night with a fractured left ankle. Driver of the car, Jim Argle, 24, of Bayside, Belleville, was unhurt. The mishap took place on Highway 2 near Allen Rd.

Tweed Tax On Rise

TWEED — Taxpayers here will pay more in 1975 than in 1974, announced village reeve John Clemons, and when payments for the village lagoon begin in 1976, the mill rate will likely rise again, he said.

The residential public rate has increased 1.5 mills, the separate rate 13.4 mills, the commercial rate rises to 29.56 mills for public and 30.76 mills for separate school purpose.

Major factors in the increase are increased requirements of the Hastings County Boar ded Education and the county Roadf, said Mr. Clemons. Assessment for school board requirement is slightly less than last year, but county assessment accounts for the increase in separate school supporters' taxes.

New Diver Explains

Safety officer and member of Trenton's new underwater recovery unit Constable Roy Miller explains the workings of scuba equipment to Grade 5 students from College St. Public Sch ool Friday. The tour by the students was held in conjunction with Law En forcement Week across Ontario.

Trenton Police Form Scuba Unit

TRENTON — Police scuba divers from outside Trenton will no longer be called in frequently by the town police force with the introduction recently of the Trenton municipal underwater search and recovery unit.

Police Chief David Sanders said Friday creation of the two-man unit was prompted by the geographic location of Trenton. The town is spread along two river basins and the shores of the Bay of Quinte.

It officially swung into action March 6 this year after almost a year of preparation by the police committee and the two divers, safety officer Constable Roy Miller and Constable John Collins.

"By having two of our own divers," said Chief Sanders, "We'll be able to cut down on the time element."

Additional discomfort for relatives of drowned individuals would then not be prolonged in waiting for the divers, he said recovery of stolen goods thrown into the river would also be simplified.

Previously, Trenton called in divers from the Belleville city and provincial police.

Belleville police inspector Ralph Hatchford said Friday the city's five-man unit is used at least six times a year.

In operation for four years, the unit can put four fully - equipped men in the water for what is generally recovery work.

Insp. Hatchford, commenting on the new Trenton unit, said "our department respects young Roy's (Constable Miller) diving abilities very much."

The constable, who has been with the Trenton department for over 20 years, has several years of experience as a diver. At one time, he served as an scuba instructor.

Trenton's unit has not been used to date, said the chief. He said it will be used only for police activities.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responed to the following calls for assistance during a 24-hour period ending 8 a.m. today.

Friday, May 30, 4:28 p.m. — Cooking oil got on fire at, a home on Lexington Ave., with some smoke damage.

Saturday, May 31, 7:28 a.m. — a wooden child's fort at 44 Camilton Rd. got on fire this morning.

Talks Fail at International Hardware

Talks between the International Members and Allied Workers, Local 42, and Belleville's International Hardware broke down Friday, says a company spokesman.

According to the release, negotiations broke down after eight days.

The company states its last offer for a two-year contract would have given employees $1.18 an hour over the contract period (in pay and improved fringe benefits). This would represent a 31.2 per cent increase for workers.

Ray Ryan, chairman of the union negotiating committee, said during an interview, "We're not kidding at the fringe benefits but we want 31 an hour in addition to the benefits offered."

Mr. Ryan said the union wants the cap taken off the cost of living clause. The company offer has an eight-cent cap on for the first year and none for the second year.

A conciliation session has been completed and Mr. Ryan said it is likely the union will strike," — so late then June 9.

Study Suggests Central Ambulance Dispatch

By COLIN BRUCE

A provincial government study has concluded Belleville is "over serviced" with ambulance companies and that (two) companies are "overstaffed," The Intelligencer learned Friday.

Several months ago, the provincial government department of ambulance services announced the study would be taken to determine "the cost effectiveness" of the two companies in Belleville — La Salle Ambulance and City Ambulance.

Though the study was originally scheduled to be completed within two weeks, it finally stretched to six weeks with its findings still to be presented to the ministry.

Jerry Bahr, regional director of services for the department in Ottawa said a central dispatch centre for Belleville, Picton, Trenton, Madoc and Napanee is a major recommendation of his following study completion this week.

In all, Mr. Bahr said he has made 16 recommendation concerning the existing dispatch centre in Belleville and 10 recommendations aimed at the two companies.

"Up and down and over the long range plan would be to amalgamate the two services," he said.

He said this aim of amalgamation is duplicated in the report "but I didn't go through with it for some information."

"There is a great deal of duplication of management and administrative services in Belleville which could be eliminated by joining the two firms", said Mr. Bahr.

My general impression is that the city of Belleville is that it is not operated as efficiently and effectively as it might be," he said.

"There's definitely a need for improvement."

Asked if he believes the study was being completed six the budgets for both companies. Local operators were informed their 1975 budgets would not be approved until Mr. Bahr's recommendations were received by the province. The companies have been operating since May 1 on budgets based on 1974 budget figures since the beginning of the year.

"It won't be long now before we get some word on the budget," said Mr. Bahr.

A meeting has been arranged for the next week or so for township officials to sit down with the local operators to discuss the study "and provide the budgets," Mr. Bahr said.

"There probably will have to be some staff changes or adjustments in staff numbers and patterns," he said.

Circus Coming

With all of the black magic of the demon world, Satan Demon, billed as "the fiery, flickery, fantasy prince of darkness" brings his unusual act to Belleville with the Garden Bros. Circus.

Christian DeGraaf, Satan Demon to his fans, who comes from the Netherlands, has developed one of the most unique acts to appear in the circus world. Satanic performs in all three rings in a spectacle of fire and knives, finishes with a hoop of spinning daggers and fire brought which he jumps while blind-folded.

Satan Demon will be appearing in the Memorial Arena with the Garden Bros. Circus on Monday, May 26.

Search Continues For Missing Men

GARDENVILLE — The search for two Tuesday fishermen, missing in Walker's Bay, and presumed drowned, continues today after an extensive night suspension of dragging operations by provincial police and Gardenville area fire department vessels.

Missing since late Tuesday are Frank Millend, 35, and his 15-year-old son, Fred. Both men were staying in cottage at Young's Cove, near Gardenville, six miles southwest of Trenton.

A Picton OPP spokesman said today the 13-foot aluminum boat the man used was discovered ashore at Barcovan Beach, early Friday. Two oars were also found in the 16-square-mile-search area.

Search operations were carried out Friday by an OPP craft, a coast guard vessel, about six local fishing craft, and Brewster aircraft. The short-line patrol by the aircraft was taken over by a coast guard helicopter from Prescott mid-Friday.

The spokesman said OPP divers were brought in today when the search resumed at 7:30 a.m. It was called off Friday about 10-hours earlier.

Foul Language Closes Some Picton Stores

By MARG HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Newsboys and chocme language on Main St. have prompted several Picton merchants to close their stores on Friday nights but other businessmen say they plan to remain open as usual.

Donald Stewart of Mason's Department Stores says he has worked on Main Street for 17 years and in that time has always heard obscene language.

"I find beer bottles in front of the store some weekends," he noted.

Mr. Stewart adds Mason's Department Store does only Friday night trade throughout January and February when business is slow but remains open on Friday evenings for the balance of the year.

He said, however, he does not feel there is as much language heard on the streets as in former years when a pool room operated close to the store.

He says he does not feel language heard on the streets is keeping customers out of the store.

George Fraser, owner of Fraser's dry Goods says he will close Friday night because he feels most women shoppers hesitate to stop on Friday nights.

Mr. Fraser is backed by Mrs. Gordon Grant of Gordon's Men's Wear who says foulmouth language on Main Street is discouraging shoppers.

Walter Fraser and his wife Sue who operate the Lemon Tree Boutique and a men's clothing shop, The Vest Pocket say recent incidents of vandalism on Main Street and strong language will not force them to a Friday night closing.

"You do hear some absolutely foul language," observe Mrs. Fraser.

She adds, however, that obscenities can be heard on Main Street any day of the week, not just on Friday nights and a Friday closing would serve no purpose.

Picton police chief Charles Fletcher says he is aware of a decrease in Friday night shoppers but adds this trend began several months ago and he does not feel it is necessarily related to obscene language on Main Street.

Tools Taken

City police today reported the theft of automotive tools valued at $200 from an Alexander St. garage.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said today the theft from the premises of Michael Michael Hodnett, took place sometime near Friday night.

Investigation continues.

All Townships Face Hike in School Costs

By MARG HAYLOCK

BLOOMFIELD — The Prince Edward County Board of Education has announced 1975 educational tax levies totalling $1,323,716 for the county's 10 municipalities this year in comparison with $1,117,000 in 1974.

Picton clerk Andrew Jarvis says the increase in town taxpayers to $325,981 from $261,540 in 1974 will reflect a rise of about 1.5 mills for town ratepayers.

In Wellington, the levy has been increased $92,338 from $51,387 this year.

Bloomfield village faces a raise from $29,423 in 1974 to $94,106 this year.

In Ameliasburg township the levy will jump from $265,469 in 1974 to $291,388 in 1975.

In Athol the 1975 levy will total $28,627 in comparison with $21,603 last year.

Hallowell ratepayers "will pay an increase this year of $368,221 in contrast with the 1974 levy of $180,800.

In Hillier the 1975 levy will be $94,488 in comparison with last year's figure of $73,726.

North Marysburg ratepayers this year will pay $78,919 in comparison with $66,828 in 1974.

In South Marysburg the levy has increased from $41,338 in 1974 to $48,745 in 1975.

In Sophiasburg the increased levy totals $13,216 this year in contrast with the 1974 levy of $179,853.

Out in Force

Four different police forces were represented Friday at Quinte Mall to tell the public about their work as Law enforcement Week drew to a close. With their young acquaintances are, left to right, Belleville city Sergeant Bob Hall, OPP Constable Don Kusyk, CN Police Constable Bill Royea and RCMP Constable Jim Rouse. The youngsters are Ruth Joy, 7, of Belleville, RR 7, Belleville and Shawn Meeks, 10, 48 Dundas St. E.

Traffic a Concern, But Most Favor Mall

Should Front St. be made into a summer-long mall? The majority of people contacted on an informal Intelligencer survey thought it would be a good idea if E ven not for the traffic problems that would then develop.

A plan to make Front St. into a mall and build a street along the Moira River was discussed for several years ago and called the "Magic Circle Plan".

Wilbur Purcell, City Manager, said although the idea is not active right now, it has not been forgotten. He expects the "Magic Circle Plan" to re-appear along with new Front St., planning ideas at the Subdivisate Planning Advisory Commission at the end of the month.

"I feel quite certain any studies from the past will be given serious consideration," said Mr. Purcell.

Out of half a dozen short interviews a majority feels the idea of summer-long mall is good for a lot of places, but adds there are certain drawbacks in Belleville that would prevent its success.

Most did agree it would attract more shoppers to the downtown area and a more relaxed atmosphere would be created without the presence of automobiles.

BILL CLARE

Bill Clare, a window cleaner, feels a summer-long mall on Front St. would attract many more shoppers to the downtown area. "It should have been changed to a mall years ago and a street put along the river. Malls have proven to be a success and I feel this one would also." He feels the only drawback would be that it could not be climatically controlled like the Quinte Mall.

SUE RIEDEL

Bayside Secondary School student, Sue Riedel feels that the mall would have its pros and cons. "It would not be feasible because the heavy traffic problems would be created. There are already two malls, why have a third?" Then she continued, "But it would create a nice atmosphere if there were benches and maybe a bar set up."

DEREK PALIDWAR

Trenton machinist, Derek Palidwar does not feel that a Front St. mall would be totally successful. "Why change it when we already have the Quinte Mall with all its free parking?" He says he feels its only advantage would be that store items could be displayed in a better way and this would attract more shoppers to the downtown area.

VIRGINIA CONLON

Mrs. Conlon, a clerk, says she feels "It would be a good idea if it could be made in reasonable the mall in Ottawa with facilities to sit outside and have a meal and drink. ...ot it would definitely attract more shoppers which would be good for the downtown region."

MAE SHANNON

Mrs. Shannon, a part-time Wellington librarian says she feels the mall would make shopping more relaxing for people. She adds if it were made similar to the Ottawa mall then it would probably increase the business for downtown merchants.

"There would all the one stop street traffic go though? We need a lot of planning for something like that to be successful."

Mavety Signs With Macs

Belleville McDonald's were looking for a pitcher and they don't come much bigger or much better around here than Larry Mavety's. Thursday night following an exhibition game in Newarket Mavety put his mark on a McDonald's card.

"I was really hoping Larry would come with us, said Mac general manager, Doug Adams. "He's one of the best ball players around and he'll undoubtedly help us in every department."

Mavety, a 22-year-old catcher, initially wasn't sure whether or not he wanted to play for the local Quinte Baseball League team because of the time and travel involved. He just spent this past winter travelling across North America with the Chicago Cougars and the Toronto Twos of the World Hockey Association.

"We have to put everything we've got into a team like this," said the Two defenseman. "I don't think all the time and the effort will be worth it."

Along with 'Mav', the Macs also signed former Cobourg star Dave Harrison. Like Mavety, he too swings a big bat. Harrison, a six-foot-one outfielder now resides in Oak Ridges. He also speaks of playing first base and catcher. "I feel it's welcome addition to the team," said Adams. "He's the kind of player that would be welcome with any team. He's a real leader and given the chance, he'll do the time."

Mavety has spent the last several years playing in the Quinte Baseball League. In 1974 he won the league's batting championship for the third time and was voted the league's best Valuable Player (the second time he has received that honor). He did all this while heading Alexander Mann's West to the OFL final. The Trenton team probably would have taken the league title if Mavety hadn't had to leave for the Cougars training camp.

"I think this team is going to surprise a lot of people," he said. "Pound for pound slugger, "that was one thing that concerned me. So far, I honestly believe that this club will be highly competitive."

"If I don't," he added, "I wouldn't be here."

LARRY MAVETY

Both Mavety and Harrison will be in the lineup when the Macs take on Woodstock Saturday night and Kitchener in a doubleheader Sunday.

Sutton Goes from Perfect Game to Loss in Final Innings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nobody's perfect. Not even Don Sutton.

The righthander came close to pitching a perfect game Friday night for Los Angeles Dodgers, but fell apart in the last two innings.

First he lost his no-hitter. Then he lost his shutout. And finally, he lost the National League baseball game to Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2.

"Pittsburgh is an explosive club", said Sutton. "When they hit, it's like an epidemic. It runs through the whole ball club".

For 7 1-3 innings, Sutton was in complete control with a 1-0 lead. And it looked like that was all he was going to need. He struck out seven, and allowed only two balls to be hit out of the infield. The Pirates got nothing resembling a hit.

But with one out in the eighth, Richie Zisk hit a bat grounder that hit the left of third baseman Ron Cey and into left field for the Pirates' first hit. Dave Parker followed with a line single to centre and Manny Sanguillen singled to the right.

Dalton gave up his fourth hit to Bennie Stennett in the ninth and then his fifth, a home run by Al Oliver. As the ball flew into the right field pavilion in Dodger Stadium, there went Sutton's chances of winning.

In other National League games Friday, Montreal Expos beat Cincinnati Reds 4-2, Philadelphia Phillies routed Atlanta Braves 13-6, New York Mets trimmed Houston Astros 10-3, San Diego Padres beat Chicago Cubs 8-2 and San Francisco Giants defeated St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 in 10 innings.

After Oliver put the Pirates ahead 3-1 in the top of the ninth, the Dodgers scored a run off Dave Giard in their half of the inning on Steve Garvey's single, an infield out and a single by Cey. Bill Buckner then grounded into a game-ending double play.

Until the game-tying rally, Pittsburgh's hardest hit ball was Oliver's grounder to the left of shortstop Rick Auerbach with two out in the seventh.

Auerbach fielded the ball and threw into the dirt at first, but Garvey scooped it on the shoe top as the crowd of 44,111 roared its approval.

Garvey gave the crowd a scare in the sixth when he grounded Sanguillen's leadoff grounder behind first but recovered in time to beat the Pittsburgh catcher to the bag by a stage.

Two-run homers by Mike Schmidt, pitcher Larry Christenson and Larry Bowa in a six-run second inning helped streaking Philadelphia to its fifth win in a row.

Ed Kranepool's two-run double sparked a four-run first inning rally for Montreal and Dave Kingman homered for the Mets.

Enzo Hernandez drove in three runs and Dave Winfield for two and Joe McIntosh pitched a six-hitter in lead San Diego over Chicago.

Tony Thomas led off the Giants' 10th inning with a triple and later scored the winning run on Willie McCovey' line drive in shallow centre.

McKeon Slips Wrong Order Past BoSox

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Manager Jack McKeon of Kansas City Royals signed a lineup card Friday night at Fenway Park in Boston. In fact, he signed several of them.

But the battle order he handed to umpire Bill Deegan wasn't the same one the Royals used to beat the Red Sox 5-2.

On the lineup card McKeon turned in, he had Amos Otis batting third, but when the game began there was Otis in the No. 8 spot.

And he came up with a key single in Kansas City's three-run third inning, with two runs scoring on the hit and an error by left fielder Carlton Carbo.

"I made out three or four lineup cards," said McKeon. "I must have turned in the wrong one."

In Friday's other American League games, Milwaukee Brewers lowered Minnesota Twins 3-1, Oakland As tripped New York Yankees 5-4, Texas Rangers thumped Detroit Tigers 10-2, California Angels stopped Baltimore Orioles 3-2 after dropping the opener of their doubleheader 1-0 and Chicago White Sox edged Cleveland Indians 3-2 with three runs in the bottom of the ninth.

The lineup card incident left the Boston faces as red as their suit. Had manager Darrell Johnson protested, Otis would have been called out and the runners ordered back to first and third.

And since Hal McRae followed with a ground-rule double, the Royals would have scored only one run in the inning instead of three.

"I didn't have their lineup card," Johnson explained. "I never got one in this ballpark. We make four copies. The visiting manager keeps one, the plate umpire one and two go upstairs to the press box.

"I don't know why you go upstairs, but I'm certainly going to find out. I've been taking the lineups off the scoreboard, but no more after this. They (the Royals) still would have been ahead of us in runs, but you never know. It may have been a different ballgame."

The Brewers bunched all five of their hits in the fourth inning. After Dave Goltz retired the first nine Milwaukee batters, Don Money opened the fourth inning with a single and scored the tying run on a double by Bill Sharp.

Bobby Mitchell's single made it 3-1 and George Scott also singled. After Hank Aaron flied out, Darrell Porter delivered a run-scoring single.

Vida Blue became the first eight-game winner in the majors by hurling a seven-hitter for his sixth consecutive triumph for the A's.

Tom Grieve's two-run homer and Toby Harrah's three-run double paced the rout of Detroit ace Mickey Lolich. Texas Rangers Lolich during a five-run third-inning outburst.

Tommy Harper hit his first two homers of the season, driving in all the runs as the Angels won the second game behind Ed Figueroa's three-hitter.

When the Orioles took the opener when Bobby Grich lined his sixth home run of the season off the left field foul pole with two on in the ninth inning to beat Jim Palmer's nine-hit pitching.

Cleveland's Jim Kern had a three-hitter and a 2-0 lead when he walked Bill Melton to start the ninth and Tom Bunkey relieved him. Singles by Doron Johnson and Tony Muser got one run home and a single by Bucky Dent loaded the bases.

Dave LaRoche replaced Bunkey and struck out Bill Sudakis Dennis Eckersley took over when Bucky Bradford batted for Pat Kelly. Bradford was hit with a pitch, forcing in the tying run, and Jorge Orta walked, pushing home the winner.

Jack McKeon – Mistake Pays Off

Expos Edge Slumping Reds

MONTREAL (CP) — Right-hander Dennis Blair fired a six-hitter Friday night to lead the Expos to a 4-2 win over Cincinnati Reds in a National League baseball game Friday night.

Blair, who walked six batters in his 8 1-3 innings, has issued 34 walks in 41 innings this year. "As hard as he throws," said Expos catcher, "and as much as the ball moves around, he's a real tough pitcher to catch."

Carter started his third game of the season at catcher and found himself awed by the fact he was facing the Reds and superstar catcher Johnny Bench. The margin of victory gave the eighth losing when the Expos scored twice on singles by Pepe Mangual and Barry Scott. It was Mangual's sixth game-winning hit and his fifth in Montreal's last six wins.

But Blair, now 3-4, needed help from Chuck Taylor to check the Reds in the ninth when Bench hit a pinch-hitter Ken Griffey, who had reach base on Tim Foli's error.

Taylor collected his third save by striking out Joe Morgan and walking Bench before getting Tony Perez to hit into a force play with the bases loaded.

Larry Bittner's home run in the second and Scott's fourth-inning ground ball accounted for the other Montreal runs.

The Reds opened the scoring in the first when Morgan scored after Dave Concepcion hit into a fielder's choice. Carter was charged with an error when home plate umpire Nick Colosi said he had failed to cover the plate.

"I've never done that before in my life," said Carter. "I know that I scraped it like that," he said, dragging his right foot.

He partially made up for the mistake in the next inning, standing his ground firmly and applying the tag at Darrell Chaney, trying to score on a single by Rose, hurtled into and over him.

Starter Jack Billingham 3-3 took the loss for the Reds, who have lost four straight games, their longest losing string since 1971.

Fred Norman, 3-1, pitches for Cincinnati today against Steve Rogers, 3-4.

DENNIS BLAIR

PITCHER SENT DOWN

San Francisco Giants of the National League have sent pitcher John Fuller back down to their Tacoma club in Phoenix. D'Acquisto has posted a 14 two-ton record and has an 11.25 earned run average with the Giants this season.

If You're Betting Take Macs This Weekend

Belleville's Big Macs are expected to roll into their first season in the Ontario Football League.

After five exhibition games against the two Toronto teams, the Macs open their home schedule tonight against Woodstock. Tomorrow night they take on Kitchener in a double header, also at Alumite Park.

After tacking up a 3-2-1, wide-but-fast start, in two outings with the Oshawa Tiger's and three with the Newmarket Ray's, the Macs should find Saturday's contest a bit of a let down.

Woodstock was the doormat of the league last season and it doesn't appear that that situation is going to change much this year. They were just in the East Division, with an 11-34, was-but record. They were so far behind with two third of schedule to go they forfeited their last game.

No doubt the Macs are going to knock a — out of them when they clash under the lights at 8:15 p.m

Waiting Is Part Of Ali's Game

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Claiming that at 33 he is a young man, Muhammad Ali says he wants to give Joe Bugner or Jean Pierre Coopman or Furuma a shot at his world heavyweight boxing title before the year is out.

Ali did not look so phoney for 15 rounds Friday night when 33-year-old Ron Lyle appeared to be visibly tired late Ali.

But that ended in the 11th, when Ali unleashed a barrage of head punches that left the encurled, helpless and blinded his one shot at fame and fortune ended in a few seconds of speed and power.

Ali, who had a bruise over his left eye, at the cause of the 11th round—in which he held his handicapped opponent rounds he would finish Lyle—credited his new strategy of wearing down his foe for the swift ending to a dull fight.

"I knew I was behind because he had thrown the most punches," said Ali. "I could never to win all the rest of the rounds," he said.

At 224½, Ali was the heaviest he's been for his 14 title fights, and he gave a lethargic performance for the first 10 rounds.

Ali said he wanted Lyle to wear himself out pounding him on the ropes, but when Lyle refused to do that, Ali had to go the centre of the ring for the "Mirage—like ignorance on the desert thinking they can see water and get that land."

Lyle, weighing 219, denied he was behind on the scorecards before the fight should have continued. But Ali said he was the way it looked to others.

Ali caught him with a left-right, right combination on the 11th, sending Lyle, who had stopped Jerry Quarry in two rounds and staggered Lyle, who avoided a knockdown by falling against the ropes. Then, Ali behind home a long series of rapid, short strong fellow-ups—as many as 25 punches—that Lyle could not evade as he staggered.

Ali signalled for referee Ferd Hernandez to stop the fight, and later said: "The man was unconscious. He wasn't defending himself. I cannot kill a man. I could see in his eyes he was hurt there to be hit."

Hernandez finally stopped at 2:00 of the 11th round.

A crowd of 6,825 paid $258,872 to watch in person as a nationwide television audience saw the bout at home. The first time Ali has been shown on home television since 1966.

Ali collected $1 million for his second defense since knocking out Foreman for the title in Zaire.

Lyle got $150,000 and now must face charges of second degree assault and felony menacing, in Denver arising out of an altercation with his estranged wife. Lyle already has served 7½ years in the penitentiary for second degree murder although he was later pardoned and the pardoned.

Since becoming a professional fighter on release from prison, Lyle built a 30-5-1 record to challenge Ali. He was rated the No. 7 challenger.

Ali, now 47-3 with 34 knockouts, next is scheduled to fight Joe Bugner in Kuala Lumpur June 30. "I'd like to fight Bugner, Coopman, Furuma and Bethea the year is over," he said.

Ali admitted Lyle hurt him with an uppercut that bloodied his eye but he didn't remember the incident. Ali said he was

Beats Out Elton John

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Elton John never had a chance in this hockey-mad city, which now has made fortune recorded by Philadelphia Flyers' Dave Schultz in his test song.

As Schultz's work, Penalty Box, nudged John's Philadelphia Freedom off the top spot locally, it was a question of one local sports-oriented song slipping another.

Schultz, known as The Hammer for his less-than-subtle ways of dealing with opposing hockey players, has spent more time during a season in the penalty box than any other National Hockey League player.

DAVE SCHULTZ

His record was set in 20-000 crowds back since being released several weeks ago.

Philadelphia Freedom is about the defunct World Team Tennis squad, is a national hit, which is more than can be said for the team. The Freedoms were sold this year to a Boston group.

One Flyer was quoted recently as doubting Schultz's effort would make it to the top of the charts.

"As a singer, Schultz is a great fighter," he said.

Foolish Pleasure Today's Favorite

BALTIMORE (AP) — Foolish Pleasure, expected to become the 19th horse in history to win both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, was a 2-5 favorite at 19 today in the 109th running of the second leg of the Triple Crown.

However, if he wins the Preakness, the Belmont still looms ahead for the much beaten son of What A Pleasure by his pursuit of the Triple Crown.

Seven times since the Triple Crown sweeps of Citation in 1948 and Secretariat in 1973 the horse has won the Derby and Preakness only to fail in the Belmont.

Expected to give Foolish Pleasure a tough race in both the Preakness were Avatar and Diabolo, second and third in John L. Greer's colt in the Derby Saturday. Other horses than Giant, an invader from the West Coast, Jim Dandy, undeated this season.

Also going to Cut Spec, Tom Rolfe, Master Derby, Tiny Tom Art, Anthony Leggins Bold Chapeau, Sidney Lanier, Hermann's Master Derby, Thomas Jewel, 'Ot Time and Ole Ben, as well Gleick's Media, the last two a belated entry.

LOST GROUND

Foolish Pleasure went into the Preakness as winner of 11 of his 12 starts including wins in the March 29 Florida Derby when both Prince Tenderfoot and his stablemate, Sylvan Place, beat him to the wire.

Avatar, 3-year-old veteran Bill Shoemaker on his back, was 1¾ lengths behind Foolish Pleasure in the Derby, the only time the two have been in the same race.

In that race, Avatar and Diabolo bumped rumps with each other in a furious to go. The collision came just as Foolish Pleasure zipped by to take the lead.

Both Shoemaker and Laffit Pincay, who piloted Diabolo, said the incident had no effect on the outcome of the race, but trainer LeRoy Jolley said it "sure could hurt" his Foolish Pleasure one bit.

That same day, some 3,000 miles west of Louisville, Native Giant was winning by four-and-four as he put down George Harmon by three lengths in the 1 1/16-mile Santa Anita at Hollywood Park.

HANDLEY IN RACE

Always ridden by Sandy Hawley of Mississauga, Ont., who has won more than 2,000 races in his short career, Native Guest has captured his four wins by a total of more than 114 lengths.

Cynthia Phipps' Singh has won six of his last seven races, the last of them in the Grade 3 Heritage Stakes at Keystone in December when Circle Home finished second, 2½ lengths back.

Diabolo, owned by Frank M c M a h o n of Vancouver, jumped into contention for the classic races when he downed Shakaar, ridden by Jorge Velez, Shoemaker in Pincay and Laffit Pincay in the Golden Fields track record that had stood for a quarter century.

Master Derby, fifth, gold and red colors of Mrs. Robert Kleberg's Golden Chain Farm, won five in a row before finishing a close fifth in the Kentucky Derby.

Tiny Tom, formerly of Grand Falls, N.B., will be aboard Just Ole Time.

Two Canadian Records Crash

WINNIPEG (CP) — Nancy Garapick of Halifax and Gail Amundrod, a native of Ottawa, shattered Canadian records Friday night to win gold medals on the opening day of the 1975 spring national swimming championships.

The victoriks assured them berths on the team to be named Monday night to represent Canada at the world aquatic championships in Cali, Colombia, July 16-27.

Miss Garapick, 13, was the 100-metre backstroke in 1:04.50, shaved a of different record-holder Wendy Cook of Vancouver.

Miss Amundrod won the 200-metre freestyle in 2:04.83, two seconds faster than her time in the morning heats.

Six national records and one open record were bettered during the first day of the four-day competition.

Miss Garapick emerged from obscurity this spring when she won the 200-metre backstroke at the U.S. nationals and narrowly missed the 100-metre gold medal. Last month she set a the world record in the 200-metre backstroke.

Miss Amundrod, on the other hand, has been one of the top 10 performers in Canada since the 1971 Canada Games. Garapick and Amundrod are members of the Halifax Dolphins Swim Club in Vancouver that also began making serious inroads.

The Dolphins continued to dominate the Canadian swimming scene, winning five of the eight events Friday and picking up half the medals.

Stephen Pickell of the Dolphins was the only double gold medallist and one of only two defending champions able to retain their titles. The 17-year-old Canadian champion easily won his favorite event, the 100-metre backstroke, in 58.33 seconds. But that time is nearly two seconds off his personal best.

However, he outpaced teammate and defending champion Bruce Robertson to win the 200-metre freestyle in 1:58.48, bettering Robertson's Canadian record.

Bruce Rogers of Toronto was the only other champion to retain his title, winning the 200-metre butterfly in 2:05.44. But he was bettered by almost three his heat-winning time from the morning. Rogers won his heat in 2:04.99 to set a Canadian record.

Wendy Quirk, 15, of Pointe Claire, Que., was barely pushed out on the opening day when she shook off a strong challenge in the 200-metre butterfly to win in 2:18.82.

Becky Smith of Edmonton overtook Quirk near the halfway mark and was leading going into the final length before Quirk's strong sprint enabled her to grab the victory.

The Dolphins set new Canadian records in both the men's and women's 200-metre freestyle relays. The women lowered the standard to 1:50.13 as they barely edged Pointe Claire, and the men set the mark at 1:37.38.

Smith Ready to Spring Surprise on Flyers

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Coach Floyd Smith of Buffalo Sabres has appeared relaxed throughout the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Smith, in his first year of coaching, didn't even get upset when his club dropped a 7-1 and 8-2 decisions to Montreal Canadiens in Buffalo.

And despite the fact Buffalo trails 1-0 in their final series against Philadelphia Flyers, Smith still looks on the bright side.

The Sabres lost a 4-1 decision to Philadelphia Thursday night in the opening game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup final League final, which resumes here Sunday afternoon.

"I feel very optimistic," Smith said Friday from Buffalo where his club worked out. "We expect our players to make mistakes. We're a young hockey club. Don't forget this is our first season."

"The defensive mistakes were made—but a couple of kids got a little anxious and forgot the puck. That's the way it goes. You can't cry about that."

Smith said he has something planned for Sunday when they resume. "I have to pull out my surprise. If I tell you what it is, there's no surprise. I didn't want to use it this early. But I'm going—it has to be now."

Even the fact that Buffalo has never won a game in the Spectrum has not dented Smith's hopes.

"I've only coached three games in the building," he said. "In the other two games, we haven't played well. I don't thought we played well enough last night. Fortunately, we just didn't get the breaks."

Flyers' coach Fred Shero said after Thursday night's game that he intended to change staff in either the second or third game of the series.

When asked to comment on Shero's statement, Smith said: "We seem to play better when we get in a rough contest. I think it would be to our advantage if the game got rough."

Smith said it was unlikely winger Rick Dudley, sidelined since the first game of the Montreal series April 27, would be back in Buffalo's lineup Sunday.

Smith said he intended to stand-pat with the same lineup he used in the second game.

Buffalo's victory over Montreal in the National Hockey League semi-final brought Penjardins edge, but he hoist is waiting a series for the Flyers to reach the final.

Maybe his timing was off and he was fighting the puck! He wasn't nervous, Desjardins said, although he was feeling the jitters.

"I still get them. Believe me there was a lot of pressure on me to win up in Montreal, you know. . . . There was a lot publicity in that series and I felt that drained me a bit. The week off might have helped the Flyers. I don't think so, however. But it's only the first game."

For the first 20 minutes, the Sabres Desjardins had the handle were ones off the sticks of Ed Van Impe and Clarke.

Don't think a goaltender likes going through a period with only two shots against him in a game such as this because he has to remain sharp for too much or getting tense.

"You're thinking too much about the next shot coming, maybe worried about mis-handling it".

Six more Flyer shots in the second period underscored what must have been the dullest 40 minutes of the playoffs since December when Chicago Black Hawks and Montreal Canadiens faced off in the Stanley Cup final. He got wicked for three goals over an eight-minute span in the third period, and the Flyers were on course to a 4-1 win in the opener of the best-of-seven series.

On the first goal, Desjardins got caught going the wrong way. On another, his leg was trapped. Then his own defenseman (captain Jim Schoenfeld) and Rick Martin collided swooped in, fumbled and then scored.

Not blaming yourself, Gerry? "No."

"No, not really. I don't think I did in any bad goals. I don't think I could have stopped a couple if I had been sharp."

Hartin', But Hangin' In

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Professional golfer Lee Trevino is wounded have taken command in the $125,000 New Orleans Open.

Veteran Billy Casper, who has a history of good play when he's not feeling well, was the lone hole lead at 135, nine under par.

He actually withdrew from this tournament on Thursday when he was in bed with a stomach pain. He later rescinded the withdrawal.

Tom Shaw, who suffered nerve damage in his right arm and lost feeling in two fingers in the result of a dog bite in February, is second, one shot back at 136, going for today's third round.

Lanny Wadkins, still on the mend from surgery to remove his appendix and gall bladder last winter, is one of five at 137, two shots back.

And Fred Marshall, who popped the tip of a match into his eye two weeks ago, heads a group at 138, just three strokes off the pace after Friday's second round.

"It started out like, I was gonna have a real good round, but it just kind of fizzled out," said the 43-year-old Casper, who shot a one-under-par 68 to break out of a tie from the 10 golf. He birdied five of his first seven holes, then tailed off.

"I'm still not fully recovered from that stomach virus," he said. "Toward the end I was getting weak and tired. I had trouble keeping my concentration."

George Knudson of Toronto, the only Canadian in the tournament, shot his best round, a sub-par round, a 69, for a 139 total.

Shaw, in a slump since winning two titles in 1971, had a 67 that tied him for second with Englishman Peter Oosterhuis, who shot a 68 in hot, muggy, hazy, threatening weather on the wet and soggy course.

Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller, Gary Player and Arnold Palmer are not competing.

Rushing Not His Thing

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — Gary Dornhoefer (thing) he took foolish if he tried to carry the puck from end to end like teammate Rick Macleish.

Instead, the injury-prone right winger helps Philadelphia Flyers by antagonizing the opposition.

Dornhoefer, who hasn't gone a full season in the National Hockey League without an injury, was at his best Thursday as the Flyers defeated Buffalo Sabres 4-1 in the opening game of the Stanley Cup final.

"I guess the way I'in built, I should be more of a skater and shooter," the 6-foot-3, 190-pound Dornhoefer says. "But I don't have that kind of talent. I can't handle the puck or shoot like Macleish and Bobby Clarke.

The 29-year-old native of Kitchener, Ont., had 17 goals and 27 assists in 63 games this season, and three goals and five assists after 12 playoff games.

Dornhoefer spent the days between games of the semi-finals against New York Islanders by best-treating a chronically grimpy knee.

"One of the biggest disappointments of my life was not being on the ice at the final game last season. I intend to be there this time."

With the defending Stanley Cup champions since being defeated in the 1967 expansion, he missed 21 games in 1973-74 with injuries before ending the season in the third game of the final against Boston Bruins with a separated shoulder. He missed nine games this season with chest and back injuries.

Since joining Boston in 1968-69 after playing junior hockey for Niagara Falls (Ont.) Flyers, he has scored 154 goals and 254 assists in 387 regular-season games. He has also served 1,000 minutes in penalties.

"Derny scores goals other players wouldn't . . . because he's willing to stand in front of the net and let the defenseman bang on him" said Bobby Clarke, captain of the Flyers. "There's plenty of guys in this league who can skate and fancy-dan circles around Derny but he gives us what we need to win."

After Thursday's game, Dornhoefer said he felt he was hurting.

"Where do I hurt? All over. At this time of the year, I'm hurting in places where I didn't even know I had places."

IN MEMORIAM

BRADSHAW — In loving memory of a dear father and grandmother Alexander, who passed away four years ago today, May 17, 1972.
Sad was the parting
Hard to bear
But left in a memory
Dear to all who
Its treasure have
Sweet the hour
Of our departed
For what we lost
She was one of the best.
—Lovingly remembered by her daughter Donna and son Frank.

BRADSHAW — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Alexander, who passed away May 18th, 1972.
There's not a day, not an hour
We do not think of you
—Lovingly remembered by daughter Lorraine and family, Ann Marie and family.

MUSE — In loving memory of a dear father, Robert J. Muse, who passed away May 18th, 1972.
His weary hours and days of pain, and troubled nights are past.
And in our aching hearts
We miss his smile and sweet rest of mind
—Lovingly remembered by son Edgar and daughter Marie.

MUSE — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather Robert J. Muse, who passed away May 18th, 1972.
Dad's not in pain
Dad's not in sorrow
Dad's not in anguish
Dad is in peace
—Loved and remembered, Bob Thelma and family.

MUSE — In loving memory of a dear grandfather, Robert J. Muse, who passed away May 18th, 1972.
Sleep on dear Grandpa, sleep on and take your rest
He was called by his Master
To do his closest His arms around you
And whispered softly unto you
"You didn't deserve what you went through"
And so He gave you your rest
God's garden must be beautiful
For he only takes the best
—Always remembered by Jimmy, Rebecca and Sandra.

BRADSHAW — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, who died May 19, 1971.
Time did not forgetting —Ever remembered by Mary and George.

POSTE — In fond and loving memory of a dear father George Frederick Poste who departed from us May 17, 1971.
God knew that he was suffering,
But the hills were hard to climb,
So he closed his weary eyelids,
Gave a smile and passed on
In life we had our troubles
In death we do the same.
Sadly missed by Howard, Judy and Kim.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Opportunities presented to you today will have some of their luster if you don't follow through promptly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may do something today out of quite an anger that will be as damaging to you as it is to the other guy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22) Watch your step with co-workers today. Try not to team up with one who does things in a hasty, careless manner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're likely to have your priorities in the wrong order today. Get that would be helpful! Do you have any ideas on this subject?—Mrs. A. M. C.

There are several possible causes of your dry skin, and since you are only 46, we might rule out one common one—age.

Low thyroid function (hypothyroidism) is marked by a coldness and dryness in the skin, so you might be checked for your thyroid state. In hypothyroidism there can be an insufficient production of the hormone needed to yet carotene to use. Carotene is what is called a "pre-vitamin," and when it is metabolized in the body it becomes Vitam A.

Since Vitamin A is essential to skin health, you may wish to consult your physician about the possibility of taking it as a supplement to your diet.

Diabetes, too, can be accompanied by the same Vitamin A deficiency.

But your obvious problem, cracked skin, requires some immediate attention as it appears from your letter to be serious. It may or may not be secondary to an underlying condition, such as the one I suggest above.

Skin, as you probably are aware, can vary considerably in its natural texture and resistance to environmental factors—soaps, detergents, chemicals, etc. I presume you are very careful about these things. Stockings and gloves can be sources of irritation, especially if your skin is sensitive to certain of the synthetic materials. Try wearing white cotton slipons for your feet, and see if this doesn't help.

If you cannot find the sources of irritation from such methods, you would be wise to be checked for some of the other potential causes of your dry skin.

Too, your problem is not uncommon in menopause, and you may find this as a root of your skin disturbances.

NOTE TO N.M.—Your sudden aversion at sex after your pregnancy is not normal, but it does occur in some women. It is almost always psychological. I suspect you had a difficult pregnancy and delivery.

I can only suggest you find some psychiatric help, since it seems to be destroying your otherwise happy marriage. Why not discuss it openly with your husband and your doctor?

Several Causes For Dried Skin

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have extremely dry skin on my hands and feet.

My feet have cracks in them through every layer of skin, and they are quite painful. My hands peel in spots, particularly at the tips of my fingers. Do I have a disease that would be helpful? Do you have any ideas on this subject?—Mrs. A. M. C.

New Stoppage Planned

Quebec Building Sites Busy Again

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec construction sites hummed with activity, two days before a planned province-wide work stoppage by some members of the 230,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL).

Federation leaders urged the workers to return to their jobs, ending 11 days of illegal work stoppages aimed at pressuring the implementation of recommendations in the Cliche reports on the construction industry.

One of the report's recommendations is that four union local affiliate with the QFL, be put under government trusteeship in an effort to eliminate certain criminal elements.

A QFL spokesman said workers were asked to return "because it was felt it would be best if the men were working again when the trusteeships are imposed."

The federation will consider other means to oppose the trusteeships in the next few weeks, he added.

The work stoppages saw as many as 10,000 men off the job by last Thursday shutting down most major construction projects in the province including the Olympic Games site and his new Mirabel International airport north of Montreal.

Work resumed on the Olympic Village Monday but the neighboring Olympic stadium site remained idle even though some workers showed up for work at 7 a.m.

A spokesman for the general contractor said the site was still closed until further notice because preparations to resume operations had not yet been completed. It is expected to open Thursday.

The QFL has estimated that as many as 150,000 workers will stay off the job Wednesday.

Those who have agreed to take part include the 35,000-member Canadian Union of Public Employees, the 40,000-member United Steelworkers of America, unions representing about 20,000 construction workers, 15,000 pulp and paper workers and 15,000 workers in service industries, QFL president Louis Laberge said.

The Confederation of National Trade Unions, (CNTU) which has 200,000 members across the province, voted Sunday not to allow its members to join in the work stoppages.

About 500 delegates to a CNTU meeting in Quebec City decided, however, to let affiliated unions support or reject the walkout as they see fit.

There has not yet been any official response from the Quebec Teachers Corporation or the Central des Syndicats Democratiques, the other major union centrals in the province.

The general walkout is aimed at protesting labor policies of the Quebec government, particularly its failure to resolve the dispute at Pratt&nad Whitney of Canada Ltd. (formerly United Aircraft).in Longueil, Que., where workers have been on strike for 17 months.

Thirty-four men, who last week occupied the plant, holding 18 hostages for four hours, have been charged with possible detention, conspiring and extortion and mischief causing $250,- 000 damage.

Premier Robert Bourassa Sunday told a Liberal party regional convention in Donnacona, Que., the planned walkout is pointless since a settlement in the strike is imminent.

But Mr. Laberge told a news conference Monday he does not believe the government is ready to take the necessary steps to end the dispute.

The company would have to reinstate 1,500 strikers with full seniority if the recommendations the Cliche report, is expected to the Quebec construction industry which named QFL-affiliated local represented plumbers, electricians, heavy machine operators and elevator constructors as corrupt.

The legislation was passed Friday, Mr. Bourassa said the names of trustees will be announced this week.

Legislation barring anyone with a criminal record from union office, also recommended in the Cliche report, is expected to be given third reading this week.

Despite upset production schedules, Olympics officials insisted Monday there was no panic epidemic that Games facilities will be completed on time.

Mr. Drapeau said Sunday, however, that Olympic costs will increase as a result of the work stoppages. Self-financing schemes such as stamp and coin sales, the Olympic lottery, ticket sales and television rights should take care of the extra costs with no added burden on the taxpayer, he added.

The Games were originally estimated to cost $310 million. Official figures released last January showed the cost had jumped to more than $800 million for the 70,000-seat Olympic stadium alone accounting for $400 million.

Cambodians Who Took Mayaguez Mutiny and Flee to Thailand

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Cambodian naval crew says it seized the freighter Mayaguez in mutininy against its Communist captain and sailed to Thailand seeking asylum, sources say.

Initial reports about the crew's actions remained sketchy because of conflicting reports from United States and other diplomatic and Thai military sources. However, there was general agreement that a Cambodian crew had sailed to Thailand late last week and claimed responsibility for the Mayaguez capture.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon said it hoped to end confusion about U.S. losses in the Mayaguez rescue today. A third revised casualty report Monday listed five dead, 16 missing and 49 wounded.

One account of the story related by the Cambodian crew members now in Thailand said their ship was under the control of four Communist officers when it seized the U.S. ship Mayaguez and sailed it on May 12 to the Gulf of Thailand.

Three of the officers boarded the Mayaguez and the fourth officer later was overwhelmed by the crew and thrown overboard.

Another account said five Communist officers were on board the ship and all were tossed into the sea.

Some accounts said the Cambodian ship arrived at the Thai seaport of Sattahip last Thursday as U.S. military forces concluded an air, sea and ground attack to rescue the Mayaguez and its crew.

These reports said the Cambodian crew was part of the old Cambodian navy stationed at Ream. It seized the ship without orders from the new government to prove its support to the Khmer Rouge regime in Phnom Penh. However, it had a change of heart and took over the ship and sailed to the Thai port of Sattahip seeking asylum.

Other sources said the Cambodian crew was not loyal too the Khmer Rouge government in the first place and that it feared U.S. retaliation. However, one Western diplomat said the Khmer Rouge in charge of the vessel also feared retribution from their government for having prodded the U.S. into massive retaliation.

That officials are reluctant to talk about the incident because they wanted avoid offending the Khmer Rouge government in neighboring Cambodia, sources said.

In Washington, administration sources said there were several discrepancies in the crew's story, including the fact its vessel was a subchaser while the Mayaguez seamen said they were captured by two small gunboats.

Another smaller vessel with two or three crewmen and one commanded by a Lieut. Cham Phen is the Cambodian navy arrived at the Sattahip port May 16. Reliable sources who interviewed the crew had previously had been pressed into service by the Khmer Rouge to ferry troops from the Cambodian mainland to the offshore island of Tang.

Troops Enter Town Where Americans Held

SAVANNAKHET, Laos (AP) — Pathet Lao troops, tanks and trucks rolled into this Mekong River town to the cheers of the townspeople today, and a dozen United Nations officers held in house arrest by left-wing students were reported "just fine".

Sanford Stone, 38, U.S. aid coordinator for the area, told a reporter all the Westerners in the town were safe despite reports received earlier in the day by the U.S. Embassy in Vientiane that said two aid officials had been led from their homes by a crowd.

There was no immediate explanation for the discrepancy except poorly poor communications.

"We are just fine," said Stone, who has been in the area nine years.

"We are confined to our houses, but we have food which came on a courier flight Monday," he said. "We have never been asked to leave and we have never been threatened."

The peaceful Pathet Lao takeover of Savannakhet, which previously had been under control of rightists, came after two weeks of political upheaval in which the right-wing faction of the coalition government surrendered political power to the Communist-led Pathet Lao and neutralists.

Observers believe the entire country will fall to the Pathet Lao, which was reported moving into Pakse, another Mekong River town in southeast Laos.

Columns of students and other residents of Savannakhet, cheering and waving flags, greeted the Pathet Lao like heris. Rightist troops, after 20 years of fighting the Pathet Lao, joined the parade as the victorious column passed a checkpoint 4.2 miles from the centre of this provincial capital.

The Savannakhet students and demonstrators in Vientiane and Luang Prabang have demanded an end to U.S. aid, and the embassy today offered to "modify, reduce or eliminate" economic assistance to Laos.

It asked the Laotian government, which proclaimed for the statement of its policy toward the aid program.

Pathet Lao officials have said privately they would like U.S. aid continued without strings attached. The U.S. aid aid program in Laos totals $73.5 million.

The Laotian government has been saying since last weekend that it was sending a government delegation to Savannakhet to negotiate with the students.

Big Crowds at Parks Result In Thirty Liquor Charges

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The annual Victoria Day invasion of Quinte-area provincial parks resulted in more than 30 police charges this weekend, with the bulk of trouble at Outlet Provincial Park near Picton.

A spokesman for the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said Monday more than 20 charges were laid during the weekend under the Liquor Control Act and two additional charges of assaulting peace officers.

There were also a number of thefts, particularly of foodstuffs, the spokesman said.

Charged with assault are Edwin Victor Blondin, 18, of RR 2 Belleville and William Thornton, 23, of Oshawa.

Blondin has also been charged with causing a disturbance and being drunk in a public place. Thornton also faces a charge of resisting custody.

The police spokesman said all those charged during the weekend have been released on their own recognizance.

Jim Ives, assistant superintendent of the park, said "this year was about the same as any other, except a lot of people are taking their beer bottles home. They're worth a nickel now."

A spokesman for the Brighton detachment of the OPP said the weekend at Presqu'ile Provincial Park had been quiet.

He said 19 charges under the liquor control act had been laid around park visitors.

Vanderwater Conservation area was described as "very quiet with no charges laid," according to a spokesman for the Madoc detachment of the OPP.

Air-only Role In NATO Likely

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is expected to decide soon what form of Canada's NATO commitment in Europe this year and indications now are that Defence Minister James Richardson is leaning toward an air-only contribution.

The decision is one of several tough, expensive and interrelated ones that face the government this year as it studies the most effective long-term use of its shrunken armed force of about 78,000 persons.

These decisions, in part revolve around the need for millions of dollars worth of new equipment and around whether the Trudeau government will carry through on its 1970 proposal to drop the tank.

All this is shown in statements during the last few weeks by the minister and the military to reporters and in the Commons and the Commons defence committee.

The NATO question is being discussed as part of an over-all defence structure review, ordered early this year after the functions of the forces were required as his ministers began to cope with personnel reductions of about 3,000 men. The cuts were made necessary by inflation and pay raises.

Mr. Richardson has mentioned the main NATO options: Leave things as they are with 5,000 men in a mixed land and air force; change to a wholly land force; change to a wholly air force.

No decisions have been made, the minister says, but he has with the decision is the need to replace—in five years or so—the CF-104 Starfighters now in use in Germany and the CF-101 Voodoos now used in North American defence.

The military has said it is considering the possibility of acquiring an aircraft that can perform both functions as well as taking over the land mobile role of the armed force's CF-5s, which have about 10 years of life left.

Because of long delivery schedules the government must make a decision on replacement aircraft this year. The decision will be affected by what the government will do in NATO.

If it decides, for instance, that troops in Europe will be strictly a land force then it will not need such a sophisticated aircraft. If it decides to go the way the military apparently would like it to go, it would need a highly sophisticated aircraft and a larger number of them.

BC NDP Backs Full Picketing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Despite opposition from Labor Minister Bill King, the British Columbia New Democratic party passed a resolution at its annual convention during the weekend calling for unlistered organizational and informational picketing.

The resolution, backed by the party's labor wing, was one of the few issues to create a split in party ranks at the convention which confirmed Premier Davis as the party leader.

Labor spokesmen said the right to peaceful assembly and to disseminate information was a basic right long advocated by the party.

One of the supporters, Colin Gabelmann (NDP Vancouver-Seymour), cited the sale of "non-union" grapes by Super-Valu stores. "I want the right to be able to shut down a Super-Valu over that issue if I decided to do this."

Ellis Bill Proposes Stiff Impaired Penalties

Jack Ellis, MP Hastings, today was to introduce a private member's bill in the Commons which would stiffen Criminal Code penalties for impaired driving involving death or injury.

Mr. Ellis' amendment provides for prison terms up to 10 years and not less than nine months on conviction of impaired driving involving a fatal accident. Penalties from six months to five years for mishaps with injuries also are called for.

The amending bill also seeks stiffer penalties for other offences resulting from impairment. They range from fines of $50 to $500 or three months in jail for a first offence and up to 12 months for a third offence. Conviction also would carry licence suspensions of up to three years.

Mr. Ellis noted that Ontario and New Brunswick already have "substantially" increased penalties for impaired driving charges because of the "tremendous" rise in accidents caused by impaired driving. He said there has been an "unreasonably high" proportion of injuries and deaths from such mishaps.

Chief Wants Mo-ped Legislation Changed

City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said this weekend, if no other safety brings in restrictions on mopeds, he will approach city council for local bylaws to govern the vehicles.

Something of a hybrid, the moped is half motorcycle, half bicycle. Though equipped with pedals, they are used only for starting the engine which can then move the rider along at speeds of more than 30 miles an hour.

Though the moped is considered a motor vehicle by the Criminal Code, special legislation passed by the province exempts mopeds from the Highway Traffic Act.

Fourteen-year-olds may drive the machines on either sidewalk or roadway. Helmets, insurance and licences are not required.

"And that's foolish," said Chief Crosbie.

"Several police and affiliated associations are taking a very dim view of the special legislation exempting the moped," said the chief.

"There have been three accidents recently with mopeds. The most serious left the rider with a fractured jaw and the most recent on Saturday sent a 15-year-old Deseronto girl to Belleville General Hospital with hip injuries.

"I think you'll see the province change its mind on the legislation governing mopeds," said Chief Crosbie.

The chief said he will be attending an Ontario Traffic Conference in Ottawa next Sunday and that if nothing gets done there about mopeds, "we'll have to look into it further," on a local level.

He said, as chairman of the resolutions committee of the Ontario Police Chief's Association, the matter of mopeds and governing legislation will be on the association's June 22 agenda.

Parents Requested To Give Opinions

Centennial Secondary School authorities are going to the parents for guidance in setting up a list of educational objectives in curriculum development.

Centennial principal William MacKay circulated a letter and questionnaire to parents last week asking them to identify and in order of importance objectives they believe the should be reaching for.

The concept, developed out c. an objective committee last year made up of staff members, was described in defining best exactly what kind of graduate the school wanted to produce.

"The goal is a statement of broad direction," said Mr. MacKay, in the letter. Some of the objectives included religion, basic skills, concern for others, a knowledge of heritage in this country, an understanding of human needs and environment.

Centennial has 1,110 students with a staff of about 70 teachers. It is hoped the results of the questionnaire will help the teachers obtain a list of priorities for educational objective. Parents will also have an opportunity to express a viewpoint on the questionnaire.

Motorcycle Crash Fatal

TRENTON — A Quebec man died Sunday night and two of his travelling companions remain in Belleville General Hospital today — the result of a head-on collision on Highway 33, five miles south of here.

Mr. Sabine was taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital and later released.

Mr. Sabine was northbound on the roadway at the time, a police spokesman said.

Good Work Boys!

Trenton police commission chairman Hugh Campbell (left) presents Charles Dixon with a citation in recognition of the help he and three other young men gave police in the arrest of two men who broke into a Front St. store last November. In all, Trenton police presented civilian citations to seven civilians and an armed forces corporals.

Eight Honored For Police Aid

TRENTON — Seven civilians and an armed service's corporal were presented with citations Saturday for assistance each had given the Trenton police department in 1974.

Among those honored were four young men who played a significant part in the apprehension by police of two men who broke into a Front St. store Nov. 4 and stole three television sets.

The four, David Panelas, Mark Walker, Charles Dixon and Chris agnosis, are credited by Trenton police chief David Spencer with having helped the thieves from escaping with the stolen property.

Also involved in the Nov. 4 incident, and presented with citations by police commission chairman, Hugh Campbell, were Thomas Kotovas, co-owner of Jim's Pizzeria and his employee, Cynthia Lidster.

Ms. Lidster saw the two men break the window and steal the television sets from the Ray McCauley Ltd. store, and informed Mr. Kotsovas, who told the four youths to take up the chase.

The four pursued the two men into a laneway, which Mr. Panelas blocked with his truck, and harassed the thieves till police arrived to make the arrests.

Keen observation and Joseph Sopsa's willingness to get involved was attributed by Chief Sawyer with the arrest for robbery and recovery of over $250 after a man robbed a downtown department store Nov. 7.

Mr. Sopsa saw a man run out of the Keller's Ltd. store and hide behind a parked car on Quinte St., take off his coat, throw it into the truck and enter another department store. When police arrived, Mr. Sopsa accompanied them into the store to point out the man.

The final citation presented Saturday went to Corporal John Hoover who came to the assistance of a policeman being assaulted by four youths. Cpl. Hoover's help resulted in the immediate apprehension of three of the four youths.

Police commission chairman Campbell said presentation of the citations Saturday was the highlight of Police Week, and a most appropriate time to call the attention of the public to the actions by the eight citizens.

Vandals Enter High School

Unknown vandals entered the new section under construction of Moira Secondary School at the corner of Farley and Victoria Avenues sometime during the Victoria Day weekend causing minor damage, city police said.

On the Mark

Jim Graham adjusts the helmet of Trenton Club soap box derby racer Allan Smith Monday before the youngster sped down King St. in Trenton during the club's 11th annual Victoria day, event. More than 50 youngsters, both boys and girls under 15 years, participated in the derby, now an institution in Trenton.

Soap Box Derby Draws Big Crowd

TRENTON — Some hurt feeling and a few scraped knees and its over. But only for another year.

The Kinsmen Club soap box derby ended Monday for the 11th straight year a success according to co-orchestrators Jim Stone and Allan Russell.

All the ingredients for that success were there on a blockbuster weekend on King St. Carts sparkled under the sun in gaudy orange and threatening black. Children and adults alike, an estimated 300 people, cheered for favorite.

Not one of some 50 entrants was an actual soap box, though some were close. Others were more sophisticated machines. Steering on the carts ranged from a sophisticated, welded steel mechanism to the classic stand-by — 2 pieces of rope hooked to nails on the front axle.

The derby had its share of spills, but each hurt pride more than body.

It even had the right touch of controversy as several protests and counter-protests, ranging in age from 7 to 15, complained to derby officials over size of tires and width of cart bodies.

Officials let the rules slide this year but publicly announced that in 1976, specifications set down for carts would be strictly enforced.

After all, said Kinsmen Stone, the club tries not to be too strict. "We're stressing the fun aspect rather than meeting specs."

Winners during the day's events were: grand champion, Jerry Cassin, who also took the best cart award and the junior class championship; intermediate class winner was Tim Scaletta and senior class winner was Dick DeJong.

For the third consecutive year, Kim Scott won the girls' or Powder Puff competition. She competed in a field of 12.

Coins Stolen

TRENTON — Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville are investigating a theft at the residence of Robert Connell at RR 1, Trenton, which netted thieves $20 in coins contained in a box.

Police said today the break-in occured sometime Monday afternoon or evening. It was reported at 11.35 p.m. Entry was gained through a window.

Constable Mike Doucette is the investigating officer.

Pumphouse Vandalized

Vandals were active at the pumphouse on West Dundas St., during the holiday weekend, city police reported today.

Police spokesman said today unknown intruders broke into the engine room of the number three derrick, breaking a plexiglass window to gain entry and spilling several gallons of paint. Nothing was stolen in the incident.

Pickets Urge Grape Boycott

Picket lines will form at Belleville's Loblaws and plans Dominion Food Store Thursday with pickets urging shoppers and the store to boycott the purchase of California grapes, which have not been picked by union workers. Doug Sward, president of the Quinte District Labor Council said Sunday.

Some of the internecit workers have formed the United Farm Workers Union but have run into bloody clashes with farm operators who have tried to break the union, Mr. Sward said. The United Farm Workers have captured considerable sympathy in Canada with several churches and religious organizations — including the Belleville Ministerial Association — supporting the UFW (United Farm Workers).

Mr. Sward said Dominion was picked for the boycott picket because, "it is the largest food store in Canada."

"We've had promises from other food stores that they would refrain from buying non-union picked grapes if Dominion did the same."

Visiting Belleville to participate in the day's activities is farm worker supporter Jessica Goven — a major figure in the union movement.

Miss Goven, along with Mr. Sward and Sister Marie of Nicholson Catholic College and at least one Nicholson student will approach the Dominion Store in Belleville Thursday afternoon and later in the day will move to Trenton Dominion outlets, said Mr. Sward.

Miss Goven will speak twice during the day in the city — first to the senior classes of Nicholson College and later in the public auditorium at a public meeting.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m.

The same day, Prince Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau will be speaking at Centennial Secondary School — a possible counterpoint for the grape meeting.

"Whether people come to our meeting is a question of social conscience winning over political conscience," said Mr. Sward.

Five Charges Face Driver

Glen Ross resident Jack Fraser, 28, has been charged with failure to remain at the scene of an accident, failure to report the accident, careless driving, impaired driving and having alcohol content in his blood exceeding .08 following a fatal accident Sunday on North Trent St., Frankford Sunday.

Approximately 1400 damage was done to a parked vehicle owned by Arthur Bamber of North Trent St.

The incident is being investigated by the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Cheshire Home To Get $150

Teacup reading and barrel organ music in conjunction with the Belleville Downtown Lions Club has raised more than $150 to be donated to the Belleville Cheshire Home.

Gerry O'Shaughnessy, president president, said the contributions from shoppers during both events will be turned over to the home this week.

Car Hits Ditch

MARMORA — A single-car accident near here Monday has caused an estimated damage of about $2,000 to a car owned by Jan Robert Sutherland, 27, of Ottawa. There was no injuries.

Marmora OPP said the accident occurred at 9 a.m. about 1.7 miles north of the village on County Rd. 2. The car was southbound when the driver lost control trying to negotiate a turn. A charge of careless driving has been laid in the incident.

Egypt Surprised World with Efficient Operation of Suez Canal

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

In the old days of the proud European empires, the jewels in their local administrators frequently called Egyptian civil servants, were dignified, dapper, coffee slurpers.

The prospect of Egyptians running the Suez Canal after the late President Abdel Nasser seized it from foreign owners in 1956, raised the level of Western scepticism against Egyptians even higher.

The canal would silt up said the European shipping men and Egyptian pilots from a desert-based, camel-riding tradition, would fail to steer the ships safely through the long Suez ditch.

But the old owners and the world shipping industry were wrong, very wrong. The nationalized Suez Canal was operated by the Egyptians with an efficiency its European predecessors and farmers never developed.

This was because President Nasser picked an army classmate from the Staff Officers' College, logistics specialist Mahmoud Younes as head of the new Suez Canal Authority.

By 1967, the canal's annual revenue rose to $168 million annually and had reached an unheard of $350 millions annually before the Six Day War closed the canal in 1967 for eight years. This made the Suez Canal Egypt's largest single source of foreign earnings.

Canal Director Younes who admitted he never sailed so much as a rowboat, "had a good deal about logistics and how to move ships. "I have no interiority complex," he once said. "To me management is a science anyone can master."

And now the Suez Canal, first opened with fanfare by the Europeans in 1869, is complete with an opera written for the event, namely Giuseppe Verdi's "Aida", will open again June 5.

This date is the eighth anniversary of the outbreak of the Arab-Israeli War which closed it sifted up its channels and left about a dozen ships stranded in the Finger Lakes.

However President Sadat may not do as well financially from the Suez Canal as his predecessors. Egypt's management has weakened during the closing, but because the superpowers which came along in Sinai during that event are just too big for the canal since they range between 50,000 and 300,000 dead-weight tons. The largest the canal can accommodate are about 70,000 deadweight tons.

Nevertheless much of the world's shipping traffic is still moving of general cargo ships which will again be able to shorten their Asian and East African trips by going via the Suez Canal.

Initially President Sadat has forbidden passage to Israeli ships and presumably non-Israeli flag carriers will have cargo for Israeli ports.

One hopes in time the Egyptians will also raise this restriction, thereby restoring the canal to the commerce of one had for access to ships of all world countries.

Since rates charged for canal passage will be higher than in the mid-60s, President Sadat hopes to recover the same amount or higher from shipping charges, currency which his country desperately needs for economic recovery.

Meanwhile the Suez Canal's re-opening is filled with paradox. It was a US. Navy team of specialists in underwater safety and dredging which has made possible the opening of a canal whose original nationalization was a result of American refusal to give economic aid to Nasser.

And the canal built by the European powers to shorten the sea journey to their former Asian colonies, has become the symbol of the Egyptian nationalism which the colonial powers long ignored.

Males on Way Out?

The male of the species — never mind male chauvinism — may be on the way out!

Cloning — birthplace of Helen Reddy (I Am Woman) comes another hammer blow at the ego and very existence of the humanoid! Certified male, that is.

An International Women's Year symposium in Adelaide was told that a world in which men are almost unnecessary now is possible.

Imagine . . . an almost entirely female world, with only a small band of men as a source of semen. That was the possibility held out by a medical man at the conference.

Still, we doubt if women at large would want such a situation even if some might regard it as desirable.

Meanwhile, with everyone being so frank, we might mention another report on this general theme. A U.S. psychiatry researcher is reported as saying that women are turned on more by pornography than men. This being so, wouldn't it perhaps take both sexes to be around . . . for any member of reason?

And here's another thing. A Trust personnel officer — a woman — has told a Kitchener audience that women are their own worst enemies.

"We have been individually competitive," she said, "since we were little girls . . . I honestly feel we have to learn to work as a team."

Stand up and be counted, men . . . you are not yet out for the count!

Poor Turnout

Remember a month or so ago when a teen-ager sitting on a Royal Canadian Legion panel decried the lack of things for young people to do in the community?

We remarked at the time there was a number of activities and recreations but that young people often want to be led by the hand to them, instead of showing more initiative.

Well, last week the Quinte Arts Council staged a rock concert especially aimed at those young people looking for some form of entertainment.

Featuring Ian Thomas, one of the biggest names in Canadian music, the concert filled only about 200 of Centennial Secondary School's 800-plus seat auditorium.

Those empty seats speak for themselves.

Ships Fall Victim to Planes

Recent years have brought news of the passing of many a time ocean liner — victim of the heavy competition from the airlines.

Now a similar fate is befalling a smaller cruise vessel in the shape of Canadian National Steamships' Prince George, known to many travellers on the Alaska route, the Prince George has become a victim of age and operating losses.

The vessel, in service since 1949, cost a mere $3 million to build 25 years ago. To remain competitive in the market, a company spokesman says would require a new ship costing as much as $30 million.

And speaking of competition: CN now competes on the route with seven other companies.

The Prince George nevertheless has a busy last season ahead of it — 21 regular eight-day sailings from Vancouver up the coast, plus a special charter sailing at the end of the season.

After that, well presumably the other operators are making a go of things, and open sea plus a view of one of the world's great coastlines will still be there for the enjoyment of tourists.

Mayor Willing To Step Down

Now that's what we call economising!

When it was suggested that an escalator might be in order for that steep trip up city hall steps to the second floor, Mayor Robin Jeffrey had a cheap and practical solution.

Just move her office downstairs, offered the mayor, to bring her a storey closer to her constituents.

That's known as bringing government to the people.

Trudeau Government Appoints Pair of New Deputy Whips

By PETER LLOYD

OTTAWA (CP) — Two new deputy whips, including a 25-year-old Parliament Hill veteran, were appointed by the Trudeau government today.

Appointment of Ralph Goodale (Saskatoon-Humboldt) and Denis Elder (Glengarry-Prescott-Russell) was expected last week to the Liberal caucus, but there has been no public announcement of the postings.

They join Charles Caccia (Trinity-Davenport) as assistant to Tom Lefebvre, chief government whip. One of the chief jobs of a whip is to ensure there are enough members at his party in the Commons for votes and debates.

Mr. Goodale, a 25-year-old bachelor lawyer from Saskatoon, is seen as a bright light in a Liberal government starved for Prairie representation. The government holds only five of 61 seats in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

First elected July 8, Mr. Goodale is seen by Liberal backroomers as eventual cabinet material. His new job is an indication of that.

A former special assistant and now a political protege of former minister Otto Lang, he also is vice-chairman of the Commons agriculture committee and chairman of the Liberal caucus committee on fisheries and constitutional affairs.

His ties with Mr. Lang are the cause for some jibes from the Progressive Conservative opposition.

That's right, when Otto tells you to stand up, you stand up," shouted Jack Horner (PC-Crowfoot) during a Goodale Question Wednesday. "When he tells you to talk, you talk."

Mr. Elder, a 45-year-old baker from the eastern Ontario community of Dalhousie, has been an MP since 1972. He succeeded his brother, Vincent, as member for Glengarry-Prescott-Russell.

The addition of two deputy whips came shortly after Mr. Caccia was the only Liberal to oppose publicly the 33 1-3-per-cent parliamentary pay increase proposed by the government and adopted by Parliament.

However, a government spokesman said Thursday the move was not connected with Mr. Caccia's lonely stand against government MPs on that bill.

In fact, the Davenport MP had requested "two hard-working guys" to help in his job.

Deputy whips work mainly at keeping enough MPs on hand at man committees and the Commons, and to ensure the majority of Liberals do not lose votes.

They also act as liaison links between the front and back benches, relaying any complaints by ordinary MPs about intra-party services up the line to Mr. Lefebvre and Government House Leader Michael Sharp.

Mr. Goodale is the youngest MP ever appointed government deputy whip, a post established seven years ago.

Netherlands Facing Immigration Flood

By JOHN HAY

THE HAGUE (CP) — Imperial chickens are coming home to roost in the Netherlands as thousands of colonial subjects are moving to the mother country in search of the good life.

At the rate of 1,500 a month, by the jetload, the immigrants are flying in from Surinam, which is scheduled to gain independence by the end of the year.

The influx from the South American colony already numbers about 90,000, government officials say. And the inevitable problems of housing, jobs and outright racism are erupting.

It is an issue already familiar in Britain, another former imperial power where Asians and Africans have settled.

In this country, with a population of about 13.5 million cramped into an area smaller than Newfoundland, the functions are heating up the political atmosphere here.

The Netherlands government years ago granted the Surinamese people mother-country citizenship, complete with voting prospects. Like other Dutch citizens, they have a legal right to live in the Netherlands, and as independence approaches they are using that right.

Dutch officials argue that the migration is bad both for the Netherlands and Surinam.

The Netherlands is already has a jobless rate near five per cent—high by its own standards—and the new arrivals often end up on the dole, demanding their rights to free housing and income support.

The immigrants are mainly East Indians, Creoles and Javanese-descendants of indentured labourers imported to Surinam decades ago.

As a result, complaints in Dutch newspapers and in parliament have what local residents call incompatible habits of eating and dress, and reference that seem barely to conceal hostility based on skin color.

Three Maritime MPs Voted Against Commons Pay Bill

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — New Brunswick is not a wealthy province, but two of its 10 Members of Parliament, Independent Lorne Nystrom of Moncton, and Conservative Robert Coates of York-Sunbury, voted against the increase that raised their pay from an annual $26,000 to $34,000.

They, along with Andy Hogan, the New Democrat from Bonavista-Trinity-Conception-Green Bay-Richmond, were the only three of the 262 MPs from the Atlantic Provinces to at least go through the motions of saying with their Commons' votes — that the raise, with its $7,500 to $9,000 back-pay windfall, its tax concessions, pension benefits and privileges was just too much.

The vote set the Atlantic Provinces apart.

There wasn't a single "no" vote from any of Quebec's 74 MPs.

Only 12 of Ontario's 88 voted against the raise.

The Prairie Provinces had only seven of its 45 members dissenting.

And but two of British Columbia's 22 voted in the negative.

So proportionately, the Atlantic Provinces came out.

How come, on the most disadvantaged region of the whole country?

Well, you might expect Len Jones, the Independent, to go with the minority.

And Andy Hogan, like the good and faithful New Democrat he is, simply followed the party line.

That left the Tory, Bob Howie, as sort of the loner in the Atlantic Provinces representing the region among the 25 Honourable Members who voted and but hopelessly against the 175 in the "yes" column.

So how did he aim it up?

"I've been horrified," he reports, "ever since coming to Ottawa three years ago by the way in the government benefits scene money like tomorrow's the end of the world.

"I figured that if I voted against the raise, I would be making a statement to my constituents — if quite publicly apparent — that I felt the national scene to oppose and support the Tory Opposition's policy would be encouraged to run. What not.

Now what is all this nonsense about the city taxpayers being hit for the bill for a raise for chosen party in Lake? Are these we are going to pay this trip are going as holiday makers? If not, why the fuss? The decision that that this trip was an official visit on behalf of the people of Belleville? Why the fuss? Surely is not only morally wrong, I think it is illegal should be questioned.

If by information is that many people on this trip do not contribute per taxes to the city of Belleville. If it is not proper to underwrite this trip with such taxes, then we need looking into a bit for me phone I hear what the old soft? I'll bet I could bring the taxpayers of Belleville back seen for years if I got what they propose to surmount in Lake.

Hydro Commission Has Its Own Way

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — There are some people, perhaps a good many, today who think that big business gets a break from government.

Such thought, of course, is prevalent in the NDP. Such its national provincial policies centre around the big-business break and "rip-offs."

But the thought is not confined to the NDP.

In the other parties there are also those who react rational cally and adversely to what they think is a government's political reading of a big-company business short.

It might do well if some of these people talked to representatives of an organization called AHOC—The Association of Direct Customers of Ontario Hydro.

It was formed in 1961 and since then has had one main objective.

This has been to get a voice, small but yet a voice, in the operations of Hydro.

But has it been able to get anywhere?

No, despite its strength it has got nowhere.

The Association is made up of some 37 large companies, "big business".

Such companies as Du Pont, Abitibi, Union Carbide and Ford.

What makes them unique is that they buy their electrical power directly from Ontario Hydro.

And what makes them particularly impressive is that among them they consume about 30 per cent of all power produced by Hydro.

And yet they can't have one word in its management.

The present Hydro Commission is made up of 13 people.

None of these are supposed to represent any direct interest, except two members who are elected by the Ontario Municipal Electric Association.

Dennis Timbrell, minister of energy, says he wants it this way. That it helps to get most people representing specific interests.

Yet wouldn't this be one hell of a way to run a battleship? You would have the crew come from the crew, two from the government and nobody from the engineers.

Nobody who really knew the battleship, particularly the engineering end.

This is one of those shortcomings of government and politics that are prevalent but that normally don't come to light. They add up to inefficiency.

Council Lacking Credibility

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

Belleville's municipal members stand revealed for the cheap lot they are. Not willing to raise their salaries by $1,500 per year because they have lost credibility. They had lost it long before the raise, in the level of debate and the often demonstrated lack of knowledge of their own government bylaws to know they are not worth it.

Congratulations to Mayor Jeffrey, she had the commonsense and decency to respect the municipal bylaws and the electorate's wishes. Likewise, is the staff had to respect Mayor Hamilton and Wally Dever — and at least one member have long memories in such matters as "Bailey's Folly" and "Lake".

As usual, Alderman Meeks is quoted as making the most reasonable comment on the matter. He says he feels that by raising the stipend more competent people will be encouraged to run. What rot.

Marmora Hydro Billing Changed

MARMORA — Rural residents in this area have received notice from Ontario Hydro of a new billing plan which provides for payments on accounts each month based on a meter reading every two months.

In the cases the next hydro bill will be based on July 15. Thereafter, the hydro bills will be reading meters every three months as has been the practice in the past, but will send in bill only every two.

The first and second bills in each quarter will be for a fixed amount equal to approximately one-twelfth of the previous year's total bill. The third bill will be based on the meter reading and will show the total charge for the three-month period less a credit for any payments made. In each quarter, Ontario Hydro will require payments sufficient to clear any balance outstanding in each month.

A new meter reading schedule is also being introduced to further facilitate the meter reading time. This change will result in the next bill being for a slightly longer or slightly shorter period. The meter reading schedule will be published on all bills beyond the next one.

Further details, if required, may be obtained from J. E. Thompson, P. Eng., Manager of the Trent Area.

New Arena Ice Plant In Stirling Tax Bill

By CHRIS ALMEY
Staff Correspondent

STIRLING — There is a double surprise for Stirling taxpayers from the town fathers. Municipal clerk Robert Halin has revealed in an interview that Stirling Council has decided to raise $25,000 this year through taxes for the arena ice plant and at the same time the village levy has been reduced. However, with the county levy and the education levy, the total tax bill will be up about $40 on a home assessed at $15,000 Mr. Halin said.

The commercial rate set by Stirling council is down 3.85 mills, and the residential rate dropped 4.84 mills the clerk noted. Last year council raised $25,000 through taxes for snow areas, pay another $37,000 capital for a backhoe and reservations to the new municipal offices.

Council would not commit itself earlier this year toward the arena fund until it knew the county and education levies, one reason being the probability of having to raise tax money to pay for new sewers and work on the lagoon system.

Stirling has commercial assessment of $1,191,875 and a farm and residential assessment of $8,397,565, for a total of $9,589,380. Mr. Halin said that Stirling's assessment has increased by $308,545 this year to date over last year.

Mr. Halin said that council considered the $25,000 for the ice plant to be its contribution toward a new arena, since the ice plant would be moved from the present structure to the new district arena when it is built.

Council recently has a two-man delegation from the Stirling and District Business Association urging it to make a $35,000 commitment toward a new arena. Council was told that the business community wanted the arena built, and so expense, council was told, the matter could be finished in a short period of time and was not a 20-year project. The business men regarded the arena as an investment in the future of the community not as expense, council was told.

Dandelions: Live with Them

By ROSS MAWTHORNE

Today I'd like to review one of the most common weed pests in your garden, a plant that can a global basis, represents a complete paradox of nature.

Millions upon millions years ago it was an equal member of several hundred different plants are spent each year. In its ancestral home, it's just one bay in good, nearly packaged, with other plants growing around it. It's cultivated the world over as a vegetable, and as an herbal — it contains more Vitamin A and iron than any other vegetable in the garden.

And in case you haven't guessed, I'm referring to the common dandelion!

Now, you may be among the legion of gardeners — but for some reason, you don't like it. It has become to survive. It is adaptable, resilient to our condition that we have for its own use, any land upon which it settles. Even if it does then their hottest death. And what a problem! Dandelions have established. They have a lot bitter (half-ripe) and seeds grown then like the pin-ons. Very to make, they are with the lawn mower. Now they'll produce flower stems to spread. Its yellow flowers are touch them. But in fall grass, they'll send them longer, up to 10 feet. If they have it, it catch the hem. Anything that everything they have to do is reproduce their own kind — they'll do.

Apply a weed killer and I guarantee you they'll give up their seeds before they shrivel, active you go. And they will be another crop appears in the fall, you'll assume they are the seeds that germinated last year. Not quite correct. Some seeds will lie dormant in the following year and then you'll have to tackle them again. The fall crop is a cousin relative of the spring dandelion with the name of the Fall Dandelion, or Fall Flower or Fall Dandelion.

Now, for the dandelion gourmets, we'll have some recipes later for its use in food preparation. But if you're among the dandelioners, all you want to know is how to get rid of them and stay rid of them. Well, pulling rid of them is better than staying rid of them.

A good herbicide applied in late May is a start. And another application in the fall for the Fall Hawkbit. And that doesn't guarantee you'll get them all. As long as you have dandelions in your lawn, the hatchery, even hundreds of yards away, you're going to have dandelions every two or three years if regular herbicide applications are not made. Well, they're enough.

One thing that you won't work is digging them out by hand. Well, it will do a give you some satisfaction and exercise. Additionally, it will leave the lawn looking good and healthy, but a nuisance. In the only real answer is a long, long, long tap root. Well, it is the root that gives it life, the ground and this root is very difficult to remove from the soil. You haven't really killed it, you've just beaten it, and with its tenacious nature, it will be back — I promise you.

Now for the recipe I promised you. Here it is: Take the following: Young leaves, fresh from the garden; are tenderest and best. Try them in salads (without stalks), boiled in a vinaigrette dressing or dress the leaves with chief bacon drippings, vinegar and crumbled bacon. Cook the leaves quickly with a dash of olive oil and serve with lemon wedges and garlic as an accompaniment to fish, in the Italian manner. For an Italian dish, mix the boiled leaves with hot spaghetti and toss with olive oil and freshly shredded parmesan cheese.

Questions welcome. All questions will be answered. Please designate if your letter may be used in the column. Simply address your queries to Ross Hawthorne, The Intelligencer, Belleville.

South African Park 'Sold' Conservationists

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (CP) — The whole country is getting involved in an unusual conservation scheme set in the Cape Province.

Through the project, sponsored by the South African Nature Foundation, anyone can pay a share in the preservation of part of the national heritage.

For as little as 20 cents, purchasers can "own" a piece of the Karoo Park in the south western corner of Cape Province. For $15 they can own an acre.

Instead of a receipt, the foundation hands out one of a set of 10 art stamps on a "title deed" — every 10 cents invested in Karoo.

The effort to save the Karoo for future generations comes home for Jacob Fourie, 8, who wanted, about 20 million spring bok inhabited the area. Now it is a protected animal surviving in small herds on farms. The hartebeest, which used to number in the thousands, has become rare. The zebra has been wiped out.

On top of this, the Karoo is a scientific treasury on unique flora and fauna. It is also said to be the only location where a complete record of prehistoric animals can be found. The fossil are found between 200 and 300 million years old.

As part of the reconstruction animals such as hartebeest, zebra, springbok and Cape mountain zebra will be release in the park to level in their natural environment.

Grand-Scale Project

In the Karoo, nature conservation is being combined with the preservation of historic building. Some of the finest examples of Dutch colonial architecture can be found there. The town has about 8 hectares of other than any in Johannesburg.

STAMP ISSUE SPECIAL

LONDON (CP) — The British Post Office has announced special issue of stamps to mark European Architectural Heritage Year — the culmination of a three-year campaign promoted by the Council of Europe to awaken the interest and pride of Europeans in their common architectural heritage. Five stamps will show some of Britain's finer architecture and go on sale on April 3.

Maple Syrup Could Be Important N.S. Product

HALIFAX (CP) — The maple syrup industry in Nova Scotia, currently valued at about $20,000 annually, may become an industry worth millions, says Lands Minister Maurice DeLacy.

"That would happen if the 30,000 acres of sugar maples in the province are developed to the point where they are producing their potential of more than one million gallons of maple syrup annually," Dr. DeLacy said.

At current prices, the industry would have a gross value in excess of $11 million.

As such, said Dr. DeLacy, it would contribute a new respectability "of tremendous proportions and importance," 200 men its size in 1971 when 3,000 gallons of maple syrup and 9 pounds of maple sugar were produced.

A study was recently carried out under supervision of the lands department by Timberline Woodland Services of St. Agathe des Monts, Que., a firm that specializes in forest management and development projects.

The report embraced all phases of the industry from preparation of the sugar bush and tapping trees to manufacturing and marketing the product.

The firm also detailed the economics of the industry following 35 months of work studying potential in five maritime counties and all of Cape Breton Island.

ILLEGITIMACY HIGH

According to Statistics Canada, the percentage of illegitimate births to total live birth has been steadily increasing. In 1968, 4.8 per cent of births were illegitimate, in comparison to 8.3 in 1967 and 9.9 in 1972.

New Cancer Drug Undergoing Tests

EDMONTON (CP) — A new drug which may kill certain cancer cells without accompanying destruction of normal tissue is being tested at University of Alberta.

Unlike many other anti-cancer drugs, Alpha TGDR is only activated by certain cancer cells, said Dr. G. A. LePage, director of the university's McCaskerin Cancer Laboratory and the scientist who first developed the drug almost accidentally before coming here three years ago.

"We have an unusual situation in which we can poison the cancer cells with no toxicity to the normal body," he said in an interview.

Dr. LePage said he has not been able to explain why the drug works in some cancer cells but not others. It may relate to differences in the cell makeup of certain individuals.

"It is common for anti-cancer drugs to be quite toxic to normal growth cells — bone marrow where white blood cells are produced, the lining of the gastro-intestinal tract and skin and hair follicles.

The drug is being tested on 15 to 18 patients at the Dr. W. W. Cross Cancer Institute Dr. Lahn all conventional therapy has failed.

Since the tests are just the first phase of studies required before the health protection branch will remove the drug for general therapeutic use, Alpha TGDR will be made available to the patients in suffering from inoperable conditions.

Results isn't therapy, it's controls preliminary testing to find dosage levels and what combinations the drug is most established," said Dr. LePage.

"The tests are to determine if any harm is done and so far there is no physiological evidence of that.

The researcher said another three or two years treatment has put through the tests, which they volunteered, before toxicity results are presented to the federal health protection branch.

But studies on human breast, leukemia and lymphoma malignant cells indicated the drug might be effective in treating between 15 and 30 per cent of cancers of the blood-producing organs and a smaller percentage of breast cancer cases.

THE SELF-HELP HOME PLAN

Low Cost – No Down Payment Housing From Rollins Lumber!

"SHOULD I BUILD NOW WHEN PRICES ARE HIGH?"

It may surprise some people that this same question has been asked, continually for years and year. It seems that everything is relative. While building materials were cheaper ten years ago, your paycheck was a lot smaller as well. There is no sense kidding ourselves, quality materials cost money, but when assembled properly into the form of a house — their value doubles. You can own that house for far less than you think with the Self-Help Home Plan.

Rollins Lumber once again suggests that you make your move now. Here's why:: (a) It seems obvious that prices are not going to go down. (b) Interest rates are as low as they'll ever be. (c) Mortgage money is presently available. (d) We have approved building lots available, but they are getting scarce. (e) If you build this year, first-time home buyers may be eligible for the $500.00 federal grant and the $1500.00 provincial grant.

We have ready-to-build plans available and we will assist you in arranging the proper mortgage. Basically what Rollins Lumber has done is lowered the cost of home ownership and eliminated a lot of the red tape to make it easier for you. You don't even need a Down Payment. Gladys Tasseron is one of the teachers at Belleville's Special Nursery, and is enthusiastic about her work with young children who need extra attention and guidance. A graduate of Loyalist College's Early Childhood Education course, Mrs. Tasseron, her husband John and young son Jeffrey moved to Trenton from Alberta in 1972. This recipe, one of her mother's favorites, is also from "out west" and a new twist for rhubarb lovers.

Rhubarb Relish

one quart rhubarb
one pint vinegar
one tbsp. salt
one tsp. cloves
one tsp. allspice
one tsp. curry powder
one quart onions
four cups brown sugar
one tsp. cinnamon
one tsp. ginger
one tsp. cayenne pepper

Chop the rhubarb and onions quite finely. Add vinegar, brown sugar and spices and simmer together for about three hours. Care should be taken that it doesn't scorch.

This relish makes a great hackes dip if it is put through a sieve or pureed in a blender just before serving. Like many relishes, it improves with age.

Jeffrey St. Louis gets his bathing suit out, ready for his hour of swimming at the YMCA Thursday. Admiring his outfit — and his enthusiasm — are First Adventure Nursery workers Ann Mortimer and Clare Lane.

Handicapped Kids Get Pool Time

A donation from the Knights of Columbus, Order of the Albanbra Caravan 109 in Belleville, has given the Parents of Handicapped Children the assistance they needed. Now they are able to provide one hour of swimming a week for their children at the YMCA, thanks to the funds that pay for pool time and two instructors.

Helping the instructors during the swim period are the parents themselves, and several volunteers, many from the First Adventure Nursery. Each Thursday afternoon these adults give one-to-one care for each of the handicapped children, for whom the water activity is excellent physical therapy.

The donation, raised mainly by Knights of Columbus bingo games, has given the newly-formed parents' organization the boost it needed to get the swim program going, says Janice Mangan, one of the active members.

"We are so happy about this, we're hoping that it will expand and continue throughout the summer," she says.

Parents of Handicapped Children is a group especially concerned with the welfare of young pre-school children.

Engagement

The engagement is announced of Linda Ivy Coleman daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Coleman, Trenton, to Wallace Harry Cosick son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cosick, Belleville. The wedding will take place Saturday, June 7 at 2 p.m. in Grace United Church, Trenton.

Today's Child

by Helen Allen

Normie seems to live in an atmosphere of smiles. A happy-go-lucky boy, he often looks as he does here and it's infectious. Just looking at the picture you're bound to smile back.

Normie, 3, is a handsome lad with lovely brown eyes, curly, almost black hair and brown skin. He is of black and white descent, but information on his background is limited.

In excellent health, Normie is an active fellow who loves rough games. He is big for his age and well co-ordinated, so he may be a good athlete. He likes wrestling, playing ball and swimming. He is taking lessons and has no fear of the water.

Normie is in kindergarten. He joins in all the activities but is happiest in a language development class where he is one of only three students. In this setting where the teacher has a lot of time for each child, Normie really blossoms. He becomes quite talkative and reveals a good sense of humor.

At present Normie is considered in the low average range but is expected to do better when he has parents to encourage him and spend a lot of time with him.

Though he doesn't appear to be unhappy in a crowd, he looks a bit lost. A mother and father prepared to be loving, sharing companions for him will find him responding warmly.

An easy child to care for, Normie eats well, sleeps well and is amiable and co-operative.

Heart-touching Normie needs parents with no younger children and preferably not more than one or two older ones. Surrounded by love, stimulation and much individual attention, he will quickly reach his potential.

To inquire about adopting Normie, please write to To Day's Child, Ministry of Community and Social Services, Box 88, Station K, Toronto M4P 3E2.

'One Shot, You're Shot'

Dear Ann Landers: I was so pleased to read in your column that I was a drunk for ten years. I'm 46 now and recently I'm with an alcoholic ex-husband who wants me to drink with him. I started to go to Al-Anon.

I have every reason in the world to stay sober. I'm not straight the day I wake up. Please get this right. I have to stay sober. I'm 5 feet 8 in. — 74 doses of Valium a day. Shot or not, I'm a sick woman. Ann, don't let this happen to me. Please get me out. — Desperate in Dallas

Dear Desperate: Beautiful! I'm out.

Dear Ann Landers: Has anyone ever called you a recent response you gave to baby-sitters complaint? Well, I'm the guy. Totally — completely shot out.

I'm a 16-year-old high school junior and male. I babysit for two families who have sons. The little boys would much rather have a big guy around than a girl when their parents are out.

I've had experience taking care of baby brothers, so I can even diaper and feed 12-year-old "client" who is eight months old.

Apologize, will you? — Anti-Bias

Dear Anti: I'll do more than apologize. I'll RECOMMEND male sitters to parents who have adolescent sons. I did so several years ago and it turned out to be the ideal solution.

A mother wanted to know what to do about her 13-year-old son who insisted on a certain 16-year-old pot-head sitter. No one else would do. He started to nag his parents to "please go out and enjoy yourselves." My suggestion was "Hire a GUY." They took my advice and wrote to say it solved the problem.

Dear Ann Landers: I think your advice is crazy but I'm writing anyway.

I'm a girl 16 and not some of I'm a girl of forty.

It all started when I was 11 and my parents were divorced. My mother was always stronger than my dad and she treated me more decent. He was a weakling and I actually hated him.

Dad drank heavily. When I started to date he had to beat me up a lot. Now I have a hard time liking boys or trusting them. Almost every guy I go with begins to remind me of my father after a while. I enjoy girls much more and am comfortable with them. Especially one. What's with me, anyway? — Gay Or Not

Dear Miss Or: Although you think my advice is crazy, I'm answering anyway.

I believe you have a strong preference for girls and it started long before you began dating.

If you want to be straight, I think, I think, intensive therapy might help. I advise consulting an any even. You need to talk about your feelings about many things that come through in your letter lord and clear.

Women Must Learn to Use Power

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Flora MacDonald says women in Canada must learn to cope with their reluctance to enter the power sphere of politics.

The Progressive Conservative minister for Territorial Affairs Kingdom and the Islands was speaking Saturday at a political awareness seminar.

She said politics is not the only field where women must learn the structure of power as well as of service. She cited labor and corporate fields as some areas into which women must break.

Many people, she said, would rather have a female as prime minister than as finance minister because control of finance is where the power is.

Miss MacDonald said women had been ahead too long with the Florence Nightingale syndrome.

"To serve was good, she added, but it wasn't enough.

Miss MacDonald, a potential candidate for the national leadership of the Progressive Conservative party, criticized the media which, she said, reported trivia but ignored major accomplishments by women when dealing with women's political roles.

"It's a new ball game where the rules are totally unclear," she said. "I don't know how women who try for positions they haven't tried for before will be treated by the media. I'm sure they will be treated in a different way than male politicians."

Brazilian Comedy Deals with VD

By MICHAEL ARJUS

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — A new Brazilian comedy about venereal diseases is raising laughs from Rio de Janeiro theatregoers.

But behind the laughter generated by The Vulnerable Madame Gonzaga lie grim facts showing a sharp increase in the incidence of VD.

European health authorities have called the health ministry with the names of Brazilian partners said to have passed on syphilis to foreign tourists during visits to the country.

Syphilis seems to be widespread in Brazil with some reports putting monthly incidence at the provincial capital of Salvador at 1,500 cases.

In view of the alarming statistics the federal health ministry is studying a campaign to combat venereal diseases.

The play, by one of the country's leading comic writers, Jose Bethencourt, deals with a husband who has a sexual adventure when he is on a month's provincial tour.

On his return, he is sure he has contracted gonorrhea but does not know how to resist his wife's advances and they make love.

Subsequent tests confirm that he has VD and with typical South American machismo his contrition turns to jealousy as he imagines his wife going with every man in town to avenge herself.

As his jealousy grows, he imagines his wife has already prostituted herself in all the country and cries out in anguish: "And to think I was only man in town who slept with her without paying."

In the end, he is forgiven. The man whom the husband imagined as his wife's principal lover turns out to be a transvestite.

It is impossible to get reliable statistics on venereal diseases in Brazil, because many cases are treated privately and not reported. The Brazilian also has great faith in the idea of self-cure and will stop buy from a pharmacist drugs he believes suitable for whatever disease he thinks he has.

Prescriptions are not generally required in pharmacies, in these cases also go unreported. But some clinics in Sao Paulo, the country's biggest city, have reported increased scaring by hundreds of per cent from year to year.

In Rio de Janeiro in 1968, fewer than 1,000 cases were reported. In 1972 the number approached 10,000 and it has steadily increased since.

There has been no major publicity campaign to combat VD because the health ministry is planning to start one now.

Newspaper columnists have attacked the lack of public education programmes and facilities for treatment. Doctors have ascribed the sharp rise in VD to the general relaxation of sexual taboos in the permissive society.

Trustees Want Immigrants' Culture Taught

TORONTO (CP) — About 300 Toronto feminists and their supporters marched from a Queen's Park rally Saturday to protest what they describe as the federal and provincial governments' lack of support for the women's rights movement.

Demonstration coordinator Sandy Stenecker, a community worker for the Young Women's Christian Association in Toronto, said the march was "a response to the empty tribute of the federal government's International Women's Year program.

"We want to bring together people who can see through the platitudes of the Why Not campaign."

She accused the Ontario government of discriminating against female civil servants and disparaged Premier William Davis' "clean up his own backyard."

The rally was organized by the May 16th March Committee, a coalition including representatives of the Mayor's Task Force on the Status of Women, Daycare Reform Action Alliance and Abortion and Contraceptive Committee of Toronto.

Anne Taylor, 78-year-old president of the Congress of Canadian Women, told the gathering they should fight for their rights.

"Women's liberation is a concern of society as a whole," she said.

Demonstrators carried placards demanding support for a variety of causes — equal pay and opportunity for all working women, free daycare centres and free abortion on demand.

Several banners called for the release of Dr. Henry Morgentaler, the Montreal doctor recently convicted and sentenced for performing an illegal abortion.

She Tested Date's Motives

Dear Doris: I am married for 30 years to a wonderful man who loved and respected me for being me. When married at 21 he had kept his virginity.

A few fellows took me out for the wrong reason until I realized how to test their motives. The Christian Youth Centre where I spent much of my off-work time gave opportunity for volunteer work, recreation and Bible study without a need to be attached to anyone.

When I was asked out, I invited the fellow to come to the Youth Centre at a specific time for a specific activity. If he didn't show, I was not stood-up, but if he did, he could see my standards for a date activity. It was there that I met and was tested by my husband.

If a person had other interests — drama, classical music, etc. — you would probably work. The main thing is to enjoy developing yourself as a person.

My husband-to-be and I agreed about this. We found time to be there para. Our courtship we concentrated on each other as individuals and developed a firmer base for marriage when it was mutually agreed to avoid sex. There was temptation, but there always will be in some form. We learned to counter it with positive thinking and, of course, much prayer. Now we have no regrets in that area to haunt us.

A Reader.

Dear Reader: It seems to me the very best marriages are built on long-term friendships and mutual interests.

Physical attraction is a tremendous thing, the unreliable catchment on which many a marriage has eventually foundered.

Scientists Dismantle Hay Fever Protein

FULLERTON, Calif. (CP) — The battle against hay fever caused by ragweed pollen has been advanced by two immunologists, one in Canada, the other in the United States.

Dr. Lawrence Goodfriend of McGill University, Montreal, and Dr. J. D. Capra of Southwestern Medical School, Dallas, Tex., reported in Biochemistry magazine that they have succeeded in sequencing—chemically dismantling—one of the proteins which causes hay fever.

Knowing the sequence of amino acids—the chemical building blocks of proteins—which make up the hay fever allergen protein allows researchers to study the parts of the molecule which cause hay fever's runny nose and itchy eyes.

Proteins are made of strings of amino acids. One protein may contain as many as 100 amino acids or more.

"The real problem," Capra said, "was getting a small amount of pure allergen from ragweed pollen."

It took Goodfriend one year and about four pounds of ragweed pollen to get 1-6 of an ounce of the pure substance." Goodfriend says techniques have improved; obtaining pure Ral allergen today isn't quite so difficult.

Now that researchers know the sequence of the allergen protein, two tasks remain.

The first is to determine the three-dimensional structure of the allergen molecule. The second is to determine which parts of the structure are active sites. The active sites are responsible for hay fever's symptoms.

In a telephone interview, Capra outlined the current line of research he and Goodfriend are pursuing.

"Only a few of the amino acids on the allergen are probably responsible for the hay fever symptoms. If we can discover which ones are 'active', we can substitu-, similar, but non-reactive amino acids in a synthetic molecule. These substitute amino acids would duplicate the molecule in every way, except for the hay fever symptoms.

"This new, non-reactive allergen could be mass-produced. . . . Such synthetic . . . . could potentially be injected into hay fever victims. These modified allergens, which would be harmless to the body, might stimulate production of protective antibodies and neutralize the (hay fever) allergen. In the future, any time the individual encounters active hay fever allergens, they would be destroyed by the antibodies.

"The whole procedure would be like getting a smallpox or any other common vaccination."

How far away is this type of hay fever cure?

"We should see this kind of cure within the next five years," Capra said.

Austria Headquarters For Hashish Smugglers

VIENNA (Reuter) — Austria, poking like a long thumb into Communist Eastern Europe, has long been a convenient base for spies, smugglers and gun-runners plying their risky trade between East and West.

But in the last few years, Austrian authorities have had a new illicit traffic to contend with—hashish smuggling.

Austria lies directly in the path between the hashish-producing lands of the Middle East and the pot parlors of northern Europe.

Police have known for a long time that the route from Lebanon, Iran and Turkey to the lucrative smoking grounds of West Germany, Holland and Scandinavia cuts across the centre of the country. But only in the last three years has there been an organized effort to stop it.

In February 1974, Austria established a central office for fighting drug abuse and smuggling throughout the country, which has formed close links with the international police organization, Interpol.

The main target was to plug the Austrian connection in the hashish trail. The bureau has also had other priorities of the country. Hoffmann's squad introduced rigorous border checks on cars and trucks with certain number plates and the smugglers were forced to adopt a more complex and costly chain system.

Under this method one vehicle brings the goods in, another takes them to a storage depot and another delivers them to West Germany, the investigators said.

Hoffmann's department, which numbers 80 men spread throughout the country's nine provinces, was temporarily fooled by the more complex method and the police catches decreased in 1973. Since then its grip has tightened again.

More than 3,300 pounds of hashish have already been seized in a series of highly publicized cases this year.

Bees Seen Hazard To Alberta Drivers

EDMONTON (CP) — With nine million bees buzzing around Alberta, there is growing concern about their relationship with the automobile during the summer.

Dr. Ulf Soehngen, supervisor of apiculture with the Alberta agriculture department, says he has received several complaints regarding the apparent lack of control by some beekeepers about the possibility of honeybees flying from beehives that are too close to roads.

Dr. Soehngen said there have been documented cases in which an accident has been caused when a bee suddenly exploded against a car windshield leaving a sticky, opaque mess covering the glass. This could be deadly when the vehicle was cruising at 65 or 70 miles an hour.

In other cases, drivers had been stung by a bee that had been sucked into their cars through open vent windows.

Dr. Soehngen said the problem is that beekeepers need ready access to their beeyards, so placing colonies near roads is an advantage.

At the same time, beekeepers know that the mortality rate in colonies — there are about 180,000 of them during the peak summer months in Alberta, each with about 50,000 bees — is high when they are located near highways and roads.

The solution suggested is that beekeepers locate apiaries on high ground overlooking roads. This means that the bees will fly over passing traffic rather than through it, except perhaps on windy days when they stay close to the ground.

Another suggestion has been to place bee colonies behind a screen of bush or dense trees so that the bees have to fly up before crossing the highway, or to make a barrier out of snow fencing.

Mill Effluent Can Be Cleared

SASKATOON (CP) — University of Saskatchewan researchers have developed a method of removing color from pulp-mill effluent by treating the effluent with fly ash and hydrochloric acid.

The acid releases chemicals in the fly ash which react with the coloring material, causing it to settle out. The residue then can be used for land fill.

The method has worked well in laboratory tests. If it proves feasible on a large scale both the pulp and power industries will benefit since huge quantities of fly ash are accumulated by burning coal to generate electricity. The economics of the method are being studied to see how it compares with other ways of color reduction.

Government Tries to Reduce Strikes

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is moving, but slowly, to modify the collective bargaining process to try to cut down on the number of strikes.

Some labor leaders are calling for federal action to promote industry-wide bargaining as one means to slow down industrial strife.

Carlyle has lost a record 9.5 million man-days in 1974 because of strikes and lockouts.

Finance Minister John Turner has singled out labor as prime contributor fuelling inflation because of large wage settlements. Several major unions affiliated with the Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) have turned down government proposals for voluntary restraints of wage rises of 12 per cent or $2,400 a year.

Commenting on the current federal drive for a voluntary restraints program, the CLC said the government should try to remove political roadblocks that forbid bargaining on a national scale.

Lost time is generally made up by higher end wage settlements. Mr. Turner says the economy's ability to compete is declining because wage settlements are running much higher that in the United States and other major trading partners.

He warns Canada could be on the same path as Britain. There, hourly wage rates have shown a 23-per-cent rise over the last year while prices have gone up 21 per cent and industrial production gained just under two per cent.

Arab Image Said Wrong

TORONTO (CP) — Ralph Stewart, Liberal member of Parliament for Cochrane, says the Canadian image of Arabs as terrorists results from newspaper coverage in newspapers, radio and television.

"I believe this has been done purposely and that most Canadians have been seduced by the media into believing that an Arab, whether he is a Palestinian, whether he is the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), whether it is Al Fatah or whether it is an Egyptian, no matter — if it is anything to do with Arab, the whole thing is put into the same little bag and that is equated with the word terrorist."

Beach Riot Is Quelled

BAUBLE BEACH, Ont. (CP) — Provincial police charged one man with attempting to incite a riot and public mischief and laid more than 200 charges under the Liquor Control Act during the weekend as 10,000 persons jammed into this resort area.

About 25 provincial policemen used riot sticks to break up a disturbance Saturday night in this community about 20 miles west of Owen Sound after a group of campers approached a police roadblock, throwing stones, beer bottles and sticks.

Sgt. Len George said no one was injured, except for one policeman who received a bruised leg after being struck by a rock.

About 1,500 persons camped along a village road as both private and provincial park campsites were filled by late Thursday.

Police said nineteen accidents, six involving motorcycles, were reported during the weekend. Eight impaired driving charges were laid.

Six drug related charges were laid, five involving marijuana and one involving hashish.

Sgt. George said after the incidents Saturday, the regular police force of 13 was increased to 80 by Sunday night.

The sergeant said 15 police cruisers were damaged during the weekend, including four with smashed windshields.

Police had many persons left the area early because of the disturbance.

Fore Face Liquor Charges

ALLISTON, Ont. (CP) — Alex Robertson, superintendent of nearby Earl Rowe provincial park said Monday that rowdyism by young people created a tense atmosphere at the facility during the holiday weekend.

"Rowdyism by you people made it miserable for the rest of the campers," he said in an interview. "It is a bad situation all around. This year it definitely were than last year."

About 40 persons were charged with liquor and "drunkenness" offenses, he said.

How Ontario Pork can add a delicious new dimension to these famous dishes, as well as your own.

The fact is, because of the subtle, rich taste of Ontario Pork, you can substitute it in almost any meat recipe and the result will be a delectable change. The dishes below are succulent examples of that, since each of these international favourites has taken on a delicious new dimension just by adding pork instead of the meat that is normally used. It only goes to show that with a little imagination and Ontario Pork, today you can enhance your favourite recipe and tomorrow the world.

Pork Stroganoff

1½ pounds pork tenderloin
salt and pepper
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
2 medium onions, chopped
½ pound mushrooms, sliced
1 can (10-ounce) condensed consommé
1 cup dairy sour cream

Cut pork tenderloin into thin strips, 1½ inches long, ½ inch wide. Season with salt and pepper and dredge in flour. Melt butter in a hot frypan and sear meat until it is no longer pink. Put meat to one side of pan. Sauté onion and mushrooms for about 4 minutes. Stir in consommé; simmer 15 minutes. Mixture will thicken slightly. Add sour cream; stir until smooth. Serve immediately over fluffy rice, buttered noodles or mashed potatoes. Makes 6 servings. The secret of great stroganoff is to use very tender meat like pork tenderloin.

The Star-Spangled Porkburger

1½ pounds lean ground pork
1 medium onion, finely chopped
½ teaspoon celery salt
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons oil or bacon drippings

Combine ground pork, onion and seasonings. Shape into 6 patties, ½-1 inch thick. Heat oil or bacon drippings in heavy frypan. Cook patties for about 6 minutes on each side until golden brown and meat is done showing no trace of pink. Makes 6 servings. For flavour variations: use ½ teaspoon dry mustard; or ½ teaspoon garlic powder; or ½ teaspoon each of oregano and savory instead of the celery salt.

Serve porkburgers in heated crusty rolls with mustard relish or apple sauce or chili sauce and crisp lettuce. For a change try serving your porkburgers topless on a toasted bun half with apple-horseradish sauce (made by blending together equal parts apple sauce and sour cream and sharpening with horseradish to taste); or top pattie with hot pork and beans, mustard, Waldorf salad, sauerkraut or dill pickle. There simply is no end to the flavour combinations that go with pork.

Pork Cacciatora

¼ cup olive oil
1½ pounds lean pork cubes
2 medium onions, sliced
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
1 small green pepper, chopped
1 can (28-ounce) Italian tomatoes
1 can (7½-ounce) tomato sauce
1 chicken bouillon cube
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground thyme
¼ teaspoon ground oregano
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 bay leaf
¼ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced in half

Heat oil in large frypan. Brown pork cubes on all sides. Remove pork and keep hot. Cook onions and garlic until tender. Add remaining ingredients and stir to blend. Cook 5 minutes. Return pork cubes to frypan. Cover and simmer slowly for 40 minutes until sauce seems well blended. Remove bay leaf. Add mushroom halves. Simmer, stirring occasionally for 15 minutes more until mushrooms are tender. Serve very hot with well-buttered spaghetti. Makes 6 servings.

You Can Breathe Easy Again Jimmy

Jimmy the Greek I ain't. I figured the Macs would win three in Intercity Baseball League start this weekend. I had them 3-0. I had the numbers right — just in the wrong order.

However, I forgot to leave a margin for the fact that the guys have 15 games, or official games together before. And they have plays, signals and other out. My mistake.

"It was mental mistakes that did it to us," said coach Harold Reid. "Jimmy just have to work them out of their systems."

"Does they settle down we'll win our share," he added.

Based on the pre-season prediction Harold I will eat crow and eat mind too soon. After all there are 12 games left in the season. The Macs have got the sticks they just have to get rid of jitters and get into synchronizing with each other and the mental lapses will disappear.

Belleville lots three games this weekend, but if they had of played Kerrison ball, or cut their errors in half they likely would have won three.

Oh well, that will come with experience. In any event, Jimmy the Greek won't have to worry for a little while yet — I haven't quite perfected my system.

GLEES — A little apology is necessary. I stated in my column Saturday that Gail Wakefield forfeited the last 19 games of the season. Not so. They simply played and lost them. The Warriors have weeded out the old boys this year and brought in young blood.

That's why they pushed the game in extra heavy and eventually won it Saturday night. The new boys were coming through. Look out though Woodstock. You guys must Belleville in a double-header Sunday June 1 and I figure you'll be looking

Panasiuk Leads Pack

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., totaled a list of 30 golfers in qualifying trials Monday for the United shooting a 16.

Panasiuk shot a two-over-par 74 in the morning round and then knocked off four strokes in a 68 in the afternoon round at Western Golf Club. He was followed by Lynn Lemon, a 5-year-old pro who fell well under the 100 strokes cut at 104.

Errors Cost Macs First Three OFL Games

When Belleville was accorded into the Ontario Football League (OFL) the sportsmen were very vocal in asking why will we be able to hit the pitching in this league?

That question was answered most adequately in the field and when the McDonald's opened their regular season with three losses. What an-one had anticipated was the Macs losing games because of defensive lapses.

"It's the last thing I expected," said general manager, Doug Adams. "I never figured we'd lose games because of mistakes. All these guys have played hundreds of times that they can play great defense."

Nevertheless, the Macs lost

to Woodstock 6-5 in 11 innings Saturday night and 1-0 and 5-2 to Kitchener Sunday night all because of errors.

"They were mental errors," said coach Harold Reid. "There were a couple of fielding errors, but mostly they were mistakes that could have been avoided."

"It's the case of settling down," added Reid, "they just need time to fall. Once they get rid of the jitters and get used to each other these mistakes just won't happen."

Saturday night Macs was a heart-breaker. Everyone on the team had the Diamond Dust it showed. Woodstock tallied a pair of runs in the first inning because the Macs were sloppy. Errors were made and two pass balls were the Woodstock's contribution in Woodstock's first inning. The Warriors punched out a couple of singles and after half an inning it was 2-0.

After three or four innings, the locals appeared to have settled down and in the fifth Steve Ling counted their first run after creating a triple in the centre field fence.

The Macs added two more in the fifth and sixth and appeared to have the game in her arrays and the top of the ninth.

Woodstock had three designated hitters and two designated runners in their half of the ninth to score three runs and send the contest into extra innings. Two pitching runs came across the plate on a wrong field blooper by Pat Nearby and an error — the second one of the inning.

The Warriors catcher, Doug Cale batted a triple in the fifth and scampered home on Nancy Hendley's long Fly to centre field. That did the Macs in.

Wake took the loss framing it, while walking five and giving up 19 hits. Bill Phillis was cold, drive five hours and 10 Mac hits.

Trailey and Sandra, Scarborough Juniors scored three exhibition wins over Belleville Yardmen Benefit Fund of the Belleville and District Ladies Softball League.

Scarborough took 7-2 and 4-1 wins, Saturday, and completed the series with a 4-4 decision, Sunday.

In the opener of the set, John Seekers pitched the win for Scarborough and Sheila Smith collected two spikes for the Yardmen.

Sunday, Reid again chalked up the win. Claus and Trailey shared the Belleville pitching. Sharpe and Reid led the winners' hit parade with three hits each. Trybek smacked two singles for the home side. Donna Lucas checked in with a double.

Kerik and Company Win Number Three

Constellation kept its unbeaten record intact in Belleville Industrial Softball, League play, Monday, tipping Post Office 4-1 to bring it to 3-0 and gain a comfortable lead at the top of the east division.

Ken Kerik's five-hit pitching gave job class for Constellation. He struck out four and walked one. Norm Lockhart took the loss. He pitched six hits, he fanned nine and walked two.

A three-run sixth inning did the trick for Kerik's team.

Checking in with two hits each for Constellation were Bill Cale, Steve Calcom and Bob Reid. Lockhart made up the big hit for the loser.

The unemployed, first place team in the west with a 3-1 record, scored in every inning except in the second and third.

Bill Cooney, Ron Colliedon, Jerry Jones and Bob Reid and Mike Bradshaw each had two hits for the winners.

Norm Tetlack bamsted for Lockhart. Jones slammed a triple while Randy Brintnell, John Maloney and Ed Dawson each tatted a double.

In the other game, UHC remained unbeaten after two innings, holding on for a 4-3 squeaker over Mead Johnson. The winners had a 3-0 lead in the first start.

Dick Sullivan and Joe Scanlon split the pitching chore for the winners, giving up 11 hits. Jamie Three and Sullivan two. Hard luck loser was Fred Pitchkin who limited UHC to six hits while striking out two and walking four.

Ron Jury and Mike Terry each hammered out a pair of doubles for UHC.

Gary Gourmey led Meads with a home run, triple and single.

Tyreman Brothers Take Shakedown

TRENTON As shakedown races go, the Trenton Yacht Club's annual shakedown race for the Tyreman sailboat race was just that.

CFB Trenton Yacht Club race co-ordinator Lieutenant Derek Sweet had planned with the single day event. It was his first and good strong winds from the south.

The only trouble in the race was minor — one boat capsized, but its skipper was able to right it, and go on to place second at the finish line from among the 28 competitors.

Placing ahead of Lieut-ably-at a completely different ball team.

Thursday, the Macs are in Newmarket to take on the Bay's. They should hold their own against the defending Eastern Division champions. In exhibition games the McDonald's were 1-3-1 against them. Obvious there is no problem in the Macs. Bay's we had enough of the sports department.

If you're interested in going up to boost the Macs so there'll be room on the bus, it leaves at 5 p.m. from Lucille Park and the seats will be given away on a first come, first serve basis.

* * *

The McDonald's have been waiting and waiting and waiting for a pitcher. Bill Ebbier, who if he had of weighed in would probably have helped the Macs climb to the top, is now out of the picture. Roger Hodgkinson will probably be out of the picture until sometime in July because of contract commitments with a club in Ottawa.

The Macs, however, are waiting any longer. They signed Jim Chase a teammate of Pete Harrison's from Gloucester. Chase will join Scott Reid and Ted Waite as the third man in the Macs bull pen.

Mere on Jim later in the week.

In a recent meeting of Bay of Quinte Soccer Referees Association, it was decided that all league games will operate with one red and one linesman. The association is 25 strong, but most of its members do not have enough experience and by putting them on the lines it is hoped they will mature.

Another major decision brought about by the meeting was to clamp down on the pests who both playing and verbal — to help them clean up the league.

President of the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association (BQSA), Peter Crowle, stated on behalf of the leagues that the referees would have to cut their fees down if BQSA leagues were going to be able to afford them. He said that the $10 paid for a ref and $4 for linesman was far too much. He also wanted to see the $8 and $3 travel expenses paid by league teams to referees going to Cobourg and Port Hope, respectively, eliminated.

Maybe you guys in the referees association should start paying the soccer teams for letting you officiate their games!

For many sailors, it's the first time this year they have been out on the water, so the recreational rather than the competitive aspects of the race are emphasized.

Ron Pennington, race committee chairman, said the organization is so loose that some boats cross the starting line but not the finish line and no one gets particularly bothered.

At the finish line, for example, the Trenton, two freight boats in the out in the Bay of Quinte, hoisted the British orange markers are dropped in the water. During the course of the approximate two hour race, the markers shifted from Pennington's side, noting the change, continued to mark finishing boats, but the finish line remained the same.

Checking third over-all were Trenton's Thompson brothers in an Alberger, fourth was Dick Sullivan in the Viking, fifth was Freeman Burrows of Belleville in a Corvette, and in the final Trenton's sixth was Dr. Ken Douglas of Belleville, also in a Viking.

Newcomers Look Good

Bob Reid went the distance to the win, allowing 13 hits while striking out 14 and walking one. Lance Tuttle took the loss with Ken Ahern coming on to finish up with a pair of hits in relief.

Bob Allison connected for a triple and a single to lead the Latta Hitters. Reid helped his own cause with a triple. Tom for Read was Phil Badgley with three singles.

Angels Slug Out Win Over Indians

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

California Angels suddenly changed their style of play Monday night, rapping out 19 scoring safties, with some big hitting, and surprised Cleveland Indians, 9-4 in the American League baseball decision.

After hitting only nine home runs last season, the Angels, in their first 37 games, the Angels suddenly started hitting for the doubles, a triple and three homers among 19 hits. Leon Roberts, Jerry Remy and Tommy Harper were the hitting heroes for the Angels, around the bases while Remy was the only base-stealer.

In other American League games Monday, Boston Red Sox beat Oakland A's 3-2, New York Yankees beat Kansas City Royals 5-2, Chicago White Sox edged Baltimore Orioles 5-4, Texas Rangers were shelled, 13-3 by Chicago White Sox, Detroit Tigers beat Baltimore 5-1, New York Mets beat Montreal Expos 5-2 and Oakland A's 10-4, Minnesota Twins beat Texas 6-0, Cleveland edged Chicago 4-3 and Texas Rangers stopped Detroit 6-3.

On Saturday, the Angels stopped the Orioles 8-3, the A's defeated the Yankees 6-1, the Red Sox edged the Mets 4-3, the Twins shelled the Brewers 10-1 and the White Sox whipped the Indians 10-1 and the Tigers stopped the Rangers 3-1.

"We usually don't hit three home runs in three weeks," California Manager Dalton Williams. "That little old bat didn't do a lot of the job. He pivots well, he's not afraid of the pitcher of Sunday and tonight he found out that he can hit the best ball."

Remy's first major-league game, a three-run shot off reliever Jim Perry, highlighted a five-run fourth inning that broke a 4-4 tie. Roberts had a two-run homer in the first inning off Jim Bibby and Harper connected off Perry in the seventh.

Boston's Juan Beniquez scored the tie-breaking run all the way from first base on Rick Burleson's hit-and-run single in the seventh. Carlton Fisk's double drew a one-out walk from John Lowenstein, who then stole all the way around on Carl Yastrzemski and another by Jim Rice. Catcher Dwight Evans added three more runs.

Oakland's Gene Tenace drove in four runs against Boston ace Luis Tiant with his fourth and fifth homers of the season.

Rico Petrocelli's homer touched off a five-run fifth inning for the Red Sox and they capitalized on Oakland's defensive lapses for four more runs in the inning and a 5-3 lead.

Chris Chambliss hit the first two home runs of the season off Kansas City's Steve Busby and Roy White hit a two-run double to lead the Yankees.

Busby had pitched 78 1-3 innings without allowing a home run until Chambliss connected in the second of the fourth inning. It was the first of the year for Chambliss, who delivered again in the sixth inning and also drove in New York's fourth run with a single. Chambliss's shot followed a 3-3 tied in the third on Roy White's two-run double.

New York starter Ruly Mary Gullickson threw his 44th strike out eight in 5 3-3 innings before giving way to Dick Tidrow, who yielded one more hit the rest of the way.

Jerry Orta's two-run single for Chicago in the third inning off Texas Ron Bloomberg got his first victory of the season, with clutch seventh-inning relief from Rich Gossage.

The Orioles took a 1-0 lead in the second on Don Baylor's fifth home run. The Sox pulled in the third when Tony Muser and Rocky Dent singled off Doyle Alexander, and Jim Spencer followed before Orta hit his two-run single off Alexander's relief.

Two-run homers by Willie Horton and rookie Leon Roberts and a pair of solo shots by Gary Sutherland led Detroit to victory. Joe Coleman got the victory with help from John Hiller in the eighth.

Roberts' fifth home run of the season gave Detroit a 3-0 lead in the first inning against rookie Mike Flanagan, 2-2. Sutherland walked with two out in the third. He ran his hit streak from six, tops in the league.

The Tx'ers closed the gap to 4-3 in the fifth inning on a hit by Bobby Darwin's two-run homer and Sutherland connected in the seventh and again in the ninth.

Jones Sinks Cards With One-hitter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

You have to be a pretty good pitcher to lose 22 games in one season in the major leagues, and Randy Jones of San Diego Padres is proving he's a very good pitcher indeed.

Jones dazzled St. Louis Monday night, stopping the Cardinals on just one hit, as the Padres eked out a 1-0 win in a nine-inning National League baseball game.

Jim Grubb's homer with two out gave Jones the win. The only hit for St. Louis was a sharp single by Lou Melendez leading off the seventh inning.

"It was the best game of my career because of all the grand balls the Cardinals hit," said Jones, a 25-year-old left-hander who one year ago led the major leagues with 22 defeats but is now 5-4 with a sparkling 1.89 earned run average for 1975.

Against the Cardinals, Jones recorded 22 of his 30 outs on groundball hits. He also struck out three.

In other National League games Monday, San Francisco Giants beat Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4, Houston Astros defeated Philadelphia Phils 4-2 and Los Angeles Dodgers edged Chicago Cubs 3-2.

On Sunday, the Phillies beat the Braves 5-4, the Cincinnati Reds stopped the Expos 6-1, the Astros outlasted the Mets 7-6, the Cubs shaded the Cardinals 3-2, the Giants blanked the Cardinals 3-0 and the Pirates beat the San Diego Padres 7-2.

In Saturday's games, Philadelphia slipped Atlanta 9-8, Cincinnati whipped Montreal 8-3, New York topped Houston 6-4, San Diego dropped Chicago 6-1, St. Louis bombed San Francisco 17-2 and the Los Angeles shaded Pittsburgh 4-3.

St. Louis starter John Curtis came close to a perfect game. He allowed only five hits before Grubb reached into the left-field bullpen for the game-winning homer with one out in the 10th.

It was the second successive shutout against St. Louis. Jones pounded out 23 hits and scored 17 runs Saturday against San Francisco. Jim Barr of the Giants blanked the Cards on two hits Sunday.

Jones, six first-inning walks and one pitch, came to the Padres early in the 1973 season and created a 7-4 record and a 3.15 ERA. Last season was a disappointment, as his record slipped to 8-22 and his ERA balloonded to 4.46.

But it was a valuable learning experience for the young left-hander, and the Padres have been recognizing his potential, stayed with him.

Cosmos Nip Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Mirko Livelic's goal with 10 seconds left in the first half stood up as New York Cosmos spoiled Toronto Metros Croatia's 1975 North American Soccer League home opener with a 2-1 victory Monday.

The defeat, before 4,796 fans, ran Toronto's fourth in a row. Cosmos now lead the Metros in five games.

Steve Wegerle scored Toronto's only goal after only 40 seconds. Cosmos tied the game not seven again, despite outshooting Toronto 18-8.

Mike Dillon equalized for New York at 23 minutes.

with Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski for the league lead, plus a trio of unusual runs helped Houston snap the Phils' seven game win streak.

A sacrifice fly by pitch-hitter Bill Buckner with the bases loaded in the eighth inning provided the Dodgers with the winning run. The Cubs had tied it in the top of the eighth on Jose Cardenal's two-run double.

Spencer Says Sabres Will Square Series

BUFFALO (Reuter Spencer says that Buffalo Sabres will not play well in the first two games of their Stanley Cup final series against Philadelphia Flyers.

But Pat Spencer, is confident the Sabres can come back and tie the series this week on their home ice.

The Flyers took the opening game of the best-of-seven National Hockey League final last Thursday and won the second 3-1 Sunday afternoon with Bobby Clarke's goal at 16:55 of the third period providing the winning margin.

The series resumes tonight at Buffalo's War Memorial Auditorium and the fourth game is also scheduled here Thursday.

"They were not letting us play the games," Spencer said. "They were not letting us skate. So we just have to adjust to them which we haven't been doing.

Personally, I'm disappointed. I don't think we played well at all. I'm not going to change my mind about that. I don't think we played the way we can."

Spencer said the Flyers had been in his opinion, a better team in the opening game of the series.

"We were used to having 30 feet to skate to the puck. They were not letting us do it. They didn't give us any room. We got to play a little tighter and we've got to press them in their own end.

"They are a very well disciplined club. They play a hard-nosed game. Very good fundamental hockey. They pressed us in our own end and we made mistakes."

Spencer got an assist on Jerry Korab's goal early in the third period Sunday which tied the score 1-1. Bugsy Leach had scored the opening goal for Philadelphia in the second period.

Spencer, considered a good checker, now has four assists in 20 playoff games and had 11 goals and 18 assists in regular season play.

The 31-year-old native of Port St. James, B.C., now just delete in the year after suffering from a knee injury that kept him out of the regular left winger during the playoffs after Rick Dudley had his knee in the opening game and the semi-final series against Montreal.

"There's no way I can accept getting down," Spencer said. "I feel I can return to the big club. I want to play. I've got a big bonus in my contract.

"It's up to the coach, but I think he should play me. I'm not happy with being down."

Sabres' coach Floyd Smith said Monday that Dudley, a 31-goal scorer during the regular season, will return to the lineup tonight. Dudley hurt his left knee when he crashed into the boards behind the Montreal net in the second period of their semi-final opener on April 27.

He missed five games of the semi-final and the first two games of the final.

"He's here to all right now," Smith said. "He'll play regularly."

Smith did not say who he would sit out to make room for Dudley's return.

The Tuesday night match will be telecast in Canada on the CBC television network starting at 8 p.m. EDT.

Better Off Without Spurs

NEW YORK (CP) — President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League said Monday night the NHL is better off without Ivan Mullins, the Denver man who has been authorized to set up the first World Hockey Association.

Mullins announced Monday in Denver he no longer was interested in an NHL expansion franchise for next season and had agreed to take the Denver Spurs of the Central Hockey League into the WHA's Western Division next season.

Stewart Takes Ranger Reins

NEW YORK (AP) — Red Stewart began his first left day as coach of New York Rangers hockey with hopes that the job will last longer than it did for his last two predecessors.

Stewart, who played for 9 seasons in the National Hockey League and has coached in the minor leagues for the last three seasons, became the 16th man to coach the Rangers and the third hired for the job by general manager Emile Francis. The other two, Bernie Geoffrion in 1968 and Larry Popein in 1973, each lasted three months before they were replaced by Francis, who then took over.

"I don't know if I'm nervous for the first two departures," said Stewart. "I think I will be. I don't that I'm not here on a three-month holiday."

Stewart has the security of a two-year contract, but then so did Geoffrion and Popein.

"I'm here to do a job. I'm where I wanted to be and I'm going to do the job to stay here."

Stewart comes to the New York association with a record that is defensive hockey—the kind of defensive hockey he seemed to have gone out of the Rangers' game last season in when they surrendered 276 goals, third most allowed in their conference.

"They gave up stress defense more," he said. "I'm not asking anything they can't do. All they have to do is believe in the system. I'm not asking that they win every game 1-0, but I believe the team has to play more defensive hockey than it did."

After 13 years with Toronto Maple Leafs, Stewart moved to Boston, the Rangers, St. Louis, Vancouver and finally New York where he was hired in June after the 1973-74 season with 276 career games in coaching. In two years in the Los Angeles organization, guiding Springfield to the American Hockey League playoff title after a fourth-place regular-season finish.

Geoffrion and Popein were replaced after their clubs stumbled in the stretch of the drive. What makes Stewart feel secure?

"I get along with everybody in the organization," he said. "I have an understanding that I will be responsible for the running of the team on the ice. If things go wrong, blame me."

That's what Geoffrion and Popein.

Rookies in Indy

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bobby Unser, Tom Sneva and Tom Bigelow qualified Sunday for next Sunday's Indianapolis 500 auto race, bumping Al Legasuela and Rick Mutter from the 33-car lineup.

Bigelow finished his Rookie Pole run at four laps around the 2½-mile Indianapolis Motor Speedway track after averaging 181.958 miles an hour, beyond Legasuela, who qualified at 181.123 m.p.h. as the first driver on the track on May 18, opening day of time trials.

Bigelow qualified his Vollstedt-Offy on the third and final attempt. Only also minutes from the 6 p.m. EDT deadline, he averaged 181.964 m.p.h. barely edging the 181.728 posted by Mutter on Saturday, third of the five qualifying days.

With completion of the field, all that remains before next Sunday's 10th Indy 500 are the bumping in the garages. Thursday's final qualifying attempt, if needed, also will be in the field.

This year's field qualified at an average speed of 181.607 m.p.h., a little more than 2½ m.p.h. faster than last year's qualifying field.

The leader was A.J. Foyt, the veteran four-time winner who has won his fourth pole position. Foyt will now be shooting for an unprecedented fourth victory.

Joining him in the front row on Sunday will be Unser, who qualified his the first run at 11 a.m. EDT, and Bobby Unser, 1975 champion and two-time winner, who will be in the third row with Billy Vukovich and Mike Mosley, last holding Tom Sneva, Mike Mosley and Lloyd Ruby.

Racers Keep ABA Hopes Alive

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The year of the crowd barely had died out Monday night and Denver's George McGinnis was already looking forward to the 12th game of the American Basketball Association chase, despite a pulled Kon lucky Colorado.

"Now we're going down there Tuesday to track heads," he said with a smile after the Pacers were stayed alive Monday with a 16-98 home victory over the Colonels.

Indiana, pumped up when McGinnis and Billy Keller scored out of Kentucky's series lead to 3-1.

Indiana earlier in the day lost a protest of a 95-93 loss in the second game of the series last Thursday night. New ABA commissioner Dave DeBusschere traveled to Indianapolis, and with team officials and reviewed evidence supplied by both teams before deciding that a disputed three-point goal by Keller as the game ended would remain disallowed.

Kentucky took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series Saturday night with a 102-101 victory.

Meanwhile, the National Basketball Association final series also a best-of-seven set, resumes tonight in San Francisco with Golden State Warriors leading a 1-0 lead over Washington.

The Warriors won the opener Sunday 101-95.

McGinnis came up with 32 points and 21 rebounds but the key man for the Pacers was Keller who scored 30 points.

The Pacers came from behind and took the lead midway in the first period.

Records Dive at National Swim Championships

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian swimmers shattered 19 national and four Commonwealth records in the first two days of the Canadian Swimming Championships, including 10 individual records and two relay marks by Canadian swimmers who will be members of the national team.

Ten usually very critical of his Olympic team, particularly in backstroke and freestyle events.

"Even the men's team, which I'm usually very critical of, has been very pleased. Some men have pleased us and the men's team is trying to get down to world standards.

Jim Ferguson of Toronto was a winner of 19-year-old Brendan Pickell of Vancouver who put in a record-setting effort.

Pickell set four Canadian records in winning five individual and results in the 100-metre butterfly, 200-metre and 400-metre individual medleys. He also captured the 100-metre backstroke and anchored relay teams to four more golds.

"There is probably the most talented male swimmer in the world today," Tony Fraser, coach of the Etobicoke Swim Club in Winnipeg, said. He has single-class strokes in his 200- and 400-metre backstroke and 200-metre individual medley.

He broke the last of the four records which he had held at the start of the world championships in Cali, Colombia, last August.

Other team members were Vancouver swimmer Jim Ferguson, Etobicoke's Jim Pardie, Jim Green, Steve Hinds, Dave Cassidy, Ken Ellis, Terry Martin, George Nagy and Brian Robinson, all members of the men's squad.

Carol Cavanagh, Pam Kosty, Tina and Paul Mulcahy of Pointe Claire, Pam Ross, Dorbeth of Etobicoke, Cathy Breen Rogers of Mississauga, Ont., Graham Smith of Edmonton and John Vaukenry of New Brunswick.

The ladies' team is probably the strongest ever in swimming in Canada and includes the cup-winning world record holder in the 400-metre backstroke, Nancy Garapick, 17, of Toronto.

Joining her are Gail Amundsen, Heather Greenwood-Ross, Smith of Vancouver, Joan Harrison and Elizabeth Mackenzie of Toronto; Sue Bach, Chris Mathias, Alta., Cheryl Gibson and Jane Kain of Edmonton, Anne Jardin, Jill and Wendy Pickell and Marilyn Pickell of Pointe Claire.

A second team also was selected to compete in games in Holland and Belgium. That 18-member squad leaves for Europe today and includes veterans, Leslie Cliff of Vancouver.

The Commonwealth records fell in the men's 400-metre individual medley, and the ladies' 100-metre backstroke, 100-metre breaststroke, Joanne Malar of Thunder Bay broke the first Commonwealth record of the meet when she won the 100-metre breaststroke in 2:41.62.

Pickell Sets Four Marks

WINNIPEG (CP) — A total of 19 individual Canadian records, eight relays, five Commonwealth and two Canadian open records were set Tuesday at the four-day spring national championships which concluded here Monday.

Invites You To Make A Deal For Steel
General
DUAL STEEL II RADIAL
Sooner or later, you'll own Generals
The Dual Steel II Radial sets a new standard of excellence in tire design and performance.
General's Dual Steel II Radial is engineered to provide the most desirable handling characteristics, smoothness, noise and appearance for today's cars. The block style tread design with its spacious channels between tire ribs provides outstanding handling and stopping ability regardless of conditions, without a significant increase in noise over conventional tire designs. Deep rounded lug shoulders add stability and traction when cornering.
The Dual Steel II Radial has a wide aggressive tread featuring a traction stand, continuous running rating for sustained between six blocky European-style ribs. The tire rolls smoothly yet has exceptional road-gripping ability. Non-flat spotting polyester cord is built into the tire body in radial plies.
This unique construction principle generates less internal flex-heat than that found in cordon-ply tires as the tire rolls and flexes. The tire runs cool and remains strong. All this combined with wide wide radial plies under the tread to virtually eliminate costly rubber-destroying tread flexing and tire cross-ply damage. The two steel belts in addition give maximum protection against puncture damage and bruises in the tread area. The General Dual Steel II Radial combines all the benefits of radial tire construction for long tire life and driving safety.

Electric power for your home is supplied by overhead wires or underground cable. So before you place a ladder or dig a hole, make sure you won't hit a hydro line.
Always secure your ladder so that it cannot slip or slide. Be especially careful when moving a ladder. When working on a TV antenna, you may need help to make sure the mast does not touch your hydro line.
Underground cables are usually two to three feet below ground level. So before you dig a hole or drive in a fence post, check where power lines cross your property. If you are not sure where the underground cable is, check with your hydro.

Hemmeter Still Hopeful Namath Will Sign with WFL's Winds

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP)— The yearling World Football League is today whether its free-agent quarterback Joe Namath will make the jump from the National Football League New York Jets to the WFL's Chicago Winds.

But Winds President Chris Hemmeter said Monday that it will be a while before the decision is made public.

Winds owner Eugene Pulliam said his first face-to-face meeting with Namath here Monday night, after day-long discussions among leagues officials, backers of the Winds and Namath's lawyer Jimmy Walsh.

Hemmeter told a news conference in Birmingham that the meeting in Tuscaloosa, where Namath owns a popular restaurant, was a big step. "It's important that Joe meet the people he is going to work for ..."

The WFL has been reported to have offered Namath a $1 million, multi-year contract with the Winds, including $100,000 a year for 20 years.

The Jets, with whom Namath has played out his option, are reported to have offered him a $1 million per year, five-year back signed with the Jets in January 1975, fresh off the University of Alabama team, for a three-fatsiders $400,000.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Jets said Monday night, "We have made Joe a substantial offer. I think every-body else, we just have to sit and wait for Joe to make up his mind. That's all we can do."

Namath's decision, Hemmeter said, would be known internally by the league, "but we'll keep it confidential until he wants to make the announcement." That probably would come in Chicago, he said.

Asked if he thought Namath might be playing the WFL offer against the package offered by the Jets, Hemmeter replied: "I don't think so. The NFL is reasonable and conservative. They know Namath's value to that league, and we know his value to ours. Our offer is reasonable as far as this league is concerned.

"I am optimistic. Our offer is substantial, and it is hopefully unlikely that it would not be even full consideration.

"It's almost an emotional offer. Namath and his advisors feel comfortable with its security. Negotiations are continuing at this time. Namath relies on Mr. Walsh, but he will make the ultimate decision."

Drapeau Faces Firing Squad

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (CP) — Montreal mayor Jean Drapeau and his team were to arrive today to face an International Olympic Committee (IOC) gauge for some reassurance that Montreal is capable of staging the 1976 Olympic Games.

After all the flag-waving and ceremonial of today's opening of the 74th IOC session, the hard sell comes on Wednesday when Montreal's entire bid has a go, for a behind-closed-doors report on their stewardship.

While many of their Olympic colleagues remain dubious, the Canadians generally are optimistic that some solution will be found in time to the chaotic labor problems that threaten the scheduled July 17, 1976 opening in Montreal.

Whatever the eventual outcome, IOC delegates generally are agreed that the "crisis" will not be reached at this four-day meeting and the Canadians will be offered more time to try to sort out their massive problems and report back.

How long remains an open question.

"I would be very surprised and very disappointed if the Montreal Games do not come off as scheduled," said Jim Worrall, Toronto lawyer and Canadian member of the IOC who also serves on the Montreal organizing committee.

The crunch comes Wednesday afternoon when the Canadians give their long-scheduled report.

Actually their statement, before the recent outpouring of labor problems on the construction site, dealt only with such mundane questions as protocol for the opening ceremonies, ticket sales and the like.

The fireworks come later when the meeting is thrown open and other delegates press for non-sense replies to accusations that the Canadians are in deep trouble.

Under IOC rules, the committee cannot "take" the Games away from Montreal, nor can it violate terms of the contract with Montreal by approaching other centres with contingency plans. Only Montreal can voluntarily withdraw, and the apparent consensus among IOC delegates here is that this point will not be reached during the current deliberations.

Worrall, a strapping, silver-haired man of 60, who once ran the Canadian team at the Olympics, said after emerging from a four-hour meeting of the nine man IOC executive board that "we are going ahead as planned."

He also denied reports here that the Canadians had appealed for a 24-hour delay in presenting their report Wednesday, the day a general strike is planned in Quebec.

Mayor Drapeau, who left Montreal Sunday night, stopped off in Paris and was due here today, as was Jacques Rousseau, president of the Canadian organizing committee.

Other IOC delegates take great comfort in recent assurances by Canadian spokesmen that they would do "the honorable thing"—that if Montreal found it could not cope it would announce its withdrawal in time for organizers to look elsewhere for a suitable site.

In that event, Mexico takes top place among speculation here although Tehran, successful host to last year's Asian Games, also is mentioned.

Quebec Tops

CALGARY (CP) — Quebec swept the women's and senior men's championships at the Canadian team handball championships Monday.

Quebec thumped Alberta 17-7 to take the women's title and nipped Alberta 26-15 in the senior men's category. Alberta was a three-time loser, falling 16-7 to Ontario in the junior men's final.

New Brunswick won the senior men's consolation final 23-18 over Calgary.

Master Derby Wins Preakness

BALTIMORE (AP) — 100th Preakness "wasn't the best race Master Derby ever ran, but it sure was the biggest purse I've ever won," trainer W.E. (Smiley) Adams said.

"I guess the Louisiana Derby was his best race, but this one wasn't bad . . . not bad at all," Adams said.

Hold 1½ to 2 lengths off the lead in the first half mile, Master Derby moved on better terms with Guest—ridden by Sandy Hawley—for the lead and won Saturday's race by a length.

"I told my rider (Darrel McHargue) don't get back," Adams said. "He was a shade closer than I thought he'd be, but I wanted him to have a horse to look at."

"You know, if he gets out in Native Fort, too soon, he sometimes checks himself and I didn't want that to happen here."

Kentucky Derby winner Foolish Pleasure, back in the early part of the race, made up ground in the stretch run, but finished second.

"I only saw him a time or two during the race because of all those kinds in center field," trainer LeRoy Jolley said. "But could tell he wasn't handling the race track."

Diabolo, owned by Frank Mathews of Vancouver, was a length behind Foolish Pleasure.

The first three finishers along with fourth-place Prince Thou Art, fifth-finisher Avatar and sixth-place Sleigh now are expected to head for New York and the Belmont June 7.

However, the Cincinnati Enquirer quoted Adams as saying Master Derby may skip the Belmont for the $100,000 Ohio Derby because Mrs. Verna Lehmann, the horse's owner, originally is from Ohio.

Adams flew Master Derby back to Louisville, where he finished fourth in the Kentucky Derby two weeks ago and said he'll decide about the Belmont later this week. "But we'll probably be there for it."

Jolley was still skeling Sunday about the condition of the track and the carnival atmosphere that surrounded the 100th Preakness.

"Master Derby won it because he runs good on a bad track," Jolley said.

CANADIAN TIRE

Whatever you look for... mileage expectancy, speed, car-handling, compatibility with your other tires, etc—you're sure to find the right tire at the right price, right here! And for solid value, we don't believe our prices can be matched anywhere!

. . . Canadian Tire still makes your Tire Dollar GO FARTHER!

A. CONTENDER—Similar in construction to tires on new cars 1965 to '69, except our Contender is 4-ply Polyester instead of the usual 2-ply. A stable fibre for less tread-squirm, longer tread-life, no-thump starts.

B. STANDARD—for economy linked with quality. Like new-car tires of the early '60's, but instead of the rayon used then, now made with twin-ply Du Pont 66 Nylon. Meets or exceeds gov't safety standards: (Insurance, $1.00 a tire).

C. THE WHIPPET—Shaped like a Radial and best-suited for high-speed highways. Twin-ply Du Pont 66 Nylon body-cord, 50% stronger than that used in regular 4-ply tires—for a cooler running, cushioned ride.

D. SAFETY 99 CONVENTIONAL—Built for speeds you'll never need! Constructed of Nylon—the mainstay of aircraft and racing car tires—using 4-ply stronger-than-ever Du Pont 66 for double safety. (See Nevada Test results in our stores).

E. SAFETY 99 LONG CORD—High performance 4-ply Nylon in Du Pont 66, with low-cord angle-plies like racing cars. A great replacement for belted tires, capturing most of their handling and mileage. 22,000-Mile Treadwear-Rated.

F. TURNPIKE WIDE-TRACK—4-ply Polyester, cool-running, long-wearing... the smooth-riding fibre with great stability, no overnight thermal set and extra durability.

Opening lead — 6 ♠

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Anyone can take a trick with an ace. Almost anyone can pot his kings, queens and jacks to win trick. The expert goes further and works with 10's, nines and sometimes even lower cards.

South's normal tendency is to play the king or queen of spades from dummy at trick one. East will take his ace and unfortunately will shift to the king of clubs. Later South will get to discard either a diamond or club on dummy's other high spade. But that one discard will be completely useless and the defence will score another vicious tricky.

South can make the contract easily by just potting the jack and 10 of spades to work.

He plays dummy's deuce of spades at trick one. East wins cheap trick with the jack of shifts to that same king of clubs.

South takes his ace; plays the king and queen of trump. He overtakes the queen with dummy's ace and leads dummy's ace and leads dummy's king of spades.

East can do no better than to play his ace. South ruffs, enters dummy with a third trump and discards two clubs on the two good spades. He still loses two diamond tricks, but he has made the contract.

Hot Bath Fails To Stop Births

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told that if certain methods of birth control is a hot bath douching. Douching is a very old idea being to raise the body temperature, the cooler of desired to kill the sperm. Would you please comment.—Mrs. H.E. S.

It will not work. Within a few seconds after the semen has been ejaculated the sperm have found a safe haven from such attempts.

I advise you not to join other disappointed women who have succumbed to this bit of folklore. The same applies, incidentally, to the post-intercourse douche as a "contraceptive" procedure.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My thyroid glands have been giving me trouble for the last six months. I have to clear my throat so often. I do not smoke or drink.

Outside of this I am very healthy. I weigh 225 pounds and am 5 feet, 11 inches in height. I am 71.—E. S.

Except that the thyroid gland is at the throat area, I cannot see why you suspect it as the cause of your throat-clearing. Ag enlarged gland might cause some difficulty in breathing or swallowing, but this would be obvious from the most cursory examination.

It is more reasonable to suspect a mild lung congestion. An x-ray would reveal this as well as a thyroid enlargement.

An even more likely possibility is a sinus problem. A postnasal drip (eastarch) can be caused by continuous irritation the smoke irritating the membranes, causing them to secrete more than the normal amount of mucus. Although you are a non-smoker, this might be a factor if there are any heavy smokers in your home.

Another thing if your coughing seems to increase at about this time of the year, you can suspect an allergy as a factor.

And since you are not exceptionally tall, I wouldn't call you extra healthy with that 225 pounds of weight.

Obesity can be another cause of that throat-clearing.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My annual checkup included the following: blood count, urinalysis, serology, sedimentation rate, EKG, chemistry profile, lung x-rays, triglyceride count and prostate-specific test.

Do you consider this complete? Too much? Will you advise briefly?—H. D. M.

That's a lengthy list to be tested about.

However, it is a complete and not excessive set of laboratory procedures.

The chemistry profile covers glucose or more fasting-sugar, nitrogen, uric acid, cholesterol, and certain enzymes. The blood sedimentation-rate test can be important in detecting infections and be procto-signoidoscopes test and examine the condition of the rectum and the lower colon. All of this job helpful to your heart and lungs, checking your blood pressure, and examination of the pelvis (add breasts for women) rounds out a very effective examination.

It is too bad that all this cannot be included in every physical. However, most physicians may not have facilities to store all of the equipment that would be needed. And the cost of such equipment is often prohibitive. Thus, a history of the patient and a general physical must suffice.

IN MEMORIAM

HUNT — In loving memory of our dear mother, who died 20 years ago, May 20, 1955.
Sweet memories are treasures
We hold in our hearts
Not lost nor stolen nor spoiled
Not by time or thieves they are
The pale white hand of death
No man has power to take
They are safe from all harm
Time can do them no harm
Neither that which
Is called the years
Or the years when it was life with God in the years gone by
Their memory is our comfort
As in the days when we knew
Years of sunshine and joy
Years of sorrow and pain
Years of life, love, friend,
That great one call his own.
Always remembered by daughter Mary.

MEADHAM — In loving memory of a dear wife Alice, who passed away May 20, 1973.
Dearest Mother, I think of you
Your heart was fully kind
Your ways were free from all
That when I now you remember
I smile and not shed a tear
Your memory is as dear today
As the day you left us to mourn
Your place is empty
Your voice is stilled
Your kind heart
That great one call his own.
Always remembered by daughter Mary.

Rail Town Strathcona Edmonton's Old Rival

EDMONTON (CP) — In 1891, the Calgary and Edmonton Railway Co. built track to ten south bank of the North Saskatchewan River and hired the Canadian Pacific Railway to run trains on them.

The seven days birth in Strathcona, community which was incorporated eight years later as a town and eventually became a city. A fierce rivalry sprang up between Strathcona's residents and those of Edmonton, immediately north of the river. The two cities amalgamated in 1912.

"You still get old-timers out there who hate Edmonton's guts, and vice versa," says E. J. Slater, co-editor of the Old Strathcona Foundation. Ironically, the foundation was formed by Edmontonians dedicated to preserving Strathcona, which sad is a district on Edmonton's south side.

For the foundation, the railway has lost none of the significance it held for Edmonton and Strathcona in the last century. Edmonton had awaited the arrival of the railway since the 1870s and was disappointed when the CP main line went through Calgary in 1883.

Edmonton's spirits rose when the rails came south from Calgary in 1891, but dropped sharply when they stopped short of crossing the river, which was not spanned until 1913.

A small roundhouse and shop were built at Strathcona, and a small frame station appeared near the site of the present Canadian Pacific Railway station. The tracks and the station were at the hub of a total of the 13-block area that the Old Strathcona Foundation wants preserved.

Heritage Canada, an independent charitable foundation set up by the federal government in 1973, has promised to invest $500,000 in Strathcona's preservation—a sum which is to be matched by the Devonian Foundation.

However, both are conditional on the support of the city and the province," said Mr. Slater. The frustration is that neither has made any definite commitment."

Added to this is the fact that, technically, Heritage Canada's commitment for the $500,000 expired March 31. Mr. Slater said he has been in touch with Job Phillips, Heritage Canada's executive director, and she has been certain the date will be extended.

Negotiations with the province were done through Janet Schmid, then minister of culture, youth and recreation. Following the March 26 election, Mr. Schmid became minister of government services and Mr. Slater said he is unsure whether the matter still falls under Mr. Schmid's

"Every time we phone Mr. Schmid, he is busy, so the tendency is to let it ride. Every time we phone the city, they move to the machinery is in the works.

"It's bad that these works are awfully complicated and take a long time."

The city includes the railway tracks, a commercial core, old buildings and a ribbon of land that has been reclaimed and now is used as the Walterdale Theatre, two old mills—one of them built in 1892—and a residential area of what Mr. Slater calls modest homes.

"By eastern standards, they're modest. But by western standards, they're very nice.

"We propose to renovate the houses, and sell them at possibly reduced rates, provided the owner agrees to fix up the house back to good shape. We like to see it. It's possible to renovate the houses above stores. I believe they would fill a real demand by senior citizens and students.

"We want to create a new area. We want to bring it back."

A local group known as the Oldmint Car Society recently formed and is plans to erect memorials and repaint the cars of the railway in Strathcona. Brian Howard, the fourth Lord Strathcona, was the land by the government. He drove the first spike to hold the project lands in place and also surveyed a three-of-the-century Dutch Colonsay.

The society is planning a rail part at the original site of the "end of steel," which would feature an restored train of sleeping cars that would serve as a youth hostel.

Old Strathcona Foundation

The Old Strathcona Foundation has been formed to preserve the oldest residential section in prairie Strathcona, a section of the city that once sparked bitter rivalry with the railway town of Edmonton.

The Old Strathcona Foundation was formed in 1973 by a group of Edmontonians who were dedicated to preserving Strathcona, which sad is a district on Edmonton's south side.

Strathcona's residents and those of Edmonton, immediately north of the river, The two cities amalgamated in 1912.

The foundation is looking to the city for the "top lease"—a lease for "virtually 100 years, of all the land the city owns in the conservation area (of about 12 blocks)."

The federation would get the land and buildings as soon as the "top lease" is signed for civic needs. But this measure is being held up at the commission board level. Mr. Slater said.

In addition, the city would provide $500,000 to defray operating costs "and certain undewriting of additional operating costs". The city would match donations to the foundation up to $100,000 a year.

Council has passed an interim development control bylaw which will, for one year, place controls on all property in the conservation area. Special permits will be required for development or restoration of buildings in the area.

Of the province, the foundation is asking a $1-million grant to match the money put up by Heritage Canada and the Devonian Foundation to "assist actual restoration which would engrench the interim development control bylaw" and implement the Alberta Heritage Act, passed three years ago.

The foundation particularly wants the government to provide grants to historical sites. The South Side Museum is one building the foundation wants so designated.

Czechoslovakia Boasts Some 3,000 Castles

HLUBOKA, Czechoslovakia (CP) — Some 3,000 castles and chateaux are scattered throughout Czechoslovakia, dotted on hilltops, built as medieval strongholds.

Prague, the capital, is dominated by Bradcany castle, a group of palaces and churches. Brno, the second-largest city, has Spilberg castle, built as a political prison by the Hapsburgs and also by the Germans in the Second World War. It now houses a pleasant restaurant.

An ideal way to see several castles is by by from Prague to Brno (45 minutes) and drive back. Most castles are closed on Mondays and from noon to 1 or 2 p.m.

Stay two days in Brno to see the old town section and nearby Pernstein castle which has an ornate Knights' Hall, four marble Gothic doorways, scenes printed on walls and period furniture.

Drive 185 miles to Hluboka and make it headquarters for two or three days, touring yourself via Telec, with a fascinating medieval town core, and Ludvicium Hradec, a castle built by the lord of Vilhov.

His emblem was a five-petal rose. In the 15th century, a Vilhov divided his vast estates among his five sons and each took a different color of rose as his emblem. The red-rose branch, the Rosenberks, became the most powerful family in Bohemia for 300 years and their emblem adorns every castle.

The Rosenberks have while Lady Ginet, Perchta was married to a cruel husband and escaped back to her brother's castle. Her husband died a curse on her that her ghost should haunt Rozmberk castle. Her portrait is in several of them.

Jindrichuv Hradec has several beautiful tapestries, including one that hung behind the throne of the French kings before the French Revolution. He is said to have it came to this castle. Look for the depressed-looking ceiling and a table inlaid with a miniature of Louis XIV of France and a series of the most beautiful of his mistresses.

Hluboka castle is crammed with period furniture. There's a fantastic library of 22,000 books, a baroque room with hunting prints and a floral ceiling painted on leather. The parquet floors are all a different pattern. The Great Hall has 16th century carvings on which a father and son worked for 30 years.

Incidentally the last members of the Schwartzenberg family to live here had a member of the tapestries with him when he left Czechoslovakia after the 1948 loss of his estates.

Drive back through Ceska Budejovice to Ceske Kremnice, situated in another delightful historic town. The 300-room castle, second-largest in Czechoslovakia, has a Fancy Dress Hall in which 125 large figures in masquerade costumes were painted on the walls in 1768. It took the artist and a helper 168 days to complete.

Rainbach castle, used in the summer seat of the family on the Vltava, took 100 years to complete. Tours are here, from a 12th century clock that still keeps time, to a rich 400-year-old wooden cross with 40 silver-gilt figures. There's a ceiling of Rosenberk crests and a room lined with portraits of crusaders. You'll see the room occupied by Perchta, the White Lady Ghost, and the Knights' Hall adapted into a banquet hall for a wedding with frescoes of the nobility of the time.

Return to Prague via Karlstein, an important fortress-castle built by the Holy Roman Emperor Charles IV to house the crown jewels.

No Smoking Signs Appear All Over

By DIANE BEELEYEDE
of the Canadian Press

Restaurants and department stores are being asked to install "no smoking" signs in public places where smoking is forbidden or banned in abundance.

A Gallup-Canada Survey by the Canadian Press shows an estimated 10 per cent of restaurant seating is reserved for non-smokers. Many hospitals, banks and department stores have smoking in a few designated areas and some large department stores have prohibited it.

Max Eldridge, said he stopped selling tobacco at his city drug store in Vancouver when he became fed up with the smoke in the middle of a meeting and decided it was time to quit. Mr. Eldridge said he feels people are more and more fed up with smoking.

"The area in each place are reserved for non-smokers and the smoking areas are usually an expansion, he said.

A spokesman for Air Canada said it reserved the smoking section on its planes to 40 per cent from 70 per cent of passenger seats because of survey of passengers showed an overwhelming majority objected to smoking.

A CP Air spokesman said sometimes up to 10 per cent of seats on its planes are reserved for non-smokers.

Smoking is forbidden in Canadian National Railways commuter trains in Montreal and in almost half the seats of CO transit trains in the Toronto area.

Only cigarettes may be smoked on many inter-city buses and smoking is prohibited on most city buses across the country. Some schools forbid smoking and others have designated smoking areas.

No cigarettes are sold in vending machines and stores in some hospitals. The staff of the Winnipeg Health Sciences Centre and St. Boniface General Hospital are not allowed to leave the hospital during working hours to buy cigarettes.

Edmonton is among municipalities where council recently has prohibited smoking in its chambers. Ald. Ron Hepler also opposes smoking in retail stores.

He said he complained to a woman at a place where he was shopping cigarette ashes into between because the place is so smoke. I have rights, and I don't believe philosophically my lungs when someone else's rights are violated. When Lethbridge, Alta., city council recently banned smoking at council sessions, Ald. Ed Kortes said the resolution contravened the province's Human Rights Act.

Some municipal bylaws provide fines for smoking in prohibited

Not all smoking bans are easy to enforce. Spokesmen in most cities from coast to coast across the country said they did not remember any tickets being issued for having cigarettes.

Northern Saskatchewan is allowed on CN trans-island trains. But in Regina, Mr. B. John's bar city buses, theatres and other public places forbid smoking in most areas, but patrons may smoke.

The Montreal-George Thomson, president of Air-dian Limited, said the tobacco company does not restrict smoking in its cigarettes because of the health hazard. A municipal bylaw, however, said smoking is forbidden on one side of pedestrian forties between Halifax and Dartmouth, N.S. Smoking is allowed only in lobbies of theatres in Halifax and Charlottetown. William Sirocck, chairman of the Nova Scotia Government of the Nova Scotia council on smoking and health said it may recommend more restrictions.

Montreal bylaw prohibits smoking in there are flammable materials and provides fines of $100 to $500 for a first offence and $200 to $1,000 thrice second. Smoking is allowed only in designated areas in theatres and auditoriums. The Society to Overcome Pollution has set up a group banning non-smoking rules in other public places.

Outside—A bylaw passed in Ottawa in 1974 prohibits smoking in retail stores with more than 25 employees except in staff rooms, lunch counters, barber shops and beauty salons. Fire of 30 Rubicy school trustees suspended a proposal to ban smoking at board meetings. Peterborough city council decided a motion to ban smoking in council chambers and Ald. Tony Ip said he wanted to "be fair" to smokers, even if it is a health issue.

Manitoba—Cigarette machines are banned in taverns, theatres and schools. Fire marshal's regulations prohibit smoking in ice arenas, except in the lobbies, and theatres. Most Winnipeg hospitals forbid smoking except in designated areas such as washrooms, lounges and some sections of cafeterias.

Saskatchewan—Fire regulations prohibit smoking in rooms areas of hospitals. Smoking is banned on city buses and only cigarettes may be carried on inter-city buses, which usually have a section for non-smokers.

Alberta—Edmonton General Hospital forbids sale of tobacco products in the hospital. A 1974 report by the Alberta Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association said a significant number of 26 hospitals surveyed provided no protection for non-smoking respiratory patients or patients in general. Spokesman for three Edmonton hospitals said they discourage smoking in the hospital or limit it to specified areas.

British Columbia—In Vancouver, smoking is prohibited in theatres, house assembly halls and department stores with more than 25 employees. The fire department said it has been complained their clothes have been singed in department stores.

Showbiz Shorts

NEW YORK (AP) — Goddard Liberson, who joined Columbia Records in 1939 as a $70-a-week retired Wednesday as president of the firm he helped build into the CBS Records Group, one of the industry's top firms.

Liberson, 63, also retired as music vice president of CBS.

CBS chairman William Paley and president Arthur Taylor announced that Walter Yetnikoff, president of CBS International, national division since 1971, will take over from Liberson in the top job.

Liberson first gained prominence by building up Columbia's classical music division, long overshadowed by RCA Victor, pushing sales of long playing records which Columbia introduced in 1948.

He made theatrical history and a lot of money for CBS when he persuaded the company to put up $400,000 to back My Fair Lady in return for the original cast recording rights.

Liberson also founded the Columbia Record Club, the first mail order firm sponsored by a record company.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — Ernst F. W. Alexanderson, a broadcasting pioneer whose work led to the first radio broadcast in 1906, died Wednesday at his home. He was 97.

During the First World War, he perfected a 200-kilowatt alternator which was used by President Woodrow Wilson on Oct. 20, 1918 to transmit Wilson's ultimatum to Germany, which brought the war to a close.

When Wilson later appealed to General Electric to organize an American company to use the alternator, the Radio Corporation of America was born, with Alexanderson named its chief engineer in 1919.

Alexanderson pioneered in mechanical television and the transmission of pictures by radio. Using a perforated scanning disc and high-frequency lamps, he staged the first home television reception at his Schenectady residence in 1927.

The television system developed by Alexanderson and his co-workers transmitted pictures nationwide throughout 1928.

However, it was not until after the Second World War, in 1946, that electronic television gained popular acceptance.

ROME (enter) — An open heart operation on an eight-year-old girl brought Italy to a virtual standstill for 90 minutes Wednesday.

The operation, carried out by a leading cardiologist was broadcast live by Italian television.

Italians crowded around television sets in homes, cafes and offices to watch a team of surgeons skillfully sew up a hole in the heart of Cinzia Rosa.

In a series of clear closeups, they saw the surgeon slice through his patient's breastbone with a mechanical saw, expose the heart, connect the aorta to an artificial heart and lung machine, and then probe into the stilll-beating heart itself.

Doctors said afterwards the operation went well.

Water Depths Off Britain Are Changing

LONDON (CP) — British hydrographers have discovered that the depth of water around Britain's coasts is changing in ways which might be dangerous for, for instance, pleasure boats, low or even regular shipping.

The navy hydrographer reports that off Great Yarmouth, eastern England, underwater banks have moved so much that in several places the water has become shallower. In one place, it also says it ship charted wrecks have been discovered in the English Channel.

The report says: "The national need for the comprehensive study of the entire continental shelf, including the shelf area, to assess total energy potential, led to the formation of a working party representing the department of energy, the ministry of environmental sciences and the hydrographic department."

The hydrographer was called upon to prove safe routes for the movement of the concrete production platform from their construction sites in west Scotland to the oil and gas fields east of the Shetland Islands.

Overseas activities have extended to Fiji, the New Hebrides and Maldive Islands, the Caribbean and Antarctica.

Bisexual Behavior Analyzed

The Canadian press

Sexual behavior in human beings has been scrutinized in detail by a number of writers since Freud began his investigations into this aspect of life.

Now two writers have collaborated to provide some insight into people who are bisexual—that is, by customary definition, those who have sexual relations with members of the opposite sex as well as with members of their own.

Their findings are presented in Bisexual Living, by Julian Fast and Hal Wells. Fast is the author of Body Language, What You Should Know About Human Sexual Response, and The Incompatibility of Men and Women. Wells is a New York psychologist who has practiced clinical psychology for more than 25 years.

The book takes the form of interviews with bisexual couples or individuals by Fast with Wells contributing an analysis of the persons interviewed and an explanation of the reasons for their conduct. Also included is an interview with Dr. Wardell B. Pomeroy, co-author with Dr. Alfred C. Kinsey of Sexual Behavior in the Human Male.

Wells, in one of his analyses, defines a bisexual person as one who engages in and enjoys sexual relations with members of either sex.

At another point, he discusses the question of normal and abnormal behavior, contending that what was considered normal sexual behavior a few decades ago has changed, and that the most sexologists believe anything between two consenting people is normal.

Bisexual Living, by Julian Fast and Hal Wells; 340 pages; $7.95. E. Evans and Co. (distributed in Canada by McClelland and Stewart).

The demand for vegetable seeds and plants continues to amaze us! Even though we started the season with optimistic estimates we've had to go out and buy more of everything.

This week it's another ton of Dutch and Spanish onion sets and another big truckload of seed potatoes.

Prices slightly higher, of course.

Last year's Stellas earned wins in the Quinte Softball League's opening night of action Monday as Mason's Wear, Trenton dumped Gary Hornbeck Real Estate, Wellington 6-1 and Howard and Robert Printing blanked Deroche Motors 3-0.

Hornbeck's fell prey to their own inexperience yielding Auger to their runs with five errors. The miscues combined with Al Ferguson's slugs and home run and Joe Theriault's triple and single gave Jamie Hunter the win.

Hunter fanned 12 Hornbeck batters while walking one and giving up three hits. Wayne Casselman was the loser giving way to Gary Kelmeister in the fifth. The pair combined for six strikeouts and four walks while giving up eight hits.

BCI, PECI, CSS Share Soccer Lead

Belleville Collegiate Institute and Centennial Secondary School are involved in a three-way battle with Prince Edward Collegiate Institute for first place in the Bay of Quinte Girls' Soccer League A division.

All three schools boast undefeated records in the early going. But in the next two weeks, the race for top spot could be settled when the contenders for first meet in head-on confrontations.

BCI blanked Quinte Secondary School 5-0 for its latest win. Rita Karver took care of three BCI goals and Norma MacQuarrie had the other two.

In the B section, St. James Whitney School and Centennial appear to be making determined runs for first place. The division has been cut to five teams with the loss of Quinte's entry.

REAL ESTATE:

GETTING STARTED

Gil McGinnis
A. R. McGinnis
Realty Ltd.

Although 75% of newly married couples start out by living in rental housing (primarily apartments), some thought should be given to the other side of the coin — home ownership. Sometimes the solution is buying low-cost income property, a duplex for example. The down payment requirement is usually comparable to a single family residence, but half the property is supplying income from rental, which helps in making the payments. Financing is generally higher, and there are some added responsibilities of ownership.

In a few years, however, it may be possible to use both parts of the duplex for income and buy a single-family home. The income will probably pay for the duplex with some left over to assist against the home payments. At the same time, you will be building an estate for your family with no strain on your budget.

Before making your first housing decision, why not consult a Realtor and have him show you some possibilities?

Davis Annoyed

Northland Transport Chairman Is Ousted

TORONTO (CP) — Ed Havrot (PC—Timiskaming) says he'll seek remuneration for another legislative term despite being asked to resign as chairman of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission (ONTC).

Premier William Davis asked for and received Mr. Havrot's resignation Tuesday after reports were published of derogatory remarks Mr. Havrot made about Indians in Northern Ontario.

Mr. Davis said a new chairman would not be named immediately.

Mr. Havrot also was asked to step down as parliamentary assistant to John Rhodes, minister of transportation and communications.

The Timiskaming Progressive Conservative Association will hold a nominating convention Sunday to determine who will represent the party and the riding in the next provincial election.

Mr. Havrot, nominated by the association in 1971, was the only announced candidate prior to Tuesday's resignation.

He replaced James Jessiman (PC—Fort William) as ONTC chairman last March 21.

The resignation and a hotly-debated government decision to change the site of a hospital in his riding have cast doubt on Mr. Havrot's political future.

Besides the political setback, Mr. Havrot, 47, is out of pocket the $5,000 a parliamentary assistant earns annually—over and above the $28,000 paid a member of the legislature.

An article in The Globe and Mail May 16, on the government's tourism project at Maple Mountain, 25 miles west of Hailebury, sparked the premier's action.

The Temagami Ojibwa Indian band has filed a caution on Crown land in the area which includes the Maple Mountain site.

Mr. Havrot, commenting on the caution, was quoted as saying the Indian claim was "just a damn nuisance. I could buy the Indian chiefs off with a case of goof. Half of them don't even know where Maple Mountain is."

He was also quoted as saying: "These damn Indians have gone absolutely wild. We should have given them a bunch of trinkets and some cordwood and that's all."

Brandishing copies of the article in the legislature Tuesday, opposition members called for Mr. Havrot's resignation.

Allan Grossman, provincial leader of the Liberal party, raised in this House in regard to remarks attributed to the member from Timiskaming about native people and the land claims they have made which affect the proposed Maple Mountain project.

"I now know that an opportunity to speak to the member about this matter and . . . he admits in all honesty that the reported comments are consistent with what he indeed said.

"Under the circumstances and so that there can be no misunderstanding as to the attitudes of this government in regard to Indians or any of our people, I have asked for and received Mr. Havrot's resignation as chairman of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission and parliamentary assistant to the minister of transportation and communications."

Iran Terrorists Kill U.S. Airmen

TEHRAN (AP) — Terrorists shot and killed two United States Air Force officers as they were being driven to work today in this capital of Iran.

The assassins escaped. The Iranian government said they were Marxist guerrillas, and "no action will be spared to find the murderers and bring them to justice."

The U.S. embassy said the victims had been assigned to the big U.S. military assistance advisory group in Iran.

An embassy communique gave the amount of the shooting:

"Two U.S. military officers were assassinated by terrorists at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday, May 21. As the officers were being driven to their duties, a car pulled out to block their progress on the street. Another car rammed them from behind.

"According to an eyewitness, three men got out of the automobiles and, after ordering the Iranian driver of the car carrying the officers to get down on the floor of the car, shot the two officers several times as they fell to the floor. The terrorists then got into a third car and made their escape.

The embassy identified the dead men as Lt.-Col. Paul Shafer, 45, of Bryan, Ohio, and Lt.-Col. Jack Turner, 45, of Carbondale, Ill.

Shafer, a graduate of Ohio State University, was married and the father of four children. Turner, a graduate of the University of Nebraska, was married and the father of three children.

Unofficial sources said the victims were Lt.-Col. Paul Schaffer and Lt.-Col. J. Turner.

Similar sources also reported an Iranian murdered by terrorists today.

They said he was an employee of the government radio-television company, Ebrahim Nashirevani, but had no other information about this killing.

A woman telephoned The Associated Press office anonymously at noon and said:

"The execution of American officers today was a reply to the execution of nine Iranian revolutionaries in prison last month."

Identifying herself as a spokesman for the Iranian People's Warriors Association, she said Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi is a "stooge of the Americans, therefore we murder Americans."

Quebec Walkout Response Tepid

MONTREAL (CP) — A call by the 300,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor (CSN) for a province-wide walkout to protest provincial government labor policies received sporadic response today.

Inside workers at the main Montreal post office walked off the job at noon Tuesday and the day shift did not report for work. But letter carriers and truck drivers were reported on the job though a post office spokesman said "there isn't much mail to deliver."

In the construction sector, the walkout was expected to be strong in light of a strong response to a walkout call last week, most major sites were reported to be operating near-normal.

The Olympic Village site, which is reportedly strong along with the downtown Place Desjardins office complex and Dollard Dorion, all had large worker turnouts.

Police and private security guards were used to escort workers at construction sites.

Early radio broadcast reports referred to "flying squads" at construction sites but a police spokesman said any such incidents are usually reported promptly to police "and so far we have had no problems of that nature—one at all."

The general walkout was called by the QFL last week to protest the Quebec government's labor policies, specifically the lack of a settlement of the strike at Pratt and Whitney of Canada Ltd., formerly United Aircraft, in nearby Longueuil, now in its 17th month.

The site was the scene of a bloody confrontation with police last week when workers briefly occupied the plant with hostages.

Pickets circled the waterfront-area plants of Canada Metals Ltd. and St. Lawrence Sugar with placards reading "Free the guys at United."

Pickets also were seen at the plants of Atlantic Sugar and Wentco's bakery and workers paraded at the headquarters building of Hydro Quebec.

Social workers were reported picketing some municipal welfare offices.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Metropolitan Toronto Association said longshoremen were not at work on the docks but that the work slowdown had "absolutely nothing to do with the QFL strike."

"We arranged previously that the men could hold a union meeting today between 8 a.m. and noon. They had to be back on the job at 1 p.m.," the spokesman said.

Municipal buses and the Montreal subway were running normally but a spokesman for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Marcel Laplante, said 85 per cent of 9,000 city blue-collar workers were off the job.

Elsewhere in the province, work stoppages were also sporadic.

A spokesman for the James Bay Energy Corp. said reports from the site of the giant hydroelectric project, site of disturbances which gave birth to the Cliche commission inquiry into construction violence, indicated the normal work force of about 3,000 was on the job.

"We have no reports" of workers not showing up for the job, he said.

The province's major daily newspaper, considered vulnerable to walkouts by mechanical departments similar as well as other workers affiliated with the QFL, reported its production going ahead normally.

Bride Is Promised Corby Rose Garden

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

A marriage proposal caught the fancy of parks and recreation commissioner Tuesday.

The proposal, from two young betrothed Bellevillians: That their wedding be held in Corby Park, the city's official rose garden.

No confetti would be thrown to spoil the park's esthetic setting for the August wedding the couple accured.

Any damage caused would have to be paid for, a committee member cautioned.

But, said Ald. Wally Dever: "I think it's a great idea — and quite original . . .

One Air Control System Planned

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence and transport departments and treasury board are in the midst of a study aimed at pooling the surveillance of civilian and military aircraft under a new single control system.

Planners say it is hoped that as early as 1977 or 1978 the defence department will start taking control of all aircraft flying between cities while the ministry of transport (MoT) will control those over cities.

The modernization and merging of surveillance, also being done in the United States, will end duplication of radar and other facilities across the country and put all aircraft under one common military-civilian system.

The merger became possible recently when the North American Air Defence Agreement (NORAD) with the U.S. was renewed for five years.

Under that agreement, control of the military of western Canadian airspace will be moved from the U.S. to a new $25-million centre in the Edmonton area. Studies now in progress will determine whether MoT and defence can share that facility—and its cost.

A new surveillance system and military radar network, Defence officials say the merged system will improve efficiency and duplication and make the most of available labor and capital.

Davis Asks Time to Study Immigration

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis has asked the federal government to give Ontario residents until the end of 1975 to express views on immigration policies.

In a telegram to Prime Minister Trudeau, Mr. Davis said the July 21 deadline for special Commons-Senate committee study on the federal immigration green paper is inadequate.

He said several organizations have complained to him about the lack of time to prepare briefs for the public hearings.

"Because the government of Ontario agrees fully with you on the importance of immigration policy and the need for public consultation, I would urge you to postpone the schedule of the joint committee to the end of this year," he said in the telegram.

Anybody Can Get into Act

Open Forum Planned for Trudeau Visit Here

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The visit of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau to Belleville Thursday night is being emphasized as more of a community event than a strictly political program.

Format for the meeting organized by the Federal Hastings Liberal Association — calls for no set political speeches.

Instead, the prime minister will be asked to engage in debate with the audience and answer questions.

"It's an open forum and anybody interested is welcome to attend," says Frank Chapman, association president. "It's strictly a community affair — something like the old town hall meetings where the audience quizzed those on the platform."

After the debate, members of the audience are invited to meet with Mr. Trudeau over coffee and personally talk with him.

Mr. Chapman said his association has been attempting to organize such an event for about a year "with the idea that people in the community have comments to make to the prime minister — and they're entitled to make them".

As a result it should produce "a fairly open and honest kind of discussion," hoped the Liberal official.

The discussion is set for Centennial Secondary School at 8 p.m.

Prince Edward County Taxes Up 58 Per Cent

PICTON — Prince Edward County council Tuesday approved a 1975 budget of more than $1 million, reflecting a tax increase of approximately 58 per cent.

A mill rate of 7.2998 has been struck, in comparison with the 1974 mill rate of 4.6998. Value of a mill is $136,672.

A levies has been passed by-law in total of $1,000,000 this year among the ratepayers of Prince Edward's 10 municipalities. In 1974 the amount levied was $640,321.

In a breakdown of the 1975 mill rate it was noted 1.7957 mills will be held for county purposes and 5.5041 mills for general purposes.

The new levies totalling $2,365,511, will raise $536,000 in revenue through rate, $25,000 through administration of justice and $800,000 through county home paid maintenance and general grants.

Section 45 of the Assessment Act provides for an additional $8,000 and revenue from wayfare totals $213,728. Land division has been budgeted with a revenue of $10,000 and the county museum with $12,900, resulting from grants and donations.

Also listed in revenues is $1,000 for tax certificates and a support grant of $124,811 based on a net dollar levy.

The 1975 Prince Edward roads department budget totals $780,000 with an allotment of $524,000 from the ministry of transportation and communications.

The county's share at 1.577 mills is $244,000 this year, in comparison with $230,000 in 1974.

The new budget's total for general purposes in 1975 is $788,488, in contrast with $618,321 in 1974.

Prince Edward County clerk Thomas Walker, in an interview Wednesday afternoon, said council session, said council under-levied approximately $170,000 in 1974.

It will operate a three-year period to compensate for this under levy.

He said in the past two or three years Prince Edward County has enjoyed relatively cheap taxes largely because of stabilization grants to the municipalities.

Mr. Walker observed a comparison of this year's budget with the budget of a about three years ago would reflect a true picture. He said a contrast with the 1974 county budget figures.

In 1974 the mill rate was lowered in error, raising less revenue than was required to repay, bank loans for construction costs for the county home for the aged.

Since 1971, funds have been levied and raised at a rate of $130,000 annually for the cost of the home's construction.

On 1973, about $300,000 was used toward the project and a grant of $170,000 from the home was paid and this grant was placed in the general account as it was not needed immediately. It appeared as part of the county surplus in 1973.

The money was used to finance county operations in 1974 but only $147,000 of the $317,000 surplus should have been spent in this way.

Because of the error, the county levy had been set at about $170,000 lower than it should have been.

The mistake did not increase the cost of the county home project for the taxpayer.

Ameliasburg Tops County Tax List

PICTON — Prince Edward County council has passed its 1975 budget calling for $1,020,000 to be raised through local tax levies.

Of the county's ten municipalities, Ameliasburg will pay the largest share of this amount with a levy of 22.86 per cent, will pay $232,726. The figure includes $172,949 for general purposes and $59,776 for roads.

Sandy Hill, the town of Picton with a levy of $196,230, or 19.78 per cent of the total levy.

Of this amount, $135,963, is for general purposes and $60,267 for roads.

Hallowell township will pay a total levy of 18.79 per cent or $191,000 and Sophiasburg a total levy of $122,861 or 11.98 per cent.

Hillier township will pay a total levy of $63,877 or 6.26 per cent and North Marysburg $58,787 or 5.5 per cent.

Wellington will pay $48,826 or 4.78 per cent and Athol's share is $43,326 or 4.3 per cent.

South Marysburg will pay $41,764 or 4.09 per cent of the 1975 levy and Bloomfield a total of $27,135 or 2.63 per cent.

Pool Gets $10,000

PICTON — Prince Edward County's 1975 budget passed Tuesday night in council approves a $10,000 grant to the Prince Edward community swimming pool committee.

Grants of $1,000 each this year were approved for museums in Ameliasburg, Wellington, Marysburg and South Marysburg in comparison with grants of $500 in future years.

The Prince Edward Centre Commission this year will receive a grant of $18,000 in comparison with a 1974 grant of $14,000.

Hastings arena, granted $156,000 in 1974, this year receives $8,000.

The Quinte's Isle Tourist Association will receive a grant of $2,500 this year in comparison with $1,000 in 1974.

The Prince Edward Agricultural Society will receive $1,500 in 1975 the 1974 budget for agricultural society $100 as grants.

Grants this year totalled $60,800.

Plots Prove Popular

The city parks board's plan to lease garden vegetable plots now has met rapid response.

But there's been one unexpected development.

There is a "surprising lack of response" from elderly folk living in nearby apartments for whom the project — between Wellington and Simcoe streets was seen as big attraction.

Instead, reported Gene Gemmell, parks department superintendent at Tuesday's board and recreation-arena committee meeting,

All first it was assumed that senior citizens would respond in greater number since they'd recently left the Victory food plots of wartime.

However, first encouragement for the project came from those who had expressed similar misgivings to other municipalities.

Lloyd Syer, parks director, said the project mainly had caught the fancy of those interested in gardening in ratepayers common in other communities.

Some 48 plots were made available with 18 leased to date early this month and more applications since, said Mr. Syer.

Welfare Budget Down

PICTON — Prince Edward County's 1975 budget approved Tuesday shows a decrease of $25,380 in the welfare budget in comparison with 1974 figures.

Last year the welfare department budget was $322,800 in comparison with $297,420 budgeted for 1975.

County clerk Thomas Walker said the decrease is the reflection of 1974 expenditures. The welfare department last year exceeded with an actual budget of $346,003.

The budget figure for the county planning board spiked sharply this year with an increase from $20,000 in 1974 to $75,000. Reason for the increase is the fact that secondary plans are in preparation for several Prince Edward municipalities.

In 1974 county council gave a total of $32,000 to the board in comparison with the 1975 figure of $55,000.

Child welfare costs this year are budgeted at $71,875, in comparison with $58,157 last year.

The warden's honorarium this year has risen to $4,600 from $4,000 in 1974. Similarly his car allowance has escalated from $3,000 to $3,600.

The budget for the county museum this year is $12,900, in contrast with the 1974 figure of $10,000. This covers the salary of the new curator and other expenses.

In 1975 a total of $465,000 has been budgeted for operation of the county home in comparison with $378,895 in 1974.

Council Questions Convention Costs

PICTON — Members of Prince Edward County council's roads committee and the county engineer have been authorized to attend a roads and Transportation Association convention in Calgary this fall but Picton reeve Larry Richardson objected.

He unsuccessfully introduced a motion to limit the number of delegates to two reeve representatives.

Reeve Richardson felt that because of the cost involved only one member of the roads committee and county engineer Donald Clark should attend.

Cost of the convention is $70 per day per delegate, plus transportation and registration allowances.

Chairman of the roads committee, Athol reeve Keith Perry observed it is highly unlikely all five committee members will attend the convention.

Reeve Richardson termed the convention "a very expensive item" and questioned the value of it for Prince Edward delegates.

Hillier reeve Allan Pettingill endorsed the convention and said council should not alter its general policy on conventions in mid-year.

"Just because it's always been done, I don't feel, is a reason for carrying on with something that is a little extravagant," considered reeve Richardson.

North Marysburg deputy-reeve Kenneth Hicks supported the Picton reeve, noting that a good share of the discussion at such conventions is "far above our heads."

Warden Clifford Walker said the problem could be met several delegates to the road convention and observed, "We in Prince Edward are not observing economies."

"I do agree maybe you don't learn much but it's the contacts you make with people," he emphasized.

"We get to know your neighbors and this is a pretty important thing," he added.

Guards Ask Pay Increase

TRENTON — Trenton's 12 school crossing guards petitioned Trenton Tuesday for an 89 rate that would put their weekly salary to $45 up by $15 from September 1974.

Included in the petitions was a request for payment of half salaries to those over 70 years during vacation periods.

Crossing guards now earn $27 weekly and have received hikes rates — of $5 and $2 — since September last year.

Town council took no action on the guards' requests after councillor Ron Price Suggested the petition be tabled. "It hit me cold and I haven't had time to think about it," he said.

Cemetery Survey Grant OK

TRENTON — Trenton council agreed Tuesday to give the Mount Evergreen Cemetery Board $1,000 as half the cost of a major survey to expand the number of burial plots in the cemetery.

Council's move ends a threatened action by Murray township to withhold from Trenton residents the privilege of using the cemetery. According to an estimate by councillor Bob Wannamaker, about 75 per cent of cemetery plots are now taken by Trenton citizens.

Murray said that it felt any support it would give the board to pay for the survey should not go toward providing burying ground for nonresidents of the township "as has been the case heretofore."

Already steps to exclude nonresidents from plots have been taken by the course. In a letter to council, township clerk Ken Dean indicates the board has discontinued sales to those outside Murray until the survey is complete and more plots are available.

Murray argued that since "a large percentage of burials are residents of Trenton, the town should share in the cost for the survey, estimated at $2,000. Murray has agreed to provide half the funds.

In supporting the move to assist Murray township, councillor Ed Todd said the percentage of cemetery use by Trenton citizens would warrant financial help.

Money for the survey will come from a miscellaneous account, rather than from an account set aside for grants, which now remains in the "first-come, first served" account.

Earlier this month, council cut a $1000 grant to the cemetery, north of Trenton, from its budget.

New Park Planned

TRENTON — Trenton's parks board will spend $2,000 to develop a park in the new subdivision at Frankford, Mayor Bob Trenton. The park is to be named Thomas Alury Park, after the late mayor of the town.

Trenton Delays EMO Decision

TRENTON — Trenton will await the results of a Quinte Emergency Measures Organization (EMO) Ontario claim in May before it decides whether to support the EMO, cost of which previously government funds as of December, 1973.

Council's action Tuesday came after confusion was shown by several councillors over the costs the town would face to support the disastrous provincial organization till the end of the year.

Peter De Groot, Trenton's EMO representative, told councillors an estimated $1,000 would be needed to fund the EMO.

But the possibility of the expenditure brought objections from councillor Pete Aziz. The councillor reminded the provincial government must have had sufficient in mind before it decided to cut off funds.

He suggested council investigate Queen's Park's plans before embarking on supporting the EMO.

Discussion Tuesday was sparked by a letter from Quinte EMO co-ordinator Angus Duffy, Col. Duffy said the government's "unacceptable limitations" will force the EMO to close in July, 1975.

Col. Duffy suggested "the Ontario government has a moral, if not a legal, responsibility to continue to support the program until the end of the fiscal year.

The move to fund EMO from local funds is being considered by several members of the group's executive committee, according to Mr. De Groot. He asked for council's direction in supporting such action.

Councillor Ed Todd came out strongly in support of the group, saying Col. Duffy has a good disaster plan for Quinte and it is kept up to date.

"Any time we've had trouble in Hastings County," said Mr. Todd, "he's (Col. Duffy) been involved."

Mr. Todd suggested that before it is thrown "out the window," Trenton should look into possible funding to keep it operating.

Ripoff?

Some disgruntled Prince Edward County residents are claiming the Royal Brothers Circus that played the Quinte Fairgrounds recently under the sponsorship of the Prince Edward Centre was a "ripoff." However you couldn't prove it by the long clowns.

Expansion Plans Call for Meeting

TRENTON — Mayor Bob Patrick told councillors Tuesday he intends to call a special meeting of council to discuss town plans for a possible future involvement with Northumberland County.

Mayor Patrick assurance came during discussion of a report from Donald King, commissioner of a team studying restructuring of government in Northumberland.

Earlier this year, Mr. King asked council to chart its expectations for growth in coming years. He requested council to produce a report, that he said he would consider in making recommendations for county government changes.

Recently, Mr. King released a discussion paper in which he suggested Trenton, despite its town limits west and north up to two miles and then straighten them. Such a move, mostly into Murray township, would allow Trenton to control its own destiny, he suggested.

The commissioner requested the town to submit a report to his Cobourg office by July 15.

Mayor Patrick told council a special meeting will be set up when administrative staff is free of other duties.

Pay Boost Approved

TRENTON — All hands west up and some councillors broke into smiles Tuesday as Trenton council gave itself a 30 per cent raise, provided for in last week's 1975 budget.

With unanimous approval of the by-law, the town will see their honorariums jump to $900 this year to $2,700. The mayor's pay will go up by $1,800 to a total of $5,400.

Justifying the raises when the town's $2.6 million budget passed last week, Mayor Bob Patrick said the increases were "deserved" considering the work performed by council.

The increases, he said, brought Trenton in line with pay scales in other Ontario municipalities of similar size.

With Prospects of Another 'Vietnam' Anytime N. Koreans Flaunt Their Ideology

By JOHN D. HARBRON

Foreign Affairs Analyst

Thomson News Service

The Canadian press in the last few weeks has been filled again with curious echoes of a time when the Republic of South Korea, all of them are extremely ideological expressions of self-satisfaction from Marshal Kim Il-Sung, the mysterious ruler of that still isolated nation.

No one is ever sure why the North Koreans make these bursts of self-satisfaction in the papers of western countries they consider to be unquestionably "imperialistic."

And they do not seem to be associated with any kind of trade drive or encouragement to sell to the isolated and chauvinistic Communist state in the northern half of Korea.

The Republic of South Korea, even though it is a harsh dictatorship by its own people, is an isolated Asian state, but remains now the most important U.S. client state in Asia, even with Taiwan.

South Korean industrial development the rival of Thailand, Taiwan, the Philippines, and to a lesser degree hampered by the war of South Vietnam, are and were based on inputs of U.S. cash and technology.

Backed by American investments and other interests in South Korea are about 40 U.S. bases, and the largest American military establishment left on the Asian continent.

But their presence reminds us of the important difference between maintaining troops in Korea and almost anywhere else in Asia. The bitter Korean War which began 25 years ago next month ended in an armistice at Panmunjom in the spring of 1953.

This means the Korean War, otherwise called "a police action" and an "emergency operation," has never ended. At any time it could be resumed and the 25-year-old armistice broken.

The inference is that North Korea would be the offender as it was on June 25, 1950 when it invaded the south. But this is no longer necessarily so. South Korean President Park is just as dictatorial and unpredictable as his avowed enemy Kim Il-Sung in the north.

His country will soon have the basic technology to make an atomic weapon, thanks to a large degree to both canadian and the United States for selling him nuclear reactors.

The South Korean armed forces bolstered by the latest in U.S. weaponry, used to be called the "Roks" during the Korean war, initials for "army of the Republic of Korea" and held in about as much contempt by some American military brass as the recently-defeated "Arvns" (Army of the Republic of Vietnam).

The Roks seemed like the two Vietnams were artificial products of power agreements of the great powers. The northern half of the Korean Peninsula like the northern half of Indochina, was largely in the power of local Communists who had been armed against the Japanese invaders by the Allied Powers.

It was more or less a fait accompli, in acknowledge Communist control in the north in both regions. The dividing line of the 38th parallel in Korea, became and still is, the boundary which made two Korea, whereas there was once a single state.

In spite of Korean hopes at unity some day, a move by Kim Il-Sung from the north to bring it about in his way, will simply mean another tragic Vietnam-style conflict in South East Asia.

Back to Work Ethic

The work ethic has been under fire for some time.

This questioning of it has even been acknowledged by the business world.

"Our image with the general public is slipping badly and indeed recent surveys on a Canadian campus show only some ten per cent of the students there are favorably disposed toward the business community."

That was Canadian Chamber of Commerce president E. R. Olson speaking at a meeting of Belleville members earlier this year.

True, the image of a country grounded in a tradition of personal initiative and hard work has been slipping badly in recent years. Politics and instant communications have had a hand in this. Brainwashing of the "corporate welfare bum" variety on the one side and generation gap hangups, plus dissatisfaction with the adult world and with government, on the other. These have contributed toward youthful cynicism and disillusionment.

Government has compounded the problem with increasing welfarism and policies that encourage people to expect a "handout" rather than to put their hands to the plow.

There is evidence though that this is changing. For one thing there is fresh realization that satisfying work beats idleness. A lot of people are discovering that the "welfare rolls, but nevertheless he has a formidable financial problem from now on.

Another aspect of this showbiz saga is the matter of keeping up appearances.

Shirley Andy Williams doubtless will never be reduced to the welfare rolls, but nevertheless he has a formidable financial problem.

Camping Tragedy

The death of a man camping near Marysville was a tragic beginning for what promised to be a good summer for outdoor life in the Quinte area.

It is to be hoped that, in this season of barbecues, campers do not make the same potentially fatal mistake of burning charcoal in confined quarters.

Relative Values

Living in the style to which one has become accustomed is not only a matter of relativity, it can be hard work.

Shirley Andy Williams doubtless will never be reduced to the welfare rolls, but nevertheless he has a formidable financial problem.

In Background

Another offshoot of our costly government that we have not heard from in some time is the Company of Young Canadians.

A couple of years ago this controversial group from the Pearson years put out a comprehensive report of its activities throughout Canada.

It was called "Strategies" and it reflected somewhat the new respectability this group had achieved in the minds of people.

From an image of do-gooders tinged with political radicalism, the Company had sort of come of age.

But like the Food Prices Review Board, the Young Canadians are either too busy to tell of their latest programs, or is it that they are just not around any more?

"I DIDN'T REALIZE THERE WAS SO MUCH NUTRITION IN THESE LOW PRICED FOODS, LET'S UP THE PRICES!"

Liberals Seem as Party to Beat As PCs and NDP Oil Their Guns

By DON O'HEARN

Queen's Park Bureau

Thomson News Service

TORONTO — From now until the election there will be a gang-up on the Liberals.

The Tories have driven the party to, best, according to the polls, both the Conservatives and the NDP will be serving in on them.

Thus it will be interesting to see what form their attacks will take.

Until recent months the PC's tended to ignore the Liberals.

Most of their political attack focused on the NDP, mainly through accusations of socialism.

They seldom mentioned the Liberals, which, of course, was a form of attack. The indication that they weren't worth talking about.

Recently this has changed, with Premier Davis particularly attacking Robert Nixon as a man of promises but no particular ideas.

In contrast to the government the NDP for years has had a calculated attack against its rivals on the opposition side.

This has been a well-thought out non-attack.

The mechanic was to dismiss the Liberals as unimportant, to brush them off as not credible.

Quite probably in the future the PC's will swing along with the NDP. Instead of attacking through non-attack, of trying to kill the Liberals by throwing out its credibility.

With both parties using it, this, of course, is a good tactic.

Relatively speaking, the Liberals have as good a body of members as either the government or the NDP.

Backing up Mr. Nixon are James Bullbrook (though he will be retiring in the next election), Vernon Singer, Donald Deacon, James Breithaupt, Philip Givens, Murray Gaunt and Edward Good, all whom are of immediate cabinet calibre. And behind them is another group of hard-working members—if not of star calibre they would not disgrace a cabinet.

But in opposition these members have had a chance to show their true calibre.

And with them constantly, and consciously being derided they have an uphill fight to convince the public of their merit.

Embargo on Air Cargo

Baltimore Sun.

The Air Line Pilots Association has imposed an embargo against flying aircraft which carry hazardous substances. The embargo clearly is justified. Skippers, the U.S. Department of Transportation and the airline companies have taken far too little action to remedy the frightening problem of shipment by air, without adequate safeguards, of caustic, flammable, radioactive, explosive and other hazardous substances. A new law signed by the President a month ago was supposed to put teeth into federal regulations of hazardous cargoes, but the usual bureaucratic inertia prevails, and little is being done. The pilots are not being unreasonable; for instance, they are willing to carry radioactive materials for medical use, or other specialized cargoes, even when some danger may be involved. In fact, the pilots appear to be the most reasonable of all those involved in the hazardous cargo problem, and their action can only be described as a highly responsible one set against the background of near criminal irresponsibility on the part of the agencies and companies who though charged with solving the problem are instead sitting on their hands.

Herb Gray Probable Runner In the Provincial Election

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Herb Gray, the former minister of consumer affairs who was dropped from the Trudeau cabinet last year, still is expected to switch to provincial politics when an Ontario election is called.

Such rumors developed soon after Mr. Gray left the cabinet and he has had discussions with Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon in the meantime. He would run in the Windsor-Sandwich seat, a large part of which is included in his present Windsor West federal riding.

"I still haven't made any negative decision about running provincially," he says now. "I probably would run if an election until a provincial election is called."

But he also mentioned that he would run "a strong and successful campaign."

Meanwhile, Robert Stanbury, another minister who was a victim of last year's shuffle, who has also been rumored to be heading for provincial politics, says he has not made a decision.

Asked whether he would complete his term as a backbencher who happens to sit on the front bench, the former revenue minister said that "I don't want to predict the future."

Toronto Mayor David Crombie is being mentioned here as a likely candidate in the York Scarborough Federal riding for the Progressive Conservatives should Mr. Stanbury resign and clear the way for a byelection.

Stanley Knowles, the Winnipeg North-Centre New Democrat who fought so fiercely against the recent pay increase for MPs, is absorbing a good deal of kidding for driving a new car while MP's are receiving up to $7,500 in retroactive pay.

But he says there is no connection—the car was purchased before the pay bill went through parliament.

Some of the group of Conservatives who want the party to move toward the right are said to be working on a position paper for the future of the party which they hope will be reported to be upset by reports that party Leader Robert Stanfield will appoint party president Michael Meighen and national director John Lambroff—up conference organizers, Dalhousie Mulroney is identified with the right wing of the party.

Negotiations with party men among party House leaders for an extension of Commons sittings beyond June 27, Government House Leader Mitchell Sharp is detected to begin the summer recess June 27, but with only 15 government debating days left in this period and a budget expected, there is little time for legislation. And there are nearly a dozen bills the government would like to see passed before the summer recess.

The negotiators will discuss the possibility of morning sessions on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday and possibly evening sessions on Wednesday, when the House does not normally sit.

Flying metaphors from Eric Nielsen (Yukon): "I sheds like to ask the minister to give me a status report on the terminal building at Whitehorse which has been on the hook for so many years but which has still not got off the ground."

Rural Life Is Fine But Farming Not for Amateurs

Ottawa Journal

The hectic pace of escape from urban life is probably as old as titled themselves. Horace, in the early century BC, extolled the Roman's love for their country villas. Thomas Jefferson, author of the 18th century poem, longed to be "from the madding crowd." Hosmer, however, and 18th century Canadian poetry could escape to their villas and manors without fear of disrupting the social and economic orders of their societies. Those societies were overwhelmingly agricultural and the villas and the manors fitted into the scheme.

In Canada and the United States, on the other hand, people moving into cities have bought up land and have often used it for display and pleasure, without regard for the farmer's economic round-about. Some city people, surely, have fitted in well in the country; others have rubbed the wrong way or let their land lie idle or at least have taken up a place which might have been held by a full time professional farmer playing a role in the community. Most, with good will or bad, have contributed to pushing the farmer on his own land. Agriculture critic Eugene Whelan suggested to farmers in Almonte recently that escape is the country people and of the leisures that urban Canadians should no longer be encouraged indulge. Although about 23 percent of the population is agricultural or use very or the other dependent for employment and income closely linked to farm products, only six percent of the population actually lives and works on the land.

The dependence of Canada on this vital six percent means that farmers and their environment must be carefully protected. In a nation so percent industrial, there can be no substitute for a "land ethic" in the country." If the wilderness Canada's million square miles worth of our conservation, the farmers' environment demands that it be carefully protected.

Everyone in the cities feels the strains of the accelerated tempo of modern industrial life. But if those who have invested interest and initiative in place an idyllic country retreat were to stay at home in the city and concentrate on making life more bearable for the people they meet, then perhaps modern life would be more livable for everyone, and the Canadian countryside would be even more attractive than it is today, and more productive.

Parliamentarians' Pay Raise—Yes, There's a Positive Side

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Let's take the positive attitude to that combined — which in reality will be far more than a mere third pay increase in parliamentary pay.

Look at it this way — there's got to be something in it for you, too, if you put your mind to it.

Tie really cash in on the combined parliamentary pay — including that $7,500 windfall every MP gains in the backdating of the raise to last summer's election day — it's best you keep it a secret.

The Chamber of Commerce, the Ladies' Aid, the Boy Scouts, the Crippled Children, the Cancer Society, the Heart Foundation, the Good Conduct Institute — to any civic, regional, provincial or even national organization that annually makes a public appeal for funds.

Your friendly neighborhood MP always has been a mark. He can't say no if he's a mentally counting votes for the next election, basking on returning to the good green (for money) fields of Ottawa.

His well-developed sense of political self-preservation almost certainly would compel an all but automatic "yes, of course," if not an entirely enthusiastic "how much do you need?"

Thus there's another consideration — principle.

For years — ever since that last raise back in 1970, from $18,000 to $28,000 including those eye-boggling tax-free expenses — and even long before that, the MP, along with Senators, have lamented the high cost of contributions.

And it is true: the cost of contributing to causes and campaigns of worthy causes seems uncommonly high.

The MP, simply because of who he is — the guy dependent for his job on the favor of you and your friends and neighbors — usually heads the list of "special contributors" when the hat is passed around the rolls.

So now he's getting more, expect him to give more.

Since he is troubled by something of a guilty conscience in this latest, biggest and best parliamentary payout, he should feel almost compelled to share the wealth more generously.

Algonquin Park Motor Ban Said Likely to Be Lifted

BANCROFT — Definitive attitudes about the implementation of the Algonquin Master Plan were expressed by Hastings MPP Clarke T. Rollins and Dave Hobson, riding liberal candidate at a meeting of the Bancroft Fish and Game Club last week.

The portion of the plan under discussion was the use of small outboard motors on some of the interior lakes of the park.

The local sportsmen's club has expressed strong objection to the proposal that all outboards be banned from Algonquin, with the exception of Opeongo Lake.

Several briefs have been submitted by the Bancroft Club to Leo Bernier, Minister of Natural Resources, regarding the proposal. Hastings - Peterborough Liberal candidate David Hobson said the present master plan and park policy results from a clash between the urban purists, who expect to use canoes and moccasins and those local sportsmen who love the park as a way of life and a place to fish".

According to Mr Hobson, the voice of the local sportsman is not being heard at Queen's Park.

Mr. Hobson said the Liberal party had not established a policy on the small motor issue but that he personally was in favor of their continued use.

"The use of small motors to get us into the inland lakes will not destroy the environment or destroy the fishing," said Mr. Hobson.

In order to appease our opponents, I propose that we develop in the Bancroft area a number of fish hatcheries in order to restock local lakes and also in Algonquin Park," said Mr. Hobson.

Also speaking on the master plan was Hastings MPP Clarke Rollins, who indicated that he had been working on the issues of the plan for a number of months. "I can accept the wishes and feelings of the people of this area, who are used to make use of Algonquin Park as a way of life."

In announcing the ban on small motors had been lifted for the summer of 1975, Mr. Rollins said "We are trying to find legislation that would be acceptable to all people.

"You're not concerned about keeping the canoers out of the park," said Mr. Rollins. "You only want to make sure that the small motors are left in. Perhaps there is too much input from outside the area coming in and telling us what we should or shouldn't do with Algonquin.

"I have no doubt there will be fishing with small motors in Algonquin in 1976," said Mr. Rollins. "I will say this without any hesitation that if our party is re-elected, the park will be open for boats and small motors in 1976.

"I can't see why we can't have a working arrangement with all groups in the park," said the present MPP. "I'm sure you people don't want to do anything to the detriment of another group."

Mr. Rollins cited Ministry of Natural Resources figures for 1973 that indicated that 17 percent of the people using the park that year had watercraft of some sort. Of these campers, six percent brought boats and motors and nine per cent used canoes.

According to John Struik of the Bancroft Fish and Game Club, Mr. Rollins' efforts on behalf of the club had resulted in several meetings with Mr. Bernier as well as the appointment of his executive assistant, Charles Hunt to the Ontario Provincial Parks Council.

Motors Supported

Hastings MPP Clarke Rollins at a meeting of the Bancroft Fish and Game Club last week, gave his support to permitting small fishing motors in Algonquin Provincial Park. Proposed planning for the park would ban the use of any boat motors in the conservation reserve.

Main Dish Salads Are a Cool Treat in the Heat

At this time of year, there's a gap between a need for cool, prepare-ahead light meals and the bounties of good salad ingredients from the garden. It's warm enough to want a salad but still too early for fresh vegetables.

¼ cup chopped celery
two tbsp chopped onions
two tbsp chopped green pepper
¼ tsp salt

two cups torn lettuce
½ cup cheese in strips
6½ oz drained flaked tuna

Combine all ingredients and toss gently. Chill thoroughly before serving. Serves six servings.

one green pepper, cut in 1 inch squares
½ Spanish onion, thinly sliced one stalk celery, cut diagonally six radishes, thinly sliced
one dill pickle, sliced
garnish: 1 hard-cooked egg

In a bowl, make salad dressing ingredients. Add prepared meat and vegetables. Toss to combine. Chill for 6 hours. Tiv serve, arrange lettuce leaves on 6 salad plates and divide salad. Garnish each with a slice of egg and fresh parsley, if desired. Serves six.

Sunshine Salmon Salad

Flexibility the Key to Life If You're a Politician's Wife

EDMONTON (CP) — The secret to being a politician's wife is "to be flexible," says Jeanne Lougheed.

"You can't hope to have a rigid routine. You have to be willing to pack a suitcase and go somewhere and not worry whether you've finished the laundry."

The wife of Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed did just that a few days after Valentine's Day, when her husband launched an election campaign that resulted in a smashing victory. The Progressive Conservatives captured 69 of 75 seats in the legislature.

She enjoys the political events she is drawn into as the premier's wife—door-to-door campaigning, "No two are alike. . . . No two districts are alike. . . . It's fun"—but is glad to be home again.

Home is three children—the Loughe ds' twins, Peter and Stephen, 20, is studying commerce at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont.—a family dog, Verushka, and comfortable rooms which Mrs. Lougheed decorated with the talent of her own rich imagination.

She plans to get busy working up her summer wardrobe—"I just go crazy when I get into a fabric shop. . . . I have to go at the blank."

Mrs. Lougheed is also back to cooking although her husband's addition to plain meat dishes feels her desire to try more exotic fare. She had better luck converting the premier from the non-stop Bruce Goodman records he favored when she married him 23 years ago to classical music.

In the last six weeks of campaigning, Mrs. Lougheed had a permanent babysitter-cum-housekeeper living in. Now, she would prefer to have the house to herself and wants her two teen-aged daughters to learn how to cook—that's a lot easier to do when they think they're helping Mummy—but finding a reliable babysitter is a problem when she has to take off somewhere at a moment's notice.

She feels it's her duty to keep the household running smoothly so as to avoid being a burden to the premier.

"I suppose I'm supportive. One thing, politics is people. Because it isn't technical or legal conversation, it isn't something that a woman is left out of."

Mrs. Lougheed said she doesn't have strong views on federal politics but isn't frightened by the prospect of seeing some day being the wife of the prime minister—"I've had good training."

She is not one to take herself too seriously.

"You can become a bit stiff and pompous if you let that. Then you're not flexible.

"When people say, Mr. Premier, I don't look up in surprise. Oh, that's Peter they're talking about. That's the way it is at home.

"We're a very talkative family."

But she is a frequent subject at the dinner table and Mrs. Lougheed considers it healthy for all concerned.

Mr. Lougheed imparts his views: Jeanne, 21, plays basketball and the flute as well as the piano, Stephen has and Andrew, 15, who plays the flute and a reliable ballet, adds

"Sometimes Joey (9) will dig in his ear and say, 'I think it's my turn.

"Daddy really gets teased. The kids get a big kick out of his lack of domesticity. He's not mechanically adept at all. He even has trouble changing a light bulb."

Mrs. Lougheed discusses her husband in glowing terms.

"When he walks in the door at night, energy seems to walk in with him. It's like opening up the door and letting the sunshine in."

She doesn't feel swamped by the strength of his personality. "I'm little but I'm stronger through the appreciation and respect that he gives me."

The move to Edmonton from Calgary five years ago when her husband became Alberta's first Progressive Conservative premier meant that she had to give up the volunteer work she was doing there. And the constant erosion of their lives in politics has kept her from pursuing university courses she would like to have taken.

Having studied music in her youth and participated in opera and musicals at University of Alberta, she has involved herself in the Edmonton Opera Society. She would like to do other things but being the premier's wife has held her back.

"I don't want one group to think that I'm favoring the other. . . .

But she has her own hobbies and, now that the children are grown up, "I think I'll branch out a bit."

She plans to take private painting lessons and is considering studying interior design and eventually setting up her own studio.

"I've always felt it was extremely important to maintain your own interests."

In order to give to your husband and to your family, you have to have something within yourself to give. And you only have yourself. You have to be a little bit selfish to remain yourself."

Rare Moment of Relaxation

The secret to being a politician's wife is "to be flexible," says Jeanne Lougheed, wife of Alberta premier Peter Lougheed. "You can't hope to have a rigid routine. You have to be willing to pack a suitcase and go somewhere and not worry whether you've finished the laundry." Mrs. Lougheed, shown with son Joey, accompanied her husband on his latest election campaign that resulted in the Progressive Conservatives capturing 69 of 75 seats in the Alberta legislature.

Doris Clark

She's Growing Up Gracefully

Recently, a certain 16-year-old, let's call her Marjorie, gave a party, the grand arrivals, kept their first and last names in her head, introduced boys to girls, and then found places for them to sit. She hoped to get conversations rolling. There were no awkward pauses. Soon all of the young folks were comfortably chatting and laughing — the wheelmomsy, in case you've forgotten what it was like in this age group.

How did Marjorie do? Her mother could answer that. It didn't happen overnight. It took long training and patience — and some discipline. But now Marjorie is a poised, young lady and she thinks her mother is tops.

Contrast this with the teenager who, in his ignorance, introduced a girl friend to a visiting relative as his flat.

"This is my aunt!" (No names mentioned at all.) Or who acknowledges an introduction with "Hi!"

Dear Doris: I need your help in writing a letter — to my 22-year-old grandson who was married last week in a distant city to a fine girl.

Frank has always been dear to me. I want him and his wife to know how happy I am for them and that I would like to get to know her.

When one of my own daughters was to be married she told me, "Mother, I'm just going to try to make my husband happy, then I know I'll be happy too." I feel she has accomplished this.

I am 80 years of age and finding writing letters more difficult, so I am grateful to know I can ask for your help.

Grandmother.

Dear Grandmother: Yet your letter to me was so smooth and friendly. Surely you can say to Frank what you have written to me — or do you get self-conscious when you write to him?

You may be sure he looks forward to that letter from his loving grandmother. Project yourself into his shoes for words from you, and you will lose your self-consciousness.

Tell Frank how dear he always has been to you and what wonderful things you have heard about his bride. That you look forward to meeting her. That you are happy for them, and wish them all the best in the life ahead of them.

Ann Landers

Teaching Sunday School 'Sentence' for Murderer

Dear Ann Landers: If someone wrote and asked what you thought about a judge who sentenced a 23-year-old woman convicted of killing her husband by slashing his throat with a carving knife to teach Sunday School for five years — what would you say?

I'll bet you'd assume the letter was written by a Yale student and throw it in the wastebasket. Well, here's the clipping. You can see that this sentence was actually pronounced by a Dade County, Florida, circuit judge. The woman had previously been arrested for prostitution and the possession of marijuana. The judge said, "It's a difficult task to get people to teach Sunday school. It's something worth while in my book." Will you comment, please? I am—Tongue Tied and Outraged

Dear T. T. and O.: So am I. If I had not seen the newspaper clipping, I wouldn't have believed it. Thanks for proving again that truth is stranger than fiction.

Dear Ann Landers: Maybe you've given the answer to my question dozens of times, and I never paid any attention to it because it simply didn't seem to affect me.

But now I'm having sleepless nights and I need to know something.

When a mother suspects her son is "on something," how can she tell for sure if her hunch is right? If it is right, how can she help him?

In this case, the son is not a minor, he doesn't live at home, and he avoids his father and me as much as possible. I've tried to talk to him to learn what's bothering him but he is very uncommunicative.

I might be mistaken, Ann, but he has undergone such a complete personality change—he isn't the same kid we once knew. Help us, please.—C. M.

Dear C. M.: Personality changes can be caused by something other than drugs—an organic problem, for example. There's no way an observer can tell for sure whether someone is "on something."

Your son should see a doctor at once for a complete physical checkup, and this is what you ought to suggest. If he turns you out, you can do nothing but let him know you're there if he needs you. Good luck, dear.

Working Women: Older is Better

CHICAGO (AP)—Older is better,

"and particularly so in the case of many of the 14.68 million American working women 40 years of age or older," says the financial services firm of Dreyfus Inc., in a study of the work history of women.

In 1974, a shade under 60 per cent of all working women in the United States were over 40, "proving that older women are not an endangered species," the study says.

Almost 27 per cent of those involved in the study—more than 1,400 working women over 40—have worked for the same employer at least three years. Twenty per cent worked for the same boss three to five years and nine per cent for 20 years or more.

"The unemployment rate for working women 40 or over in 1974 was just slightly more than half of the rate for all out-of-work women under 40," year-the study says.

"Employers today are more aware of the value of older women's dependability and serious attitudes are as sought after as experience."

Older women had more time to devote to their work, were more conscientious and settled. Many had grown children, therefore, fewer distractions.

Some 47.1 per cent of the women surveyed were married, 24.4 per cent single, 17.5 per cent divorced, 11 per cent widows. Slightly more than 41 per cent had children.

Eleven per cent held college degrees. Median income for a woman over 40 with some college study was $8,700 in 1974; those with elementary school education earned a median of $4,500. Only two per cent of the women earned $15,000 or more.

Film Depicts Her Story

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian film producer Beryl Fox has been work on a 26-minute film for International Women's Year which will be a documentary on the history of women's rights in Canada. It is being sponsored by the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario.

Still Waiting

TORONTO (CP) — Angela Kondrak, the teen-age girl who came within a mile of swimming Lake Ontario last summer, still has not received all the gifts she was promised after her feat. The unkept promises offered a bull calf—a trip to Acapulco, a sports jacket, dishes for the family house and wallpaper.

The Search Is On

TORONTO (CP) — Approximately 25 Ontario women will be honored this fall as the province's outstanding women to mark International Women's Year. The search for nominations is being conducted by Ontario government which is asking for names of women who have contributed to the cultural, social, educational or public life of the province.

CN Spokesman Expects 100 Per Cent Passenger Subsidy

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Keith Hunt, Canadian National Railways vice-president for the Great Lakes Region, said in Belleville Tuesday, his company anticipates a major federal policy statement within six months aimed at 100 per cent subsidization of passenger rail travel.

The one thing we have proved in transporting passengers is the higher the volume the higher the loss," said Mr. Hunt, speaking at a meeting of the Quinte Chamber of Commerce.

Before the meeting during no interview, he said, because the government's commitment to eanger service necessary and because passenger service is a loaby proposition, "we think it would be equitable that the loss be subsidized 100 per cent by the federal government."

At present the government picks up 80 per cent of the loss which in 1974 totalled $140 million.

"On an annual basis, no passenger train in Canada or in the world for that matter makes money," interved Mr. Hunt.

He said the federal government is expected to make a major national transport policy statement and that either in this statement or within the next six months, the 100 per cent subsidy will be recognized."

"Depending on the deficit and the government's 80 per cent subsidy, Mr. Hunt said "we have lots of money, I don't think we should be hurt that badly financially."

An annual report on Canadian National Railways for 1974 shows the company completing the year with a deficit of $27.7 million — more than $15 million more than for the previous year.

Mr. Hunt said the national economy is in a slump and that it is affecting the railway industry. He predicted the number of "sections" will continue through the remainder of the year and possibly the first quarter of 1975.

He said the company has said CN is "sharpening up" on the staff count with layoffs and supervisory cuts being made across the country, reviewing freight rates to increase revenues, approving office and waiting for the increased subsidy with all the three areas expected to ease the deficit.

Because of the downward trend in the economy, Mr. Hunt said CN has seen a four per cent decrease in business in the last three months as compared to company projections.

A major item of his address was the brief mention of main line expansion between Toronto and Montreal.

He said more lines could be laid besides the existing two lines and this expansion "is envisaged as taking place in the next decade and would enable the handling of a higher volume of high speed traffic."

Mr. Hunt said CN is getting past the point of buying more cars and bigger engines and now must consider enlargement of facilities itself.

"Rail building as major enterprise has been dormant for the past 50 year," said Mr. Hunt.

"There will be major rail expansion in the next five years with the mountain region and western Canada being the priorities," said Mr. Hunt.

Now It's Home Chores

After more than three years in Laos working for international development agencies, Robert Burr, 31, is back again in his native Belleville. His current activity fits more placid surroundings of home town . . . he's painting family house.

Belleville Man Recalls Laotian Experiences

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Robert Burr is home again.

After several years with international development agencies in Laos he's now engaged in the more prosaic pursuit of painting the family home on Foster Ave.

It gives him time not only to ponder his experiences but the coincidental timeliness of his own departure.

This week, Robert picked up a newspaper to discover the United Nations official assigned to replace him in Laos was under house arrest.

Robert doubts if the official is in "any immediate danger."

But the happening was one of the personal sequels to broader events as the southeast Asian nation adjusts — often forcefully — its political structure.

The situation has involved royalist forces with the leftist Pathet Lao.

The 31-year-old native Belleville lad takes a philosophical stance on the events. What's happening is a corner of the world daily watched by Westerners is that the Pathet Lao are militarily in the ascendancy. They're now adjusting the political situation to military reality.

These and other impressions are the result of fairly-lengthy first-hand experience for Robert.

He was studying post-graduate English when his interest in Buddhist culture — and in the wars and disputes wracking South Vietnam and its neighbors — led him to sign up for a year with a voluntary service group.

The first year he taught English; the second, with another voluntary agency, he was involved in a farmers' training centre. Last year, on a UN contract he went to his final assignment — a handicraft project, mainly involving refugees in the Laotian town of Souvanna Khet.

He quartered Souvanna Khet in March, making it out of troubled Laos by Royal Air Force plane since the airport at Phnom Penh — the capital — was under rocket siege.

He is not surprised at the turn of events involving refugees in Southeast Asia.

During his travels he always felt "there was quite a feeling of under-the-surface resentment against a foreign presence. It took the "fall of South Vietnam to bring it out into the open."

The Laotians, much as they dislike Americans, also are strongly anti-Vietnamese.

Yet, present conditions may not be conducive to any for-eigners working effectively in projects like those Robert was engaged in in Souvanna Khet, he believes.

However, the development work he and others helped direct will still produce benefits "no matter who takes over."

And whatever power eventually takes over in that part of Asia, there is one aspect of life that should remain untouched — one which the Bellevilian came to respect.

The village culture in which the countryside's lifestyle hinges is still viable, and more complex than appreciated, he says. So much so, its benefits are being re-appraised by anthropologists.

But village life could be destroyed by Communist or Western-style philosophies geared to industrialization, he believes.

Sidney Tax Rate Up

Sidney Township council Tuesday night approved its current budget requiring an average tax hike of about 14.5 mills for township residents this year.

Public school supporters will feel a 13.5 mill hike which will mean an additional $12.36 for each $1,000 of assessment. With average assessment set at $2,000, the increase in taxes this year will be approximately $46.

Separate school supporters will pay about four more in taxes this year — the result of a 16.3 mill hike.

Due to unusually large increases in county and school board levies, the township actually lowered its general levy (the third component which makes up the mill rate) to keep the increase to the minimum.

Stained Glass Panes Broken

City police are investigating an act of vandalism at Holy Trinity Lutheran Church at 118 Victoria Ave., which occurred between noon Sunday and 4 p.m. Monday.

A police spokesman said today four panes of stained glass were broken. Value was estimated at $20.

Potter Property Input Requested

All interested groups will be asked for comment when the time comes for discussions on development of the Potter Property.

The suggestion was recommended — and approved — at a meeting of the city's parks board and recreation arena committee Tuesday.

Up for approval at the board were tentative terms of reference for proposed development of the big recreation area west of Belleville.

The terms include analysis for the area's characteristics and potentials. They also call for recommendation on ultimate development.

There also is to be co-ordination of ideas between the Moira River Conservation Authority, the city's and Sidney township's parks boards.

Development is also to be tied in with the current Bay of Quinte Study now underway for the Authority.

The park's board staff recommended that when the time comes for it to make submissions other "interested agencies" including recreation and junior organizations and the Quinte Exhibition and Racetrack be requested to comment.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded last night to alarm box for assistance during the 24-hour period ended at 8 a.m. today.

Tuesday, May 20, 8:55 p.m. — decrease in water pressure caused alarm malfunction — Regency Apartments at 75 Victoria Ave.

Wednesday, May 21, 2:04 a.m. — fire extensively damaged third floor attic and roof of building at 88 Station St., causing damage to second floor apartment and to dry cleaning establishment and carpet sales shop on first floor, minimum damage estimated at $20,000, cause unknown.

Pools Must Be Fenced

Thurlow Township council Tuesday approved a bylaw calling for fencing of swimming pools in the township.

Pools must now be fenced by galvanized steel wire or wooden structures to a height not less than four feet.

From now on township permit will also be required for pool excavations.

The measure does not apply to farm ponds used for agricultural purposes.

There is renewed official unanimous cover lack of definite plans for more arena facilities in Belleville.

The anxiety surfaced Tuesday at a meeting of city hall committees directly involved with such projects.

Such was the degree of concern that members of both groups — the parks board and the recreation-arena committee — agreed on a course of action: They will investigate the possibility of reintroducing construction of a second arena in the city's five-year recreation capital works budget in 1976.

Such a project — for Belleville's east end — was dropped from capital works budgeting some time ago. It would have given the city a third arena facility — in addition to the downtown Memorial Arena and the west end Dick Ellis Rink.

The committee members decided on their action in a debate that also saw concern expressed over lack of any concrete indication of progress on creation of the long-awaited Belleville Yardmen's sports complex on Cannifton Road in northeast Belleville.

Aside from local needs, a possible new pressure is emerging in the background. The city already is sounding out chances of playing host in its 1978 centennial year to the winter or summer Canada games. This might put an added, if temporary, premium on sports facilities.

The idea was first broached by city councillor George Zegouras, recreation chairman, who believed recreation authorities should be concerned about the arena is not in five-year works budget.

As he said, there has been no apparent action on the Yardmen's facility.

Ald. Zegouras proposed a meeting with the yardmen organization to discuss "where they're going." There was "definite demand" for another arena project in Belleville, he said.

But city manager Wilbur Pursell said remaining needed to start the Yardmen's complex had not yet received provincial government sanction.

As a result, said Ald. Paul Russell, parks chairman, no building permit could be issued for the development.

The city already has removed the east end project from its works budget because — among other reasons — it found it could not be built for the $164,000 originally estimated.

"I'm not sure council would have voted any differently if the yardmen were going ahead or not," he said.

Ald. Jean Smith said council had believe another sports facility was needed in the city. But "the back of our minds we felt the Yardmen were going ahead."

"People in the community, the citizens, want to know where this (Yardmen's) complex is going," added Ald. Zegouras.

But, cautioned Ald. Wally Dever, regardless of any other reasons, "there's a definite need for another arena in the city.

"I don't think we should be fooling around waiting to see what the Yardmen do," he added, calling for the committee to investigate what steps could be taken toward another arena.

Ald. Russell agreed.

"No matter what the Yardmen do, I think we should consider another arena for the (recreation capital works budget," he added.

Thurlow Budget Is Highest Ever

Thurlow Township Tuesday night approved a budget of $1,321,000 — the highest ever for the municipality and boosting most of its residential-farm tax rate by 13 mills.

Inflation, higher waste disposal and county school board costs were among major pressures demanding the bigger budget, said Clare B. Horton, township clerk treasurer.

On an average assessment of $3,000, the new levy will mean about an extra $40. he estimated.

A mill in Thurlow raises $7,000.

Of the total budget revenue almost $509,800 must be raised by taxation.

The general township rate is up to 21.15 mills from 17.78 mills on residential and farm assessment and to 25.31 from 19.80 for commercial and industrial.

Major expenditures earmarked for the year are education $208,000 and public works ($215,650). Some $208,500 of the public works budget is for roads.

Assessment in the township has dropped in the past year with the shutdown of the big Canada Cement — now complant at Point Anne now undergoing demolition.

Total mill rates with the increases in brackets are as follows:

Residential-farm Public school, 122.16 mills (13.73); separate school 121.61 (11.9). Commercial - industrial — Public school, 138.38 (15.31); separate school 137.81 (13.61).

The only decrease was a minor one — the county rate, the amount paid to Hastings County government was slightly lower on residential-farm assessment at 21.03 compared to 22.27 in 1974.

Reason for the lower county levy was the drop in Thurlow's assessment.

Other expenditures: General government, $69,500; Pensions and property protection, $48,300; Sanitation and waste, $19,194; Planning and development, $16,384.

Station St. Fire Damage Extensive

Fire of undetermined cause extensively damaged the third floor of a building at 88 Station St. Tuesday night.

Chief Leo Culhane of the city fire department said the fire began on a stairway leading to the third floor, an attic which was undergoing renovation.

He said evidence shows the fire was burning for about one-and-a-half or two hours before the alarm was raised at 2.04 a.m. This is indicated by the amount of burning of the joists in the attic, he added.

There was extensive water damage to the second floor, a vacant apartment and the first floor which housed Tip Top Dry Cleaners Belleville Ltd., Tip Top Dry Cleaning and Coin Laundry Village and Tip Top Dry Cleaning and Service.

Chief Culhane said most of the water damage was to dry cleaned clothes and carpets. He said a minor damage estimate would be between $25,000-$25,000 but could be higher depending on the amount of damage to the carpets.

TAKE 'M.

The blaze was first spotted by a youth walking along Station St. who attempted to rouse residents in the area but was unable to do so. He kicked in an entrance to the building and with the aid of a neighboring youth ran upstairs to investigate whether there were people inside. Flames forced them back but fortunately there was no one there.

The building is owned by Earl Allin of RR 1, Cherry Valley.

Rollins Only PC Candidate

MADOC — As yet no other candidates have officially declared themselves to oppose Tory incumbent Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, at tonight's convention here.

Mr. Rollins has represented Hastings in the Legislature since 1959 and early declared his candidacy bid for the new riding of Tweed — Madoc — Peterborough.

Riding president Ken Smith said today he had as yet heard of no other candidates in the field.

Seminar Off

Due to low response from the invited employers to the one-day seminar on Training being offered by the Belleville and District Employment Committee, the seminar for Thursday, May 22, has been postponed until a date in October.

Truck, Car Collide

PICTON — Two motorists escaped injury early Tuesday in a collision on Main St. West near the Prince Edward Church.

The accident occurred when a pickup truck, driven by Ken Kimball, 22, of RR 2 Sophiasburg, was in collision with a car driven by David Cook, 20, of Dufferin St. Belleville.

Total damage was estimated at $400 in the collision which occurred at 2.15 a.m.

Cleanest Motor in Town

Jacob Rozema, from Pembroke, shows off his 283-cubic inch engine in a custom built 1953 Chevrolet last weekend at the Belleville Road Angels Custom Car Club exhibition. Jacob says he spends three hours a week polishing and cleaning the car.

School Board Questions Community School Use

Claiming to be Ontario's most liberal board toward community use of schools, the Hastings and Prince Edward Separate School Board now wonders whether it has gone too far and can it reverse its policy.

The policy committee, headed by chairman Paul Fleming, recommended Tuesday night the board amend its policy on community use of schools to prohibit "the use of schools during Christmas or winter breaks, or on the eve or day of a holiday" — with the exception of educational or religious use.

Earlier the committee rejected a move to increase rental fees from $20 to $100 per day and prohibit alcoholic beverages at school social functions. Both these alternatives were rejected at committee level.

During discussion it came to light that the major reason for the amendment was the need to cut out a loophole indicated on a survey that parents not want to work New Year's Eve. In some cases like Tweed, the local school board officially, the only hall large enough to hold dances or celebrations.

Maynooth trustee Rev. L. P. Fleming, reluctantly agreed "a whole community shouldn't suffer because of caretakers".

Father Fleming said he doesn't allow caretakers to decide what is best of the ministry of education and of the trustees, the elected representatives of the board.

Trustee Cassetti suggested that a cleaning service could be hired to replace the workers if they did not want to work. Belleville trustee Mary Carville also wondered if the board was in charge of janitors or vice versa.

Mr. Fleming claimed the policy committee could not find a solution to the problem. Trustees objected to entire responsibility suffering for a few problem areas.

Ald. Sheridan said the board has issued about 200 permits since January. He said there really shouldn't be any trouble directly affected by this new amendment.

Board chairman Austin Scott urged the board to refer the matter back to the policy committee for further study. He suggested that alternative rental arrangements could be found.

Father Cassetti suggested that a cleaning service could be hired to replace the workers if they did not want to work. Belleville trustee Mary Carville also wondered if the board was in charge of janitors or vice versa.

Mr. Fleming claimed the policy committee could not find a solution to the problem. Trustees objected to entire responsibility suffering for a few problem areas.

Right to Challenge Censorship Upheld

OTTAWA (CP) — Reporter Gerard McNeil said Tuesday he will return to Nova Scotia to pursue his challenge of the province's movie censorship law.

In an unanimous judgment earlier in the day, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled that the former Dartmouth, N.S., newspaper editor has the right to question whether Nova Scotia went beyond its powers in enacting the law.

Mr. McNeil contends the provincial law is criminal law because it imposes penalties and therefore is within federal, not provincial, jurisdiction.

Should his challenge succeed, movie censorship boards across Canada also could be struck down.

Chief Justice Bora Laskin, who wrote the high court's judgment, said Mr. McNeil had raised "a serious substantial constitutional issue" and that lawyers for N.S., Ontario, Alberta and Saskatchewan who opposed him at the Supreme Court hearing in late April had not disputed this.

The chief justice dismissed Nova Scotia's argument that only those directly affected by the law—namely theatre owners, movie exchanges and industry employees—could take the provincial board of censors to court.

Chief Justice Laskin said there was public interest in the wide powers given the censor board "in determining what members of the public may view in theatres or other places of public entertainment."

The chief justice also said there appeared no other way for the public interest in the matter to come before the courts without allowing Mr. McNeil the right to challenge the movie censorship law.

Mr. McNeil, now a reporter on the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press, was editor of a weekly paper in Dartmouth when the board of censors banned the showing of Last Tango in Paris.

After several unsuccessful attempts to have the board review or explain its decision, he started a court case challenging the validity of the law.

Dief Calls For Protest

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said Tuesday that Canada should lodge a strong protest with Jamaica over remarks by its high commissioner to Canada.

He said in the Commons that the high commissioner, W. C. Isaac, has accused some members of the Metropolitan Toronto police force of being "extremely racist, uncultured and inhuman."

Crime Rate Increase Brings 'Willing Victims'

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Mounting crime rates in American cities may be producing "a nation of willing victims" but afraid to stand up for their rights, a psychologist says.

Dr. Thomas Moriarty of New York University says his research indicates Americans are tolerating assaults on their rights with increasing passivity.

The research indicates that young Americans are less willing than their elders to resist psychological assaults, possibly because they are continually advised by authorities to avoid potentially dangerous situations.

"In cities where crime is a daily threat, the fear of getting involved in a hassle may have made us unwilling to protect not only the rights of others, but our own as well," Moriarty said, reporting his research in the magazine Psychology Today.

In an interview, Moriarty said he undertook the research "because I've lived in New York City all my life and I've noticed some subtle changes in the way people behave."

Moriarty enlisted 13 students to determine the effect of direct challenges on students and businessmen in the New York area.

"The offences were psychological rather than legal, involving neither life nor property, but one's rights as a human being."

In one of the most direct challenges, adult males entering from a telephone booth in Grand Central Station were approached by a student who asked them whether they had found a lot rising in the booth. When they said they had not, the student would reply:

"Are you sure? Sometimes people pick up things without thinking about it. Would you empty your pockets?"

Although one of the 20 males tested brushed the student aside and said, "You're crazy," 80 per cent obligingly emptied their pockets.

Thinking that the subjects might feel threatened because there was no one else near, Moriarty repeated the experiment, adding another student to the scene to protest, "You have no right to ask that" when his confederate asked the subject to empty his pockets.

But the difference was minimal—75 per cent still emptied their pockets.

Other tests involved playing rock music at top volume during university tests and loud talking in movies and libraries.

In nearly all the tests, some 80 per cent of those involved did not object or act in defence.

For Moriarty, the results showed that "the great majority of subjects proved willing victims when others violated their rights.

"To me, such passivity indicates a serious social problem."

He added: "I believe that many of us have accepted the idea that few things are worth getting into a hassle about, especially with strangers. And I believe this is particularly true of younger people.

"In the laboratory studies, our young men felt the violator's behavior was improper but few were able to explain why. In our field studies, those who defended their rights were generally older."

Asked why the older subjects might be more likely to resist, Moriarty suggested that they remembered an earlier society where such assaults were less common. The steadily advised to avoid difficult situations or escape them by not resisting.

"The successful city dweller must learn to cope with a great many stresses, both physical and psychological. Robberies and muggings occur frequently enough for police departments and newspapers to offer the public advice on how to be a successful (i.e., live) victim.

"Although more and more people have begun carrying defensive weapons and signing up for lessons in various martial forms of self-defence, most experts advise, 'Don't resist.'"

Although resisting assaults may not always be the best answer, Moriarty said, continued surrender to all personal assaults may lead city-dwellers to ask, "Is it worth living at all?"

In his report, Moriarty added that some may feel that "yielding is simply the safest and most rational way to cope with such situations."

But he added: I cannot agree. The quality of life for all of us may be at issue. Laws not enforced cease to be laws and rights not defended may wither away."

St. Mary's Students Labor in Cemetery

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — "What a delightful group of girls, and such hard workers," said W. L. Meyer, superintendent of cemeteries for Kitchener. "You're thrilled with their work at Woodland cemetery and are looking forward to having their assistance next year."

That was one of a sample remark from satisfied clients who used free services from more than 1,000 St. Mary's high school students.

It was the school's second Community Services Day run in conjunction with Education Week.

The cemetery venture was a first for the students.

"It was their idea to work there," said Helen Gelinas, convener of the Community Services Day committee. "We've noticed this year the students are thinking up their own projects and applying to work at them."

The teen-agers not only had a waiting list of clients, there was a wider scope of endeavor being covered this year, with many firsts added. Also, the high school got an assist for the first time.

The Central Mennonite Committee saw a story saying the school was swamped with calls and came to the centre. Twenty of its youth members volunteered to assist with housework.

Some of the high school students joined forces with Grade 6 students of the St. Agatha separate school. The 36 class members went out in teams of two with a St. Mary's high school student leading each team.

Chores included cleaning garages, painting fences, housework and raking yards. Any donations the Grade 6 students received were given to an organization to help the underprivileged.

Hundreds of the high school students piled into cars chauffeured by teachers and volunteer parents and were delivered to various destinations in the area.

Teachers aides' jobs were the most popular, with six students assisting in both public and separate elementary schools.

"Last year there were applications from four public schools, this year there were 15," said Mrs. Gelinas.

Students listed their preference for types of jobs and the organizational committee tried to comply.

Fifty girls signed up to assist in schools for the retarded. Other students provided entertainment at a senior citizen apartment house.

Survey work was another first. One group assisted with a survey of architectural barriers for the physically disabled in neighboring Cambridge, while another group canvassed for a local horticultural society.

Youngsters at local nursery schools and hospitals helped with delight at the antics of high school puppeteers.

"This project serves two purposes," said Mrs. Gelinas. "It gives the students an opportunity to serve others and they learn a lesson in living selfless."

She noted the tremendous community response indicators the "dire need" for assistance.

"We wish we could do it more than once a year but the planning is colossal and the students also need time for academics," Mrs. Gelinas added.

Sister Gemma, principal of the high school, said she believes the project provides the students with a valuable learning experience.

"It is important for a student to grow aware of another dimension of themselves . . . to learn from the gracious people, both old and young, they meet," she said.

"The crippled child, the frail elderly person, enrich others' lives. It's important the teens become aware they gain as much or more than they give," the principal concluded.

A GOOD TIME TO ENJOY FROZEN FOODS

It may sound strange when we're on the threshold of seeing home-grown fruits and vegetables on our markets. But because processors are preparing to make room for new crops, now can be an advantageous time to buy frozen foods. Prices on many are lower than during the past winter, and then they are likely to be in coming months.

If you re-stock your freezer now, rotate supplies so that food longest in your freezer is used first; date all packages; and don't fill the freezer with foods that won't be used in time to leave enough room, if you want to freeze some home-grown favorites later.

All frozen foods are safe indefinitely at zero degrees F. However, the quality of fruit is best if used within 12 or 15 months of freezing; most vegetables 12 months.

Library Corner

THE BARRYMORES — Hollis Alpert.

The saga of the Barrymores begins with the marriage of Maurice Barrymore, a young English actor, to Georgiana Drew, sister of the 19th century master of the Drew family and ends three generations later with the tragic death of Diana, and the faltering career of Barrymore, Jr., in many ways, the story of John and her two brothers and Ethel, Broadway and in Hollywood is the story of the contemporary theatre in the U.S. Drawing on a wealth of previously unused material, the author has created a portrait of the yet unrevealed portrait of the three great stars.

THE KRUPP DYNASTY — Theo Archard.

This story of the Royal House of Belgium, the Coburgs is well presented and highly entertaining. Perhaps little is left of the ordinary child about the throne of Belgium is that it never cannot be so all; created in 1831, and backed by an imported German Prince. It was intended to weld together a new nation of widely disparate and quarrelsome elements. Hardly anyone gave it a chance of survival. It has persisted, up to the present in a era that has seen much more ancient dynasties vanish.

MY FATHER WAS UNCLE WIGGLY — Roger Garis.

Any afternoon, at the big old house in East Orange, New Jersey, the doorbell might ring, and a young visitor timidly inquire whether Uncle Wiggily lived there. As a matter of fact he did, for this was the house, aptly named the fiction factory, where Roger, Howard R. Garis, his wife Lillian and their children, Cleo and Roger, all of whom were enthusiastic writers of immensely popular juvenile books such as the "Bobbsey Twins", "Tom Swift's Adventures" and of course "Uncle Wiggily." Roger Garis tells what life was like in a hard-working, imaginative family in small town America.

THE ARMS OF KRUPP — William Manchester.

The Krupp dynasty lasted for 400 years, ending with the burial of the last of the Krupps on August 3rd, 1967; during that time they armed Germany in three major wars and influenced the course of German and indeed European history for 400 years. Everything about the Krupps was superlative: they were the Reich's first family, and they were Europe's richest and most powerful family. They armed the forces of the Kaiser and of Hitler's "Terror Election" of 1933. They survived a Nuremberg conviction to become the dynamo behind Europe's Common Market.

THE CRISTIANIS — Richard Shepherd.

The dazzling bareback riding and spectacular acrobatics of the Cristianis have thrilled audiences across Europe and America ever since the first Cristiani circus wagon rolled out of its quarters in central Italy almost one hundred years ago.

While there was glamor in the "big top", where daring stunts were widely applauded, there were always the long hours of training, striving for perfection, and the moral and tears that go into the building of the performances. Their family affection and pride in their name and abilities have raised the Cristianis to the heights of bareback artistry and made them what John Hughes has termed a "circus miracle."

Christians Can Live With Unexplained

Written for CP
By PENNY TRACY

The question of whether a Christian can live contentedly with the unexplained is posed, pondered and answered in the affirmative by an Episcopalian priest, Rev. William V. Rauscher, in his new book The Spiritual Frontier.

Writing in collaboration with Rev. Allen Spragett, a United Church clergyman whose work in trade is the unexplained, Canon Rauscher cites numerous paranormal events in the Bible, from Israelites—Elijah whirling, upward in a chariot of fire and Jesus walking on the waters to Jesus communicating with the dead on the Mount of Transfiguration.

The canon's interest in psychic phenomena began when he was a lad and when he went to his first séance in Florence, N.J., he discovered that many of his flock had had unusual psychic or spiritual experiences. In helping them to deal with them, he felt the question, Does life experience help or hinder the individual in living a happy, more fulfilling life?

There are chapters on healing, death, reincarnation, prayer and reincarnation, and one on Arthur Ford, the controversial medium who claimed to be in touch with the late son of Bishop James A. Pike during a séance arranged in Toronto by Spragett several years ago. When Rauscher and Spragett were later doing research for their biography on Ford, they came to the conclusion that he had fib on particular occasions and perhaps on others, cheated in his mediumship.

As regards the Ford séance after Ford claim, that he had managed to contact the spirit of Rosalind Rauscher doubts this as well, and both incidents make fascinating reading.

The Spiritual Frontier, by Canon William V. Rauscher with Allen Spragett; $6.95; 208 pages; Doubleday.

Food Costs Up

The food price index rose to 204.3 for April up 1.8 from the March index of 201.3. Statistics Canada reported May 9, that higher prices for dairy products caused the rise in the food price index. Higher prices for milk, fresh fruits, cereals and bakery products were partly offset by lower beef and sugar prices. (CP Newsmap)

Gambling a Virtue?

OTTAWA (CP) — Gambling once considered a vice, may actually be a virtue, if a study of the psychological makeup of Toronto horse-race fans is any indication.

Igor Kuyszyn, a York University psychologist, says preliminary results of the study indicate these gamblers show less hostility, have lower tension levels and happier home lives than non-gamblers.

In short, gambling might be good for the mental health of society.

The image of the gambler as a masochist punishing himself is being re-examined, Dr. Kuyszyn told a group of faculty and students at Carleton University.

"Through losing, he is supposedly punishing himself for some sexual inadequacy," said Dr. Kuyszyn, himself a blackjack expert and horse race fan. "That's the standard Freudian theory."

He feels, instead, that the average gambler is playing with money, rather than for money, and that gambling provides a way to "confirm our own existence" and worth.

"People don't gamble for profit; they gamble to win money so they can keep on gambling. They gamble for fun."

Professional gambling can be profitable, but it demands concentration and self-control.

"A successful gambler doesn't drink while he's playing. He won't play when he's tired or hung over. He won't play on a full stomach or on drugs. He won't play if he doesn't like the dealer or if there are distractions. And he won't play if he's losing."

Dr. Kuyszyn claims blackjack, because it has been analysed so thoroughly, is the only casino game offering the player a chance scientifically to maintain an advantage over the house for long periods of time.

Computer-produced charts which can be memorized by most people in about eight hours, offer the best game plan for any combination of cards, he said. More specific charts, based on the number of cards already used, are memorized by serious gamblers.

Concentration is important, Dr. Kuyszyn said, and cautions try to distract the gambler, offering drinks, entertainment and even call girls.

"They are very happy to let you do whatever you like in Las Vegas—except win."

Irrigation Equipment Is Plentiful

EDMONTON (CP) — The declines in housing starts and the construction of automobiles has led to a vastly improved supply situation for equipment to irrigate southern Alberta fields for food production.

Len Ring, irrigation systems engineer with the Alberta agriculture department, says last year's extremely bad situation has been reversed with prices relatively stable.

Almost every type of sprinkler equipment is in good supply this year and some machines are being delivered one week after being ordered.

He said the decline in housing starts and car production has released large volumes of aluminum and steel for irrigation equipment manufacturing.

Sabres Come Alive in Steam Bath

BUFFALO (CP) — Thanks to Rene Robert, Buffalo Sabres are back in contention in their Stanley Cup final series against Philadelphia Flyers.

Robert, who had an overtime goal in the Sabres' 4-3 playoff against Montreal Canadiens, got his ninth goal of the playoffs at 12:28 of the first overtime period Tuesday night to give Buffalo a 5-4 win over the Flyers.

Philadelphia's lead in the best-of-seven National Hockey League championship series now goes out to 3-1 with the fourth game here Thursday night.

Danny Gare, Rick Martin, Don Luce and Bill Hajt, were the other Sabres marksmen. Gary Dornhoefer, Don Saleski, Rick MacLeish and Biggie Lesko replied for the Flyers.

Robert's goal ended a game that had stretched almost four hours in the steamy War Memorial Auditorium. Flyer goalie Bernie Parent stopped 14 times late in regular time before Lloyd Gilmour ordered both teams to around to clean the fog which hung low over the hockey surface.

And it was the fog that caused Philadelphia goalie Bernie Parent trouble on the game-winning goal.

The play developed when Gilbert Perreault shot the puck into the Flyers zone to the left of the Philadelphia net. It came out to Robert who drove a shot past Parent who beat the Flyers goalie from a sharp angle.

"I didn't see the puck until it was on Robert's stick," Parent said. "I couldn't follow it coming in from the red line."

"I don't think he was really ready for it," said Robert. "He usually plays well in fog, so I think it went between his legs."

The Sabres dominated play in the second period, even outshooting the Flyers 18-6, but Philadelphia skated off the ice with a 2-2 lead, thanks to some shaky goaltending by Sabres starter Gerry Desjardins.

Dornhoefer opened the scoring in the first minute of play after Bill Barber got the puck off Buffalo defenceman Jerry Korab. Barber's shot hit the Sabres' goalie but ricocheted out to the rebound.

Saleski's first from outside the Buffalo blue line looked an easy shot for Desjardins to handle but he bobbled it.

Gare and Martin scored within a 17-second span to tie it at 2-2 before MacLeish's 18th goal of the season put the Flyers back in front.

Buffalo coach Floyd Smith admitted that Desjardins was "fighting the puck" and agreed when Demarchelier asked to leave the game after the first period. Roger Crozier took over in goal in the second period.

Luce tied the score at 3-3 with 39 seconds gone in the second period, and Rick Dudley and Martin both had chances to put Buffalo ahead before Leach scored at 18:58.

"It was beginning to look like we were getting all the bad breaks," said Martin. "It looked like they were getting all the breaks."

Martin drove Bill Hajt's tying goal at 9:56 of the third period when he broke in on Parent and fired a shot, then fired another off his own rebound. Hajt picked up his second rebound and lifted the puck over the sprawled Parent.

Both teams had good chances to break the tie, before the period ended and shots bounced off goal posts at both ends.

The Sabres had 46 shots on goal while Philadelphia managed 38 at Desjardins and Crozier.

The victory was the first for the Sabres over Philadelphia in 4 games dating back to March 30, 1972. The Flyers had 16 wins and a tie in the 11 previous games.

The victory also enabled Buffalo to extend its home-ice playoff streak to seven wins.

CMJHL Can't Dictate Price Says Campbell

NEW YORK (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, says the new Canadian Major Junior Hockey League (CMJHL) is simply in a position "to dictate the price" for talent going to major professional leagues.

The CMJHL is seeking to impose a scale of charges on the NHL and World Hockey Association in cases where they seek to negotiate with a player before he graduates from the league at age 21.

Campbell said the CMJHL action, taken when the league was formed May 8, was a purely arbitrary and unilateral act" that will not affect "any of us.

"The only person we have an agreement with is the minister of health (Marc Lalonde) to whom we undertook—and we honor the obligation—that we gave—that we would not under any circumstances sign or claim services of a player, who has not exhausted his junior eligibility."

The league, to include existing teams in Quebec, Ontario and the West, set an escalating schedule of fees for signing under-age juniors.

For example, it would charge an NHL or WHA club $3,000 to negotiate with a player who is 19, $10,000 to sign him and $19,000 if he played 25 pro games; for 18-year-olds, $20,000 and $40,000 and $10,000, respectively, and for 18-year-olds, $20,000 to negotiate and $80,000 to sign.

Campbell said the NHL would no longer obliged to pay for amateur training.

How About Those Warriors

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rick Barry pumped in 36 points, hundred two free throws with 26 second left Tuesday night and guided Golden State Warriors rallied for a 92-91 win over Washington Bullets, their second successive triumph in their National Basketball Association final.

The aroused Warriors, who had almost the favored Bullets by coming from 16 points back to win Sunday's opening game did it again, this time fighting from a 15-point second-quarter deficit.

They will try for their third consecutive victory Friday night here at the Cow Palace.

Barry poured in 25 points in the first half but the Warriors trailed 53-46 after being behind 46-31 at one time.

They didn't begin their comeback until early in the third quarter, when they trailed 63-53. They outscored the Bullets 17-5 and finally went ahead for the first time in the game 69-68 with 1:47 to go in the third quarter.

At that point, Charlie Johnson capped a six-point spurt. After a free throw by Washington's Wes Unseld, baskets by Keith Wilkes and Cliff Hagan put the Warriors' lead to 73-68.

Golden State built its advantage to 88-80 late in the fourth period, but the Bullets battled back and finally took the lead 91-90 on a three-point play by Mike Riordan with 1:01 to go.

After both teams missed field goal attempts, Barry drew a long pass from George Johnson and sped down the field where he was pushed hard from behind by Riordan. He then hit the two winning free throws.

Washington then worked the ball around but threw a pass in the final seconds all failed.

Phil Chenier gave the Bullets with 20 points, Riordan finished with 21 and Elvin Hayes scored 15.

Keith Wilkes chipped in with 14 points for the Warriors, 13 of them in the second half, and Charlie Johnson scored 13.

Don Gullett the Remedy For Whatever Ails Torre

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Struggling Joe Torre may have discovered a remedy for his fatigued bats: power of Don Gullett and Cincinnati Reds.

The former National League batting champion, acquired by New York Mets in a major off-season trade, rapped his first single of the season Tuesday night to handle the Mets to a 4-2 triumph over the Reds.

He homered, doubled twice and singled to lift his batting average to .200 and lift the Mets took their sixth victory in seven games.

"I got three hits for the first time this year last week against Gullett, and now four this time," said Torre, who turns 38 in July.

In other National League games, Atlanta Braves beat Montreal Expos 9-4, Chicago Cubs edged Los Angeles Dodgers 1, Houston Astros defeated Philadelphia Phillies 4-2, San Francisco Giants beat Pittsburgh Pirates 13-4 and San Diego Padres beat St. Louis Cardinals 5-2.

A .200 lifetime hitter, Torre "decided to pump more offence into a Met" attack that foundered last year. But instead of instant relief, he was benched for a complete week. "His bad ankle set him back all spring," said manager Yogi Berra.

Torre's two-run homer, his first homer as a Met, led a four-run fifth inning as Mets scoreless duel between Jerry Koosman and Gullett.

Koosman survived control problems to hold his record to 4-1. Gullett, raked for eight hits in five innings, fell to 4-3 in what was his 200th major league pitching appearance.

Bill Buckner produced the hitter and the Cubs scored twice off Don Sutton in the first inning on a run-scoring double by Bill Buckner and an RBI grounder by Adrian Garrett.

Sutton, 7-2, took the loss despite striking out 11 and allowing only five hits.

Houston's Cesar Cedeno walked leading off the fifth inning and came all the way home with the tie-breaking run on Bob Watson's long single off Phils' relief ace Tug McGraw. The Astros added an insurance run on Doug Rader's RBI single.

Ed Halicki, making his first start for Philadelphia, was in being recalled from the minors. Halicki gave up three innings and the Giants backed him with a 14-hit attack that included five runs in the third inning. Halicki struck out eight while Juan Marichal and Willie Montanez homered.

San Diego's Dave Winfield drove in three runs with a double and homer and pitcher Alan Foster, facing his former Cardinal team-mates for the first time, settled down after falling behind 2-0 in the first inning.

Correll Finds Range

ATLANTA (AP) — "I'm not a home-run hitter," says Vic Correll, the Atlanta Braves catcher who modified his swing hoping the National League lead in that department.

"I hit a few in the minors, but never . . . like this." Correll said shortly after smashing a grand-slam homer Tuesday night that helped the Braves to a 9-4 win over Montreal Expos.

It was his eighth homer of the season and his fifth in five games, a stretch during which he has lashed out 10 hits in 18 at-bats.

Correll thus moved into a tie for the homer lead with team-mate Dusty Baker, who delivered a three-run homer in the first inning. Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski and Houston's Cesar Cedeno.

What has turned things around for a guy who one month ago failed to drive in a run when San Diego Padres three times issued an intentional walk to face Correll with the bases loaded?

"Just scared of my job," said Correll.

React to Violence

LONDON (Reuter) — British soccer fans received of violence has caused cancellation of train and subway services to an international soccer match between England and Scotland on Saturday. To control influx of Wembley of 120,000 Scottish fans, who tore chunks of turf from the field in 1967, a wall has been built around the spectator's enclosure.

A Long Time Between Wins

Maybe Now, Hex Gone

BUFFALO (CP) — Buffalo Sabres got rid of a jinx Tuesday night in a 5-4 win over Philadelphia Flyers game delayed 14 times because of fog.

"It breaks the jinx, if there was such a thing," said defenceman Bill Hajt of the Sabres. "We hadn't beaten them in a long time."

"It's a good feeling to get that one, whatever you want to call it, out of the way," said Sabres coach Floyd Smith. "Now, hopefully, we can just keep it going."

The Sabres didn't need a spell to help them; they have Robert. He scored at 12:28 of the first sudden-death overtime for a 3-2 Buffalo win over Philadelphia Flyers in the third game of their National Hockey League Stanley Cup final.

The Flyers, defending cup champions, lead the best-of-seven final 2-1.

It was Buffalo's first victory over Philadelphia since March 28, 1972. During that time, the Sabres lost 10 and tied one in regular-season and playoff action. They also lost four playoff-to-the-Flyers.

The Sabres lead of the series was a steam bath for 12,000 fans and the players. The temperature was 80 at the start of the game was around 30 degrees Celsius.

Players from both benches were called on 14 times to wipe the fog off the glass by by skating around in circles in the Buffalo Memorial Auditorium.

Coach Floyd Smith said the game was a "great win for Buffalo."

Flyers coach Fred Shero said he was "pleased at all but first loss in the series. "You could see that they were going to be a tough team to beat. I've noticed that they checking it somewhat like ours. That's why Buffalo got into first, because of their chalk-board. I not because the Sabres had superior talent or skills. Buffalo is better. The Sabres play the game the way it's supposed to be played."

and overtime periods.

"It was a lucky shot, nothing special," said Hajt of the winning goal. "It went between his legs."

Robert, who now has three game-winning goals in this year's playoffs, said he called to team-mate Gilbert Perreault when the play went into the Flyers' end. "He didn't even look at me. He shot the puck in. He shot it to the opposite side and it came back beautifully."

The Flyers held a 2-2 lead after the first period, a wide-open 20 minutes. Goalie Gerry Desjardins of the Sabres asked Smith to replace him after the first period. Roger Crozier took over for Desjardins for the second period and turned in a strong performance after not having played in more than two weeks.

"It's tough coming off the bench," Smith said. "It's a tough, long sight, especially for a guy who hasn't played that much."

Flyers coach Fred Shero appeared to be pleased at his first loss in the series. "You could see that they were going to be a tough team to beat. I've noticed that they checking it somewhat like ours. That's why Buffalo got into first, because of their chalk-board. I not because the Sabres had superior talent or skills. Buffalo is better. # We'll Be Ready — Drapeau

LAUSSANE, Switzerland (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal today faced the International Olympic Committee (IOC) still maintaining he is confident Montreal will be ready for the 1976 Olympics.

"We will be ready—for sure, we will be ready," Drapeau said after he arrived late Tuesday from Montreal where labor strife has delayed construction on the Olympic facilities.

Drapeau told reporters that the news from Montreal is good and that he expected to have a further report this morning.

"We have solved all our problems in the past," he said. "Now we have maybe a bigger problem but we will solve it, I hope."

Drapeau and the Montreal organizing committee officials were to enter the IOC's closed-door session at 3:30 p.m. (10:30 a.m. EDT) today to begin reporting on the Montreal situation.

Montreal's report was to contain details of progress in the time organization but it was expected the Montreal officials then will face pointed questions from some IOC delegates worried about the delays in construction.

Earlier Tuesday, IOC president Lord Killanin said the Olympics would go on next year, somewhere.

"The Olympics of 1976 cannot be postponed," Killanin said. "The IOC is firm that the athletes must have Olympic opportunities in 1976."

While the IOC has not yet discussed contingency plans for moving the Games elsewhere in the event Montreal defaults, there is continued speculation such a move and Tuesday Mexican Olympic officials announced their country would be willing to play host to the 1976 competition.

"It was a lucky shot, nothing special," said Hajt of the winning goal. "It went between his legs."

Robert, who now has three game-winning goals in this year's playoffs, said he called to team-mate Gilbert Perreault when the play went into the Flyers' end. "He didn't even look at me. He shot the puck in. He shot it to the opposite side and it came back beautifully."

The Flyers held a 2-2 lead after the first period, a wide-open 20 minutes. Goalie Gerry Desjardins of the Sabres asked Smith to replace him after the first period. Roger Crozier took over for Desjardins for the second period and turned in a strong performance after not having played in more than two weeks.

"It's tough coming off the bench," Smith said. "It's a tough, long sight, especially for a guy who hasn't played that much."

Flyers coach Fred Shero appeared to be pleased at his first loss in the series. "You could see that they were going to be a tough team to beat. I've noticed that they checking it somewhat like ours. That's why Buffalo got into first, because of their chalk-board. I not because the Sabres had superior talent or skills. Buffalo is better. The Sabres play the game the way it's supposed to be played."

Boston's Cosy Fenway Park Doesn't Bother Southpaw

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pitcher Bill Lee of Boston Red Sox is one left-hander who isn't intimidated by the cozy left field wall at Boston's Fenway Park.

"I just come to the park everyday and sometimes I have good days and sometimes I have bad days," says Lee. "I feel I can win 90 per cent of my games here."

It was one of those "good days" for the Tuesday night—a two-hit gem that led the Red Sox to a 7-0 win over Oakland A's in an American League baseball game.

None of Oakland's formidable home-run hitters reached the short wall—in fact none even reached second.

"Threw all fastballs with an occasional breaking ball," said Lee, who gave up only a double to Sal Bando and a single to Angel Mangual.

Lee retired the first 13 batters before Mangual singled to the pitch just inside third base. Lee then set down 11 batters in a row before Mangual got a bad-hop single fielding off third base.

Meanwhile, Oakland's Vida Blue was having his usual problems with the Boston Red Sox left-handed Blue, who already has 5-1 record and a 1.00 ERA this year, lost his fourth game against Boston Tuesday night at Fenway Park.

In Tuesday's other American League games, New York Yankees beat Kansas City Royals 6-0.

Milwaukee Brewers played Texas Rangers 7-6 in 10 innings and Minnesota Twins stopped Detroit Tigers 5-3.

A game scheduled between the White Sox and Baltimore Orioles was postponed. Scheduled rains in Cleveland forced Texas Rangers to add a game to their doubleheader with Indians.

Rookie Don Meyer's two-run triple in the seventh inning by Bob Freehan sparked a five-run Detroit sixth inning, defeating the Tigers and Mickey Lolich over Minnesota.

The portly 36-year-old Lolich, who underwent surgery for a once-famous fastball in pick up his first victory since April 8 and improve his record to 1-4.

Hit Dead End on QFL Co-operation Trail

The Quinte Fastball League has, unfortunately, decided not to co-operate with the Belleville McDonald's of the Ontario Fastball League. The QFL put into effect an early signing date specifically designed to eliminate any conflict of interests from the local OFL squad.

"We wanted to work with them," said Doug Adams, general manager of the Macs. "But if they don't want to work with us then I guess we'll just have to do it without them."

Originally the Quinte League had its final signing date coinciding with the Ontario Amateur Softball Association (OASA) closing date. — July 1. But, to avoid their league date ahead to July 1, but to counter-act any problems with the Macs, it introduced a special signing date that states any football player with the McDonalds until June 1, after that, he is not released from the Macs and signed with a QFL club he may not play in the Quinte League.

"The Macs, on the other hand, do not have to establish their final lineup until the 15th of August — two-and-one-half months later.

Because of the early established by the QFL, Brian Gardiner, Dave Lott and Ted Cornell were cut from the Macs roster on the weekend.

"They might have come on and really helped us later in the year," said Adams, "but there's no way I'm going to sign a guy and hold him, knowing that June 1 date. I don't want to see anybody have to sit out a year or ball and if you don't cut them before that there's nowhere else they can play around here except the Macs."

George Rutledge, president of the QFL, said it was necessary for the league to initiate the new cut off date in order to eliminate the Macs from picking and choosing through the regular season.

"We have to protect our leaves as well," said Rutledge. "You can't have their pulled players off teams halfway through the season."

Still, it was cut and dry with the Macs. They could pick up whichever players they wanted. The guy could participate in the club for a few games and if he had it for the OFL they could step in and take him if he didn't? Well, he would be cut. Once he was cut, he was cut for the rest of the year. A player may only sign once with the Macs according to OFL regulations.

This being the first year the club has been in the OFL they would need time to sort out the men from the boys, so to speak, and establish their best roster.

As it stands, Doug Adams doesn't want to see anyone sit out the year and he wants to get the best team together he can. The OFL has simply said you have 14 days from the first of your season to get what you want from us and after that it's either too bad or we will sit back for the player involved.

There is no agreement like that can only be bad news for the football fans of the Bay of Quinte area.

SLICES — The Quinte Fastball League opened its game on another season Monday night — although officials aren't quite sure how long the league has been in operation as the QFL and the Commercial Softball League, 15 years has been suggested as a lice safe number.

This year the QFL faced its first real crisis in that it had, like so many other leagues, difficulty in getting off the ground. It has been the premier league in the area for as many ball seasons as anyone can remember, but this year there was difficulty in scrapping together six clubs to fill the schedule.

Augie Hess's Wear, Trenton, Howard and Robert Printing, Ellis Juniors, Bardex Supply Picton, Gary Rorabeck Real Estate, Wellington, and Ellis Motors comprise the members squads of the loop.

George Rutledge and Bill Sayer share the major duties of the league (president and treasurer) while Harold Bawden, Vern Whalen and Ron Sickers pick up the remainder of executive chores.

A few changes in this year's format have taken place. Gate admissions have been raised from 50 to 75 cents for adults. Children's rates are still 25 cents.

For the six clubs in the QFL the signing date has been moved ahead from July 15 to July 1. Originally the July 15 date co-incided with the Ontario Amateur Softball Association signing date. The league's executive feels it is necessary for teams to establish their rosters before the 15th.

Another change is that this year in league playoffs, the semi-finals will be the best of five series instead of best of seven. It is hoped that by doing this the league will get its own playoffs out of the way of OASA playdowns.

Rusty Soule, head coach of the Ellis Juniors, expected to field rookies with Bob Campbell (left) and Jamie Heidstra, Campbell is a third year player with the Juniors while Heidstra is expected to fill the hole at shortstop in his first season of softball. The Juniors are combining experience with you

Ellis Juniors Shape Up As Strong OASA Contender

The Ellis Juniors look as though they are ready and able to win an Ontario Amateur Softball Associations (OASA) championship this year.

For the past two seasons, the best the Juniors have finished in regards in the province is being beaten out twice in quarter-final action.

This, however, is the year. The local squad is combining the experience of three and four year junior veterans with the talent and ability of the 18 and 19-year-old rookies.

"I'm not going to make any predictions," said head coach, Rusty Soule, "I think we have the makings of a strong contender, but it's too early in the season to tell how strong."

Heading up the list of players with the Juniors are Steve Campbell and Wayne Andrews. Both have four years experience under their belts which should come in handy.

A big plus in the pitching department is John Brockett. The right-hander fired the majority of Juniors' contests last season and will certainly help them in their bid for an OASA title this year.

"If we have anything above the past course of years," said Soule, "it's more balance and more hustle."

Ken Vos, Bob Campbell, Dave Dulux and Jim Richardson are other players returning to the Ellis lineup. Some new faces include Doug Jefferies, a third baseman who played senior ball in Gananoque last year, Dwayne Dentaizer, a second baseman with a big stick, John Heidstra, a short-stop with great hands, Eric Powell, Mike Crawford, Pete and Paul Wilson and Bruce Sutherland. Paul Wilson, right out of midget last year, is one of the greatest young pitching prospects in several years in the city.

Along with Soule, Bob Boyle shares coaching duties with the young squad. Manager Ted Soule reveals not the decision making end of the Juniors' guides.

"We'll probably need a few games to get going," predicted the coach, and he wasn't far wrong as the Juniors dropped the Quinte Fastball Loop-opener to Howard and Robert 19-4. It wasn't their pitching or hitting that stopped them It was their seven errors.

"There are quite a few new faces this year," said Soule, "they'll need time to get used to each other before they start playing like they can."

The Ellis Printing team will be the OASA playoff by attending the Oshawa and Kenmpville tournaments, along with participating in the Quinte League, and they hope to make it to the Markham tourney which is strictly for Junior A ball clubs — Belleville's classification.

Soule figures the addition of the Belleville McDonald's of the Ontario Fastball League to the city's system will help the Ellis Junior team.

"It gives the kids something to shoot for," stated Soule, "it gives them some incentive."

With all this going for them, the Juniors have to be one of the top seeded clubs in Ontario.

Miscues By the Mitful

It was a comedy of errors in the Quinte Fastball League Tuesday night as the Ellis Juniors dropped a 12-4 decision to Howard and Robert Printing and Gary Rorabeck Real Estate, of Wellington, was walloped 21-7 by Picton's Bardex Supply.

Bob Ebbes picked up his second win in as many nights, throwing the first three-and-two-thirds innings of the contest. Ron Hill wacked the last half of the game and the pair combined to fan nine while giving up nine hits and one walk.

John Sprackett was the loser with Paul Wilson toiling the final two innings on the Juniors mound. They struck out three, walked five and gave up eight hits.

Terry Pope topped the H and R attack with three hits while Ron Gateravat and Rick Graham added two each. Steve Campbell had three hits for the Juniors while Sprackett, counted a pair. In all, the losers had seven black marks on their scorecard.

Between nine Rorabeck errors, five walks and 18 hits, Bardex Supply had to thank their wha hands down. Wayne McConnell was the winner with help from Bill Harrison. They fanned four, walked eight and allowed 12 hits.

Gary Kleinsteiber was the loser. He combined with Wayne Casselman and Murray Maracle to fan four, walk five.

Denis Nerun and Al MacDonald crunched out three hits each and Warren Ostrander, Bill Denny, Ted Vallwork and Rick Wallwark collected two safeties apiece.

For Rorabeck, Paul Tettingill, Maracle, Tom Lickers, Lance Brown and Larry Sharpe had two hits each and John Faulkner had a triple.

Swim Team Taking Aim on '76 Olympics

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian swimmers may not be ready to take over the world championships this summer but they are in an excellent position for the 1976 Montreal Olympics, Jim Talbot, one of two national team coaches said Tuesday.

Talbot, a former coach of the Australian national team now takes over the world championships this summer but they are in an excellent position for the 1976 Montreal Olympics, Jim Talbot, one of two national team coaches said Tuesday.

"Canada is really in a first class position right now," he said. The teams are headed by Nancy Garapick of Halifax, backstroke world record holder, and Stephen Pickell of Vancouver, who set two gold medals at the spring nationals that concluded Monday.

"The team is certainly shows promise of being a great Olympic team, particularly in the women's events. Even the men's team, which I'm usually very critical of, has some great potential."

Snelling, who coaches the Canadian Dolphin Swim Club that makes up almost half the national team, said the women's team "is an absolutely fabulous team. It's the best team we've had by a long way."

"I feel we're not going to be quite ready for these world championships, but I prefer it with Bob Smith and Cheryl Gibson that way," adding he thinks Gibson of Edmonton, "We're going to be almost there but not quite" at the Pan Am Games.

Talbot said that besides Garapick and Wendy Cook of Vancouver in the backstroke, Cathy Carr, 200-metre individual medley; Bruce Robertson of Vancouver and Bruce MacDonald of Etobicoke in the breaststroke, Carr in the individual medley events. The Canadian team will perhaps be at its best in the relays, Calif., July 1 for eight days of long-course, short-course training in preparation for the Cali competitions. They will go to Colombia July 12.

Deseronto Entry In Good Form

Deseronto is making its presence felt in the Quinte Hardball Baseball League's early going. A new entry in the loop this season, Deseronto scored its second win in as many outings Wednesday, shading Latta 3-2.

Will Tod, Barbarick and S. Kemp combining pitching talents in a solid four-hitter, the home team held Latta to single runs in the second and sixth innings.

John Hill and Bob Reid split the pitching chore for Latta and turned in a sound performance in defeat. They were touched for only six hits.

Top hitter for the winners was W. Brant with a pair of singles.

Ron Harrings slammed a double for Latta while Wayne Harrison, Reg Abrams and Stan Dalon each collected a single.

Bateman's 2-hitter Subdues CNR Squad

Bateman's two-hit pitching blanked Black Diamond's 6-2 Belleville indoctrinal Softball League win over CNR, Wednesday at Sir MacKenzie Bowell Public School.

Bateman held the Trainmen in check, striking out five and walking three. He surrendered two runs in each of the fourth and sixth innings.

The winners got only five base hits off losing pitcher Perry Soule but they made them count and took advantage of no fewer than seven CNR errors.

Terry Hiddleston stroked a home run to lead the Black Diamond team's 9-hit parade.

Stirling Softball Organized

Last summer the Stirling and District Men's Softball League took a turn for the worse and died. However, the league has been rejuvenated and Tuesday night held its first official doubleheader of the season at Stirling Ball Park.

The only change in the league this year is that there are no import restrictions. In past years the league had established residence rules. This year signing men who open and it seemed to be just what the doctor ordered.

There are eight teams in the loop — Stirling Merchants, Stirling Athletics, Stirling Juvenile, Tucker Farm Supplies, Franklin Coach, Holloway A and B Precast, Springbrook and Trend Sayers Hall.

Doubleheaders will be played every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday at Stirling Park from May 20 to June 29 and every Tuesday and Thursday after the 30th for the remainder of the summer. Game times are 7 and 8.30 p.m.

CFL Favors Weekend Games

HAMILTON (CP) — Canadian Football League general managers Friday reached general agreement Friday on a proposal that the league restrict its schedule to weekend games next year.

The nine team managers met in the first session of the CFL's four-day semi-annual meetings.

The scheduling proposal, which defines weekends as covering Fridays, Saturdays, Sundays and some Mondays, will receive further consideration at the separate Eastern and Western conference meetings today.

Earl Lansford of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, acting as spokesman for the general managers, said he expects the likely draw heavy debate throughout the four days of meetings.

He said the proposal had received "general approval" from most of the nine general managers. The idea was first proposed by Edmonton Eskimos at the CFL annual meeting last February.

Lansford said it was hoped that the weekend scheduling would confirm fans to attending weekend games. Some clubs, such as Hamilton, Toronto, Vancouver and Winnipeg, are worried that they may lose some fans who normally leave town to spend time at their cottages on weekends.

The weekend scheduling would mean the season would have to be extended to 18 weeks. It now takes the league 15 weeks to complete a 16-game schedule.

Cats Sign Wide Receiver

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger-Cats announced Friday the signing of wide receiver Don Hall, 22, giving the Ticats Blue Stars's high-scoring receiver two punch for the 1975 Canadian Football League season.

He joins Rose Bowl-starlet Jim McMillan, a quarterback who was the leading passer in 12 college football last year, and possibly has a shot at being the pro-season carry in St. Catharines Steel mould.

Hall, 6ft. 1in. tall and 185 pounds, produced eight offensive records which still stand at Boise State, including career receptions (231), career yardage (3,142), career touchdowns (46) and a single-game record of 15 catches and 277 yards. Last year he was with Hawaii of the World Football League.

Jim's signing with Hamilton was one of the reasons I signed, Butt said Tuesday. "When you go to a football camp as a rookie, it sure helps to have someone there who knows your style."

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders announced Tuesday the signing of defensive end Jesse O'Neal for the 1975 Canadian Football League season.

Ranked among the top 10 defensive ends in U.S. college football, O'Neal played for Grambling College in Louisiana.

He was the third-round draft choice of Houston Oilers of the National Football League.

At 6ft. 5in. and 255 pounds, O'Neal won honorable mention in several major American football selections last year.

Work with CAHA Is League's Aim

QUEBEC (CP) — The chairman of the recently-formed Canadian Major Junior Hockey League (CMJHL) says the new league hopes to operate "under the umbrella" of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA).

Syd Wilson, owner of Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League and newly-elected chairman of the board of the CMJHL, said Tuesday night the league hopes to solve some of its internal problems "today and if possible reach a working agreement with the CAHA.

Formation of the new league was announced two weeks ago. It incorporates teams from Canada's three major junior leagues, the WCHL, the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series and the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League.

The CMJHL is meeting here in connection with the CAHA's annual meeting.

In addition to the election of Wilson as chairman, Gus Bouyer of the CHA Oshawa General assumes the role of vice-chairman while Paul Dumont of Quebec Remparts of the QMJHL will act as secretary-treasurer.

Earlier, the WCHL had indicated it would withdraw next season from the CAHA, governing body for amateur hockey in Canada. But the OHA and QMJHL had indicated they would remain within the framework of the national body.

Wilson said the CMJHL was meeting with the CAHA in an effort to resolve this and other problems that exist between the two groups. The WCHL had decided to withdraw from the CAHA because the latter would not permit it to cross over branch (provincial) boundaries in its recruitment of players from Tier 2 Junior A clubs in other provinces.

The CAHA had maintained that the major junior teams of the CMJHL could recruit within its own provincial branches.

"In other words, we could not cross over the current branch boundaries," Wilson said. "This problem must be resolved with the CAHA."

The new league features a standard contract that will keep players from being lured away by other leagues.

Wilson said the CMJHL could deal directly with the professional leagues—the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association—in the drafting of players from its leagues by the professionals.

"But we wouldn't forget the CAHA," he said. "Somebody has to run amateur hockey in Canada and that's the job of the CAHA."

The CAHA currently is involved in discussions with the NHL and the WHA and has failed to bring the two leagues to the bargaining table. It had hoped to negotiate a renewal of a pro-am agreement whereby the two leagues paid the CAHA for amateur players drafted to professional ranks.

The CAHA had been without an agreement with the two leagues since the end of the current playing season. The WHA has steadfastly refused to negotiate a new agreement and the NHL has said it will not do so as long as the rival WHA remains.

Last year's draft of amateur players cost the NHL $1,260,000 within the agreement to the WHA was $375,000.

While the NHL paid in full for the players it received, the CAHA is still seeking $180,000 owed by the WHA. If no pro-am agreement is signed, the CAHA stands to lose more than $80,000, the sum it received as its share of the $1.6 million assessed to the professional leagues last year.

Members Honored

QUEBEC (CP) — Two long time members of the Canadian were honored Tuesday night at the association's annual meeting.

Bill Hanley of Toronto and Sa Hoppell of Calgary were given the CAHA meritorious award for service to the association. Hoppard is a past president of the Alberta Amateur Hockey Association while Hanley served 22 years with the Ontario Hockey Association and the CAHA.

Scots Blank Ulster

GLASGOW (Reuter) — Scotland, with goals from Ted Maconagal, Kenny Dalglish and Derek Parlane, scored a 3-0 victory over Northern Ireland in a British soccer championship game Tuesday. Scotland, with the earlier tie, leads the four-team championship on three points after two games. England and Wales, each with a tie, and Northern Ireland, on the strength of an earlier tie, have one point apiece.

Seals Promote Evans

OAKLAND (AP) — California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League promoted Jack Evans, 47, to the team's head coaching job Tuesday. Evans coached the Seals' Salt Lake City club which won the Central Hockey League championship last season. Before that, the former NHL player coached San Diego Gulls of the Western Hockey League for two seasons.

$7 Million for Pele

NEW YORK (AP) — British soccer superstar Pele is said to sign a $7 million contract package with New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League, the New York Post reported in its Tuesday editions.

Quoting a source close to Prof. Julio Mazzei, Pele's personal adviser, the Post said Pele, 34, has agreed to come out of a seven-month retirement and will start with the Cosmos when they meet the Hartford Bicentennials on June 4 in New York.

Bob Beyer, Pele's close friend in the United States, is reported to have talked to Mazzei for 15 minutes Monday by phone from Santos, Brazil, and Mazzei was said to have confirmed reports that Pele reached a settlement with the Cosmos.

"He's coming to play," Beyer told the Post. "The professor told me that as far as he was concerned it's all decided. The financial terms have been settled and he told me that there was only one problem. Bill to be resolved."

The financial terms are rumored to include a $4.5 million three-year contract, plus an agreement whereby the NASL owners will pay the approximately $2.5 million in taxes, as well as such items as a private jet, yacht, home and exclusive Manhattan office suite.

Pele left pro soccer on Oct. 4, 1974, after an 18-year career in which he scored 1,216 goals in 1,253 games. The only player to play on three World Cup winning teams (1958, 1962, and 1970), he refused to postpone his retirement and play in last year's World Cup competition even when asked to do so by former Brazilian President Emilio Garrastazu Medici.

Wilson Sparks Thistles

FERGUS, Ont. (CP) — George Wilson set the pace with five goals as Fergus Thistles overwhelmed Brantford Warriors 20-11 in Ontario Lacrosse Association Major series action Tuesday.

The victory for the Thistles broke a four-way tie for second place and put the winners 10 points behind the first place running Brampton Excelsiors.

Fergus jumped to a 7-1 lead in the first period and led 13-7 after forty minutes of play.

Charlie Pettibich scored four goals for Fergus, Pat Ryan had three and Angus McKay and Jim Cushing scored two apiece. Hughie Sankey went to Rob Douglas, Ted O'Brien, Jim Robinson, Sandy Fleming, Gord England and John Lovell.

Leading the attack for Brantford was Kevin Sweitzer, with five goals, followed by Ken Simpson and Bob Simpson with two apiece. John Chandler and Tony Golias accounted for the other two goals.

Tomahawks Whipped

LONG ISLAND, New York (CP) — Philadelphia Wings defeated Long Island Tomahawks 13-11 in National Lacrosse League action Tuesday.

John Grant of the Wings, who scored one goal, set a record with his 10 assists. The previous mark was nine, held by Hoot Gibson. Other leading scorers for Philadelphia were Jim Wasson, with six goals, and Jim Rickbell with three.

For Long Island, Dave Wilson scored two goals. Long Island outshot Philadelphia 57-50.

Make Trade

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians traded pitchers Jim Perry and Dick Bosman to Oakland A's for pitcher John (Blue Moon) Odom and an unspecified amount of cash, the Indians said Tuesday.

Bernadette Back With New Beliefs

BELFAST (AP) — Bernadette McAliskey is back in politics with a new set of beliefs.

Six years ago, as Bernadette Devlin, she became the youngest woman ever to sit in the British Parliament, elected after leading Roman Catholic civil-rights marchers to the barricades against the Ulster government.

She lost her seat in 1974. Since then she has been reorganizing her political beliefs and raising her three-year-old daughter, born before her marriage to schoolteacher Michael McAliskey.

Last December she formed the Irish Republican Socialist Party with Seamus Costello, who had been expelled from the "Official" Marxist Irish Republican Army. Now Mrs. McAliskey's new party and the Officials are in hot dispute over the future course of troubled Northern Ireland.

Mrs. McAliskey is 28 now but physically the same rocket dynamo who emerged from student politics to international headlines. Only her ideas have changed.

The blazing row with the Officials is basically a row between Stalinism and Trotskyism, she said. Her Irish Republican Socialist Party is on the Trotskyite side.

This is the first time she has identified herself with one political group. Previously she was a political free-lance, working on the assumption that forms of both the latter Official and the nationalist Provisional overthrew the IRA. She ran for Parliament as an independent.

She said she supports the "anti-imperialist" struggle of the Provisionals against the British Army—a struggle in abeyance since the Feb. 4 ceasefire.

But the Provos, she insisted, are devoid of ideas as to what to do once the British leave Northern Ireland.

The Officials she accused of abandoning all struggle. They have observed a ceasefire since May, 1972, believing that armed Irish-British action is counterproductive.

Her analysis is that 800 years of Ireland's national struggle have ended in failure and that something therefore must be wrong in nationalist thinking.

Nor is the mere recent struggle for socialism any nearer success. Therefore, she argues, the answer is to combine nationalist fervor with a fight for leftism.

"The Irish Republican tradition has always embraced different philosophies and thus different tactics," she said.

"As a result, it has always split and it always will split until we get our organization and principles clear from the outset, combining the anti-imperialist and socialist struggles from the start."

Four years ago she was calling herself a Marxist while admitting she had never read Marx. The deficiency has been remedied with surprising results.

"Karl Marx as an individual was a bad-mannered pig. I can't stand self-styled Marxists who think they have to accept not just his ideas but imitate his arrogance and lack of patience.

"Marx is not God. Intellectuals who preach his theses have never tried them out on the ground or at the factory gate. The task is to relate his analysis to what's happening now."

Flexibility is her new watchword.

"I started out from a liberal position, demonstrating and agitating for reform.

"But I discovered the system was incapable of reform. I had to look elsewhere, to read and learn. I may change again. People who never change their politics are either fools or some kind of robot."

Some estimates have put the strength of Mrs. McAliskey's new party at around 700. She said she would be nearer the mark her that she's not worried by numbers. Discipline and political awareness were more important than size.

The party task: "A serious attempt to define Irish republicanism and to relate it to the working-class struggle, which is an international struggle." The party has as yet no formal overseas contacts but would support the Viet Cong, the Palestinians and "those elements working against bureaucracy in the Soviet Union."

She looked back six years to 1969 idealism of the civil rights movement and its fight against bigotry against Roman Catholics in Northern Ireland.

With more than 1,150 dead, has it been worth it?

"Yes," she said. "Some people accused the civil rights movement of moving too fast. Some said it went too slow.

"But the side-effects, the shootings and bombings, would have been the same whichever way we played it.

"The idealism is still there, too. People talk about weariness. But that's a concept I don't believe in. Some will go on fighting."

Her instructions for returning by car to Belfast had an Irish flavor: "Get back to the bottom of the road and there's a signpost for Portadown. Don't do the road in fast. The signpost points the wrong way."

Reunited With Mother

SHEFFIELD, England (CP)—Granville Spencer, who thought his mother died in an air raid here 34 years ago when he was aged three, was faced here living less than 30 miles away. He found she among his father's possessions when he died some years ago and finally traced his 72-year-old mother through other relatives.

Trend to Modernism Disturbs Minister

EDMONTON (CP) — The second system at First Presbyterian Church in downtown Edmonton is turned up full blast at Sunday services for the elderly, who form the bulk of the congregation.

Like many downtown churches, First Presbyterian suffers from a lack of families in the apartment buildings that surround it. Most members of the congregation travel in from the suburbs, loyal to the area they lived in before urban growth demolished the quiet neighborhood of their downtown homes.

Rev. Ed White, who has served the church for 25 years and will retire to a small rural church in British Columbia this summer, hopes they will transfer their "affections and trust" to the new minister.

Prison Stars

DARTMOOR, England (CP)—Men from the prison in this Devon community showed a high level of skill against a York University soccer team recently. But it turned out that three of the prison team, who beat the students 4-0, are former professional footballers who served with famous clubs.

Born in Prince Edward Island 40 years ago and educated at McGill University in Montreal, Dr. White has worked hard for the congregation, congregation and the church, which is approaching its centenary.

A scout troop used to use his farm for a campground. There were girl guides and brownie troops as well as a young people's group.

Only the Women's Missionary Auxiliary is left now and Dr. White is too tired to beat the drums of enthusiasm any longer.

"I've reached the stage when I'm rejoicing to give over the tools to someone else.

"There was a time when I thought I had to upset God's world to put it on an even keel. Now I'm glad I have time to sit back and enjoy it the way God made it."

Dr. White is deeply concerned about the trend towards modernism in the church. "If the church gets through to young people at the expense of the old," the resulting schism would destroy more than it accomplished.

A firm believer in careful research, analysis and democratic discussion, he said young people should listen to their elders who "still have a lot to contribute."

But he granted that old people tend to regard young adults as "still too young to take on responsibility" in church work.

Dr. White said he feels sorry for children brought up in families without religious training. "They just don't seem to have any moorings or anchors.

"In religion there is mystery and pardon, both received and shared. When you leave that out of life, there isn't much to hold

Unorthodox Thinker Unable To Get His Theories Tested

CALGARY (CP) — Despite a letter from his friend Albert Einstein praising his "intuitive power and imagination," 82-year-old Tim Horne has never found a physicist willing to test his scientific theories.

"I have read your two manuscripts with great interest and sincerely admired your inventive power and ingenuity," said a 1943 letter signed A. Einstein.

There is, however, a tragic trend in your struggle. Your natural talent is hampered by a lack of sufficient factual and theoretical knowledge and you have—in the collectual respect—a solitary life, without a friend who has enough knowledge to help you with his understanding."

Knowing this to be true, Mr. Horne, a former photo-holder, boat builder, service station owner, weatherman and inventor, sent letters to universities across Canada to ask them to test his hypotheses.

No one ever did, and today he sits in his apartment "confined ever since I've known him, but I don't understand what he's talking about," said his wife.

Mr. Horne explained that he had written to Einstein about the possibility that the position of the moon has an influence on the solubility of water.

He also experimented with the influence of the moon in a more practical vein — fishing.

At the same time, he wrote an article, The Oxygen Theory of Angling, which was published in the now-defunct Game Trails.

A friend used to rent Mr. Horne's self-made boat to use for fishing on Lake Minnewanka. After he returned from several expeditions without any fish, the friend consulted Mr. Horne.

He confessed to the slide rule and the two men conducted further experiments which culminated in Tim's Timetable for Anglers.

"I gave up fishing at that time," said Mr. Horne. "It was no fun going fishing when you knew they'd be biting."

For a time, he was a meteorologist for one of Calgary's newspapers. A reporter called one day to ask him to predict the weather for the following Wednesday. The official forecast predicted mild weather.

"You'd better have your woollies on," said Mr. Horne.

A blizzard arrived Wednesday and the thermometer sank below zero.

"I got a write-up in Maclean's over that," said Mr. Horne. "God forbid, I had beaten the official weather office at their own game."

Mr. Horne contends that gravity is a result of electrical activity caused by mechanical interaction between the surface of the charged particle and its core.

Perhaps one reason people are unwilling to accept this is that it is too simple and they believe theory must be complicated, he suggested.

Heavy Shovel

This JCB 418 articulated four-wheel drive loading shovel, designed for good handling and stability under difficult conditions, has won a 1975 Design Council Award in England. The five-sided driver's cabin gives excellent all-round visibility. Because steering is by articulation of the chassis, the loading shovel is manoeuvred close in to the front wheels and maintains a constant line with the wheels and the driver to ensure maximum penetration. # Look at Liver.

A basic food as recommended by the Food Prices Review Board Nutritional Food Guide.

Ways with Liver:
Liver is a well known excellent source of iron, vitamin A and a good source of vitamin B. Tender calves liver may be broiled or cooked quickly in very little fat. Liver from more mature animals may need to be braised. One pound of liver serves four people.
There are some helpful hints in preparing liver. Liver will toughen if overcooked OR if liver is cooked on excessively high heat.

Calves or beef liver may be used in any given recipe, adjusting the cooking time. Just test for doneness by pricking with a fork.
Slice liver before cooking, the browning improves the flavour.
Liver blends well with many herbs and spices as well as tangy and sweet and sour sauces.

An easy recipe to prepare Liver.

Liver Loaf (Serves 4)

1 pound beef liver sliced
1½ tbhsp. cooking oil
2 tbhsp. chopped onion

2. Sauté onion in the same fat and add to the liver.
3. Add salt, breadcrumbs, egg, and enough milk to moisten the mixture well and pack firmly into a loaf pan.
4. Bake for 1¼-1½ hours in 350°F. oven. Serve with Spanish Sauce.

To make Spanish Sauce:
1½ cups chopped onion
1½ tbhsp. cooking oil
¾ tbhsp. flour
1½ cups canned tomatoes
seasoning to taste
Optional:

2 tbhsp. chopped green peppers

World Depression Hits Swiss Watch Industry

BIENNE, Switzerland (Reuter — The alarm bells are ringing in Switzerland's famed clock and watch industry.

Switzerland produces more timepieces than any other country in the world and the export-oriented industry is vital to the economy. But it is going through its worst crisis from the Second World War and the depression is seriously worrying bankers and government officials as well as employers and workers.

About half the industry's 70,000 workers have been put on shorter-time work schedules since the start of this year. Profits are tumbling and production has dropped by almost one-third.

At the heart of the trouble is the Swiss franc, which has risen by an average of 40 per cent against other major currencies since fixed parities were abandoned four years ago.

Consequently, the 84 million Swiss timepieces exported each year—85 per cent of total production—are more expensive to buy overseas. Switzerland's 1,300 manufacturing firms are complaining that their competitors, chiefly in the United States, Japan and the Soviet Union, are gaining a lucrative advantage.

"There is no doubt this is the gravest crisis the industry has faced since the war," said Enrico Pievano, economic counsellor at the Bienne-based Swiss Horology Federation.

The problem is, in a sense, symbolic for Switzerland. The small alpine republic, with a population of just over six million, relies on its people's manufacturing skills to make up for a lack of raw materials. Although the watch trade is not the only Swiss industry currently in difficulty, it is generally regarded abroad as the country's standard bearer.

"Traditionally, our watches are regarded as the image of our country, as our visiting card," one executive said. "Now the industry is suffering serious problems and the image is getting faded."

The industry, whose production (more than $1.38 million) last year accounted for 10 per cent of total Swiss exports, is centred in this area around the rolling Jura hills of northwestern Switzerland, close to the French frontier.

Its 70,000 employees represent eight per cent of all Swiss workers. In terms of output it is the third-largest industry after machine tools and chemicals.

Its importance in national economic affairs is consequently vast. Banking powers in Zurich and the problems affecting the watchmakers have been one of the main pressures on the government to take firm action to curb the francs climb.

One businessman here said: "We have poured millions of francs into research to enable us to develop watches accurate to within a few seconds a year. But what is that worth to a buyer trying to fight inflation?"

Hall, the industry's employees' work week has been cut up to 20 per cent since the start of the year when the franc began its steepest climb, particularly against the dollar.

A few hundred employees have been fired this year. The stimulus is getting worse and there is no light at the end of the tunnel," said an official of the Horology Metalworkers' Union.

The consumer prices index rose to 179.8 in April, a rise of .3 from the 179.5 of March, Statistics Canada reported May 9, that higher transit costs accounted for about 40 per cent of the increase in the index in April. (CP Newsmap)

Peach Brandy Production Dying Craft

PRETORIA, South Africa (CP) — A little piece of South African folklore is slowly but surely dying out.

To find it one must travel to the northern provinces.

There a band of 180 people still are licensed to distil mampoer (peach brandy), provided they do not sell it or even give it away.

But when they die their licences, which are not transferable, will die with them.

Hoer Derby in the Western Transvaal, Oom (Uncle) Gert van Niekerk is one of the 3 licence holders.

"I've been making my own mampoer since 1927," he said.

He was hovering busily over the bubbling pulp inside his handsome copper still, preparing his 1975 "vintage".

"In the old days people used to dash a bit of hard fat into the container collecting the mampoer," Oom Gert says. "If the fat rose to the top the liquor was not strong enough. To check, I sometimes take a little in a teaspoon and throw it in the fire under the still. If it burns with bright red flames it is not right, but when it burns with a large blue flame then it's the real McCoy."

Hunger and Reds Combine To Push Peasants to Action

SANTIAGO DO CACEM, Portugal (AP) — The people who used to work Henrique Barreira's cork plantation for $1 a day have taken it away from him and are running it themselves as Portugal's first collective farm.

Hunger and the Communist party pushed them into a kind of self-made agrarian reform here in the Alentejo region where the patterns of life hadn't evolved much since the Middle Ages.

Women who swear they used to hate field work now sing on the job.

"With what we were paid in the old days, we could hardly live," said farm chief Manuel Joaquin Zurrinho, 42.

Now, he figures, he and the other 179 people working the Red Star Collective Farm will each net the equivalent of about $80 a week when the cork, pig meat, olives and wheat are sold.

The way the collective is organized, everyone from Zurrinho down to the women who do an irrigation ditch cleaning assignment is paid on units of an eight-hour work day. Until the end of the year, when the work days are counted up, members can borrow from a farm fund to make ends meet.

The co-operative has the government's blessing, a loan from the Agrarian Institute, technical help from Romania, East Germany and Russia and 5,231 acres of the region's best farmland.

Zurrinho's 23-year-old son Jose estimated the income from the cork alone will be $400,000 a year. In addition, they are planting rice, tomatoes, potatoes, wheat and vineyards where before there was only dense undergrowth good for hiding rabbits that former President Antonio Tomas came twice a year to hunt.

Unlike most properties in the Alentejo, Red Star is irrigated, considerably raising its value. Jose said the farm is probably worth millions of dollars.

"But Barreira is so rich he won't even miss it. He has 32 other farms almost as good."

Efforts to get Barreira to the telephone in Lisbon produced a secretary who said: "Senhor Barreira has nothing to declare."

The experiment at Red Star has significant implications for future agricultural reform in a country with a long growing season and a shortage of farm output.

The Communist party, strongly implanted in the Alentejo, said big landowners like Barreira are not putting their farms to the best use, and that "land to the people who work it" is a program that will not only reduce unemployment but help make Portugal agriculturally self-sufficient.

The men who occupied the plantation Feb. 17 and got the government to nationalize it a week later say the land was overgrown with weeds and they found the corpses of nine cows and 20 calves which had starved to death.

Part of the work force is clearing underbrush from between the hundreds of thousands of cork trees to sow wheat and forage for the planned herd of 3,500 cattle. "Within three years we will be exporting beef," Zurrinho forecast.

Need Integration

CALGARY (CP)—Concluding that a better integration of the various agencies dealing with young offenders is needed after intensive study, the Calgary police bureau is setting up a youth bureau. It will replace the juvenile delinquency squad.

Austria Tries to Give Vienna Vital Role Again

VIENNA (Reuter) — Disturbed by Vienna's waning international prestige, the Austrian government has embarked on a multi-million-dollar plan to help restore the city to its former role as an international capital.

The project, to build a massive centre housing United Nations agencies on a site overlooking the Danube River, accompanies UN moves to give the Austrian capital a greater role in its operations.

The new site will house the two UN organizations already based in Vienna—the UN Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA).

The General Assembly decided last December that the world body should look into the possibility of transferring other departments to Vienna from New York.

The project due to be finished in the autumn of 1978, certainly will have room for other departments. Its four office towers are designed to hold 4,700 people, UNIDO and IAEA expect to move in with little more than 2,000 although the estimates depend on development in the next two years.

The assembly also agreed to make Vienna the third city on the UN calendar for regular conferences, after New York and Geneva.

For this, and in the hope of attracting other major international gatherings, a vast conference centre to house about 3,000 delegates is to be built.

New a city with an elderly population and a habit of living in the past, Vienna continues playing host to UN agencies and grand conferences as means of rejuvenation.

The city is in danger of becoming isolated after centuries as a pivot on the European continent, a continent meeting ground of powers from East and West and, until 1918, the ruling seat of the empire.

It is, of course, still the administrative centre and economic capital of Austria. But tourism, particularly from the United States, has been hit badly and the city has no solid industrial base.

The government and city officials have been trying to persuade UN bodies and international organizations to set up home here since the Second World War. The IAEA came in 1957 and UNIDO 10 years later, when Vienna overcame sharp competition from other cities.

Building began on the new centre a year ago. Now, on the flat left bank of the Danube, vast concrete pillars lot into the sky, surrounded by spindly, whining cranes.

The humble of concrete, mud and steel eventually will turn into four tall towers with concave, Y-shaped ground plans. They will be grouped around a central circular reception area and another building with smaller towers containing services for UN employees, including shops, restaurants and libraries.

The UN city, as it has been dubbed unofficially, will have parking space for 2,500 cars, 5,000 telephone extensions, more than 50 elevators, an underground rail link with the centre of Vienna and a direct highway to Schwechat International Airport.

The Austrians were so keen to attract the world body to the city that they are building the centre at their own cost and leasing it to the UN at a nominal six cents a year.

Slightly less per cent of the 738 million cost will be borne by the federal Austrian government, the rest by the Vienna city administration.

The government is convinced this huge expense will pay future dividends. Critics claim it is the opposition People's Party in Parliament about the cost of the plan, Finance Minister Hans Androsch of the ruling Socialists listed the benefits the project would bring.

The money that flows into the city will make the project worthwhile, the finance minister said. The 1971 IAEA and international organizations in Vienna, including UNIDO, IAEA and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), brought about $24.15 million into the city.

Androsch added that the presence of UN facilities is also of great importance for the security of neutral Austria.

Chinese Find New Planets

NANKING China (Reuter) — Chinese astronomers say they have discovered two minor planets between Mars and Pluto.

They told a British news delegation visiting the Nanking Observatory that the tiny planets, spotted last January, are rarely visible because of their position in the solar system.

Instead of following the Western tradition of naming such planets after their discoverer, the Chinese astronomers have christened them Purple Mountain One and Two.

The observatory, founded in 1934, is set on top of Purple Mountain.

Liquid Gas, Frozen Oil Proposed for Pipeline

EDMONTON (CP) — Research on a pipeline which would carry both liquefied natural gas and frozen crude oil from the Mackenzie Delta has been stalled by the federal government's reluctance to support technological innovation, says E.R. Jensen, head of engineering for the Alberta Research Council.

"Maybe they consider it a cracker idea," he said in an interview. "But we're taking it seriously. And we don't think Ottawa has given us a fair hearing."

Researchers at the council can back the combined pipeline concept with some observations and certain scientific assumptions but they need more data on the feasibility of crude oil, before they can claim to have a "viable technology."

There are people in Canada who are competent to do such a data bank but a request for $171,000 from federal coffers to finance the research was turned down, said Mr. Jensen.

"It's very difficult to get new technology introduced. You can get the engineers on your side but not the banks. Why should they take a risk when they can put their money into just about anything and get a 10-per-cent return?"

Under the council's plan, crude oil would be poured into semi-spherical indentations on two vertically-oriented, parallel conveyor belts. The belts would mesh closely together, forming a series of cylindrical models that would be moved downward into a tank of liquefied gas (LGN) at —162C.

The spheres of oil would freeze and become almost invisible. In the gas, drops out of the belts and pass through a special pump into an LNG pipeline with a diameter slightly larger than that of the spheres.

The 1,320-mile pipeline would end near the northeastern Alberta oil sands development, where the components would be recombined and transferred to existing conventional pipeline systems.

The refrigeration effect created when the liquefied gas is returned to gaseous form could be used as a coolant in thermal power plants and to condense ice fogs in the oil sands, said Mr. Jensen.

The combination gas-oil concept would take advantage of Mackenzie Delta oil reserves, estimated to last 14 to 18 years, and would allow a 48-inch pipeline to be built without relying on carrying Alaskan gas to markets in the United States.

The Americans may decide on an all-U.S. route for their gas and "without Prudhoe Bay gas a 48-inch pipeline for Mackenzie Delta gas (proposed by Canadian Arctic Gas Ltd.) is not justified," said Mr. Jensen.

A smaller, all-Canadian pipeline is being pressured by Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. (AGTL) to deliver natural gas from the Mackenzie Delta to Canadian markets. But both the Canadian Arctic and AGTL proposals ignore Mackenzie Delta oil reserves, which are too small to warrant a separate line.

The cold pipeline concept which "eliminates any dangers of melting the permafrost and then eliminates a major ecological concern," was sent to Canadian Arctic and AGTL but met with negative response, Mr. Jensen said.

Costs for a combined line are competitive with conventional pipeline costs but "not spectacularly so—not one-third or 50 per cent—because you have to liquefy the gas and need special steel."

"Insulation is another bugbear; what will you insulate it with?"

"Between the lab and the field there are a lot of headaches, a lot of questions. There's a colossal exercise ahead."

But the pipeline relates to federal interests more than to provincial concerns and it should be Ottawa's responsibility to see that research is continued, said Mr. Jensen.

TV Newcomers Produce Series

TORONTO (CP) — When television viewers catch a new CBC series called Peep Show next fall, they will see the product of personal British-born and enterprise rarely found in the multi-by-second network corporation.

They will see at least 11 hours of Peep Show, all of them comedies, all written and produced by Canadians new to the field of television. The two shows, Peep Show, "is a said executive producer Georgie Independent. "Not yet even be any resemblance among them, but there is certainly a polyglot about the stories they tell.

"Most of them are comedies—some black comedy, some parodies, some slapstick—but there is one heavy drama, one drama-documentary, and the like.

Peep Show is one of the results of the emphasis being given by CBC-TV to develop new acting, writing and directing talent under John Hirsch, head of the drama department. Last winter's shows on the Sunday night Performance series were a sampling of the new talents coming in the corporation.

Bloomfield was producer-director of the popular CBC series festival in the late 1960s and, after working primarily in live theatre and film as a director, he has returned to the corporation to develop some of Hirsch's ideas.

They are to bring onto TV screens a lot of the talent that has been working in Canadian films and theatre without much chance to work in television, he said. Hirsch also wants more TV drama to reflect Canadian interests and situations.

Bloomfield started almost a year ago by inviting stage and film directors across the country to work experimentally and learn television techniques in CBC studios here.

From more than a score he has selected eight—and will produce three more—to direct half-hour shows specially written and tailored for the Peep Show series. Two, directed by Stephen Katz of Vancouver Playhouse and Paul Thompson of Theatre Passe Muraille, have been taped and the others will be shot during the summer and fall.

Working with Thompson, in Bloomfield's words, "has been a novel experience both for CBC executives and the corporation's technicians. For Thompson is a rebel in the theatre world, almost never working with a prepared script or much in the way of detailed plans.

Thompson improvises, and that isn't normally done at the CBC. He had an idea for a play about a young man caught in the fantasy world of television, in love with Mary Tyler Moore.

After two weeks of improvising, rehearsing and letting his imagination roam, Thompson put his seven actors before the cameras for two days and Bloomfield said the story jelled.

Bridging stage and movie directors into television has the advantage of widening the CBC's use of writing and acting talent as well, Bloomfield said in an interview. Most of the directors brought their own writers and actors. In fact, the series will use 25 writers who have not previously worked for television.

Stage directors, in particular, are used to working with an audience seated "out front," and on a broad stage. To work in television, they must adapt to the narrower forms of a small screen and for an audience watching in their homes.

Bloomfield said that with Hirsch in charge of TV drama, directors have been given more opportunity to use personal initiative and enterprise. More decisions are made by individuals, rather that by corporate committees.

"We now can make the decisions, and we know that if we don't deliver, we might be out—not just transferred sideways into some other job," Bloomfield said.

Leslie Nielsen Versatile Actor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In Lance Tanner, Leslie Nielsen is a hard-nosed conservative who teaches his son how to handle guns, with tragic results.

Earlier this season he appeared on Hawaii Five-O as a dictatorial patriarch and on The Streets of San Francisco as an alcoholic cop.

Nielsen also has finished a four-part Kung Fu as a mean-minded attorney for the Barbary Coast of San Francisco.

He is television's favorite villain and he finds the work profitable and—sometimes—enjoyable.

Nielsen, 50, is a big, handsome, congenial Canadian who seems an improbable candidate for a hard-working heavy.

The work provides him an income of "well over $100,000 a year." And that doesn't include his TV commercials (Ford, Philadelphia Electric, Bank of Montreal, plus narrations for National Geographic specials).

The actor pursued to discuss his craft before taking off for the Philippines to star opposite Nancy Kwan in a feature film, The Guardians—as a hero for a change.

"I get onto this kick of playing heavies eight years ago and after I did one of the first World Premiere movies, Shadow over Elveron," he said. "The character was a tough, unpleasing bastard and he was fun to do.

"I told my agent: 'From now on I want to play heroes. Not sissy heroes, but guys who are mean and love it.' I've been doing it ever since. I'm limited to one guest appearance per show each season but there are enough of them to keep me busy.

"For instance, I usually do all of the Quinn Martin shows (Streets of San Francisco, Barnaby Jones, Manhunter, etc.)."

Nielsen was born in Regina, son of an RCMP officer. After a stint in the RCAF, he attended film at UCLA, then broke into acting during the episodes of TV drama in the early 1950s.

He served a stretch at MGM as a leading man (Forbidden Planet, The Opposite Sex and his best his own TV series—The New Breed and Bracken's World as well as the mini-series Swamp Fox for Disney and The Bold Ones.

He served 16 weeks on Peyton Place during its TV run.

"The only things to star in a series is mostly," he said. "Under the right circumstances, I'd do it again. But I can make enough money playing heavies—and the heavy in a TV series is the best part.

"Is it satisfying as an actor? Occasionally. Most of the time you break your neck trying to find some dimension in the character you are given.

"All you can hope for is a sympathetic director who will take the time to help develop the character into something."

During his Peyton Place year, Nielsen appeared in a total of 41 TV dramas. Doesn't he worry about overexposure?

"I used to, but not any more. When I was offered the Ford commercials, I asked some production bosses if doing them would hurt my career. Not at all, they said.

"Today exposure is the name of the game. You can't be overexposed, as long as you play a variety of roles."

Nielsen wryly cited one major drawback: "The trouble with playing heavies is that you don't get any love scenes. So at the end of a picture I find myself having a drink with the stunt man while the star is in the dressing room with the leading lady."

Showbiz Short

CARDIFF, Wales (AP) — A pop concert by Scotland's Bay City Rollers was abandoned Saturday night after a near-riot in which police said more than 70 young girls were injured trying to storm the stage.

It was the second wild disturbance in two days involving the Scottish group, the biggest pop rage in Britain since the Beatles. On Sunday they also had to cancel another performance.

The Rollers gave up at Cardiff's Capitol Theatre after a half-hour as screaming teen-age girls fought security guards in repeated attempts to reach their idols. Police said none of the girls was hurt seriously.

BRUSSELS (AP) — Jacques Stelman, musician, composer and journalist acknowledged as one of Europe's top music critics, died of a heart attack at his home Tuesday. He was 61.

Today's hand is of little interest to rubber bridge players since South's four-spade contract is ironclad. In fact five is laydown after the diamond lead while any other opening makes six a cinch.

South was hit with the diamond lead, but with help from expert opponents managed to make six anyway.

He took the first diamond, cashed the king of trumps, led the deuce of hearts and called for dummy's king after West followed with the five.

East ducked quickly. He assumed that West would have evolved with an even number of hearts and therefore East led three. In that can the duck couldn't hurt and might bother South later on in case one of West's honors was doubled. South's duck won the trick. After that it was easy to lead a trump to dummy's ten, play the queen of hearts, ruff East's ace, go back to dummy and lead the king of trumps, discard the losing diamond on the ace of hearts and make six for a top score.

Then South called for dummy's four of hearts. This time East entered into communication with his partner. Could West have failed to echo with four hearts to the jack. In that case, it behooved East to duck.

Finally East made the wrong discard.

QUEEN'S-FATCH ENTERPRISE ASINO

Lower Domestic Price For Crude Oil Backed

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal government policy still favors a lower domestic price for crude oil compared with international markets, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Tuesday.

He was commenting in an interview on a published report that the federal government seems little interested in a lower domestic price and that the Alberta government favors it.

The government believes prices should increase to bring on additional supplies of oil, but that "does not mean we will be going to the international price," the minister said.

He repeated it is his objective "the crude oil price negotiations with the provinces to hold an increase in less than $2.50 a barrel on the current price of $6.50.

The international price currently is between $13 and $13 a barrel. Premiers Peter Lougheed, leader of one of the world's major producing countries, said during the weekend he expects further world price increases this fall.

Mr. Macdonald said only one domestic operation—the Syncrude Canada Ltd. oil sands development—has been given permission to charge world prices for its oil after it goes into production in 1978.

Other prices were needed for Saskatchewan—owned by a consortium of four private companies, Ottawa and the provinces of Manitoba and Alberta—because of high development costs.

Treasury Gets Leave To Prosecute Strikers

OTTAWA (CP) — Treasury Board has received permission from the public service staff relations board to prosecute members of the Public Service Alliance's General Labor and Trades group in Ontario for illegal strike action last year.

The 176 workers are included in an application by treasury board for prosecutions dealing with walkouts in December, 1974.

Majority of the workers are employed in the Toronto area with the transport ministry and the defence department.

Under federal law, treasury board heard first seek leave to prosecute from the staff relations board before proceeding with court action.

On April 11, 1975, the federal government for the first time ever—began laying charges against employees who have allegedly engaged in illegal strikes when notice was served on 37 air traffic control assistants in Moncton, N.B.

To Your Good Health

Many Failures With New Livers

By G. C. THORSTEON, MD

Dear Dr. Thorstenson: I know they have done several heart and kidney transplants, but I wonder if they have been tried a liver transplant—C. B. F.

The bulletin of the American College of Surgeons in a recent issue carried a rather complete rundown on all organ transplants performed worldwide. The figures are gathered periodically by the Organ Transplant Registry.

As of January of this year the registry had recorded a total of 189 liver transplants. Only a fraction of the patients have survived, however—24 for more than a year, 12 for two years, and six for three years. One recipient survived five years.

Kidney transplants have been by far the most numerous and the most successful. There have been 19,907 kidney transplants involving 17,836 patients. Those alive today each functioning kidney graft number approximately 8,000. The longest surviving recipient who received a kidney from an identical twin—has lived 18 years after surgery.

There have been 36 pancreas transplants made, and of these only one is alive with a functioning graft. He has lived 2.7 years after surgery.

Much progress is being made in this challenging field of medicine, but much more remains to be made. The biggest problem remains that of the failure of the tissues of one body to accept the tissue of another. In liver transplants, the problem of complications in the biliary duct following surgery remains as a particular drawback.

Dear Dr. Thorstenson: I have been bothered with chill blains for the last few winters. Can you give me information as to how to get some relief before next winter rolls around?—Mrs. C. M.

The term is "chilblain," an itching and, often, pain resulting from exposure to the cold. Extremities are most often affected. It differs from frostbite, which there is actual damage to the tissue by exposure (usually prolonged) to extreme cold.

Poor circulation is usually the most contributing factor in chilblain. For relief, you should warm the areas gradually and avoid using very cold or hot compresses. Hasbwarmer and extra pair of thin cotton socks under your regular socks can be helpful.

CBC Backs Program Dealing with Cancer

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC said Tuesday it stands "completely behind" a television program on cancer which has been criticized by Dr. Beite Stephenson, president of the Canadian Medical Association.

Dr. Stephenson objected to what she called the "favorable treatment" given to a Fifth Estate night program to a drug called laetrile which is used to cancer treatment in Canada and the United States.

Cec Smith, a CBC information officer, said "the program provides useful information about the treatment of cancer and we continue to stand completely behind both the quality of the research and the quality of journalism that went into the program."

The hour-long documentary was first broadcast in January and the Canadian Cancer Society objected to it, but the CBC decided to rebroadcast the program Sunday.

Mr. Smith said producer Larry Gosnell worked more than a year on the program and added that the program dealt with the controversial drug took only 11 minutes of the show.

Dr. Stephenson said the program incorrectly left people with the impression that laetrile was a drug that kills cancer, and added there should be a parliamentary or independent review of the CBC's policy on medical programs.

Can't Interfere

TORONTO (CP) — John Clement, acting solicitor-general, said Tuesday the government has no right to interfere in the management of regional police forces and commission of they stay within budget limits. He denied a request in the legislature by Brian Peckford (NDP-Gros Morne) for a review of the Doubleyr regional police commission to cover expenses of commissioners who were at a police chiefs' conference in Denver, Colo.

PM's Home Costs Top Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau's two government-owned residences have cost the taxpayer $1,252,128 since he became prime minister in 1968, figures presented to a Commons committee showed Tuesday.

The amount, which includes about $1 million for the official residence at 24 Sussex Drive and $250,000 for the summer residence at Harrington Lake north of Ottawa, is about three times the amount spent under former prime ministers Lester Pearson and John Diefenbaker.

The figures were presented to the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee by T. H. Stewart, director of administration in the privy council office.

They showed that the average annual cost of the two residences so far is the Trudeau administration was $178,874, compared with an average annual cost of $67,800 during the Pearson and Diefenbaker years.

The amounts include both operating costs for a nine-member staff, upkeep of the grounds (over 10, and capital costs for repairs and improvements. Not included is the estimated $200,000 cost of the swimming pool under construction at 24 Sussex, being financed by anonymous donors.

In Ottawa, the health department said it supports Dr. Stephenson in her criticism of the commercialization of the drug.

Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Tuesday in a news release that his department supports the position taken on the drug by the CMA and the National Cancer Institute of Canada.

Both bodies consider the drug worthless or even harmful if used to treat cancer patients.

Simma Holt Raps Time, Digest Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A second Liberal MP broke ranks Tuesday to criticize the Time-Reader's Digest bill just hours after another Liberal stated that the issue has split government members.

Simma Holt (Vancouver Kingsway) joined Ralph Stewart (Cochrane) in public criticism of the plan to strip the two magazines of special tax status.

But response to all MPs and senators a letter calling the bill "symbolic of a concerted effort to alienate an old and strong ally and Canada's closest friend, the United States."

It followed an earlier Commons speech by John Roberts (Toronto St. Paul's) who criticized Mr. Stewart for saying last week that the bill was introduced over the objection of many Liberal MPs.

Mr. Stewart said at one point the government might back down on the bill if enough Liberals openly criticized it.

Mr. Roberts said Mr. Stewart's comments were "simply not true." By far the majority of Liberals were "in agreement to proceed."

He also expressed concern that Mr. Stewart's comments might mislead officials of the two publications. Both have said they will be forced to lay off their Canadian editions if the 10-year-old tax privilege is removed.

Advertisers using the two publications are allowed under the special privilege to deduct advertising costs for tax purposes.

"They would be making a mistake if they think they can wait for withdrawal of this legislation," Mr. Roberts said of the two magazines.

Mrs. Holt said in her letter her bill is discriminatory and unjust.

"As citizens, we all have the right to choose the magazine we want to buy. I appreciate the act that Reader's Digest provides Canadians not only with a good balance of national material but with universal and international subjects.

"I also prefer Time over Newsweek, U.S. News and World Report, etc., for the same reason."

Time's Canadian edition covers less than 10 per cent Canadian content, Reader's Digest is about 25 per cent Canadian material.

Tainted Meat Seller Told to Keep Quiet

MONTREAL (CP)—A meat merchant, who testified i peddling more than 700,0 pounds of tainted meat destine for human consumption, said Tuesday he was warned not t mention "big names" to police.

Andre Picard, 35, told th Quebec police commission's in quiry into organized crime th warning came from Gilbert Masse, a former meat director of Reggio Foods, a meat pro cessing firm operated by Vi cenzo Cotroni and two partners.

Cotroni was been described at the inquiry as a leading under-

Testifying under the protec- ; si ; ; the Canada Evidence ; ; Mr. Picard said he sup- ied between 1,000 and 3,00 ounds of meat to Mr. Masse ery week for the last "seven ; eight years." The meat came on farm animals which had ied of natural causes, but was opposed to be shipped to firms or pet foods.

He said he received between 30 and 40 cents a pound for th meat. Most pet food manufac- turers would have paid only seven or eight cents.

He admitted he knew th meat was being resold for human consumption. "At those prices, it wasn't going to dogs."

Judge Jean Dutil, inquiry chairman, also heard charges that tainted meat was stored in refrigerators owned by the Quebec government and served at "immigrants' centre run by the provincial immigration department.

Chief prosecutor Rejean Paul said Les Produits Alimentaires G.M., owned by Gilbert Masse and located beside the centre, bought animals which had died of natural causes from A. Pi- rard Ltd., a rendering plant, for sale to the centre.

He said centre officials con- sidered often about the quality ; meat but did not know it ; ; ;

Churches Ask Parks Be Dry

TORONTO (CP) — The Inter-Church Committee said Wednesday that family camping in Ontario will be ruined by the proposed changes in liquor laws governing the definition of a residence.

The committee, which represents Anglican, Baptist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, Salvation Army and United churches, made its views known in a letter to Sidney Handleman, Ontario minister of consumer and commercial relations.

In reaction to disturbances at Sauble Beach and Earl Rowe Provincial Park during the Victoria Day holiday weekend, the committee said it wants the law better defined.

The letter states that the section in the bill defines "residence" in addition to its usual meaning as "where the place occupied and used as a dwelling is a tent, that it includes the land immediately adjacent".

"Few people are anxious to have to endure this invasion of privacy," the committee said. It recommends that the section be revised to omit any reference to a tent as a place of residence.

U.S. Stands By Friends: Kissinger

ANKARA (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger told the opening session of the Central Treaty Organization (CENTO) conference today that "only by standing by our friends can the West fulfill its responsibilities to world peace."

Kissinger, who is joining the other CENTO ministers following visits in Austria and West Germany.

"As we strive for peace we shall never give up our basic principles or abandon our friends," he told the other four ministers.

"We will," the secretary pledged, "continue our effort for further progress in restoring our normal defence relations with Turkey."

He did not mention the vote this week by the U.S. Senate to restore that aid.

Kissinger also told reporters that there will be a "substantial reduction" in the U.S. presence in Laos in view of the harassment of American by leftist students.

But Kissinger said the reduction is not considered a complete withdrawal "at this point." There are about 1,900 Americans in Laos.

Kissinger noted that Washington has been reducing U.S. personnel in Laos to conform to political realities in the country.

Ad Agency Head Buddy Of Allmand

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says the president of a Montreal advertising agency which handles an RCMP account admits to being a friend and a former campaign worker for Solicitor-General Warren Allmand.

The newspaper says Denton Ogilvie, president of Denton Ogilvie Advertising Ltd., was awarded the RCMP contract in January, 1974.

Mr. Allmand is the federal minister in charge of the national police force.

The newspaper quotes Mr. Ogilvie as denying a suggestion by Dr. Morton Shulman, NDP member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto High Park, that the company was too inexperienced for the RCMP contract.

Two Bodies Recovered

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

WELLAND TAY — The bodies of two Toronto fishermen missing since last Tuesday have been recovered in the Welland Bay area.

Frank Milfud, 56 and his son, Fred, 21, were reported missing last week when they failed to return from a fishing trip. Their 10-foot aluminum boat came ashore last Friday and a wide search of the area was begun by police rescue workers.

A spokesman for the Pictou Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police said the men's bodies were discovered yesterday afternoon by local residents.

Mr. Milfud's body was found at 4:30 p.m. Wednesday and his son's body was recovered a short time later. Mr. Milfud was described as a non-swimmer and his son as a limited swimmer.

No inquest will be held, police say.

Americans Released

VIENTIANE (AP) — The United States embassy in this Laos capital said today Americans held detained in Savannakhet for nine days by student demonstrators have been flown to Thailand aboard U.S. air force planes.

Twelve Americans, most of them employees of the U.S. Agency for International Development, and six other foreigners had been held under loose house arrest in Savannakhet.

The Communist dominated Laotian government said today has decided to ask Washington to pull the agency out of Laos and hand over all aid material in the country.

The U.S. announced earlier today it has agreed to close its aid missions in provincial capitals as a first step toward abolishing the whole U.S. aid mission in the country.

Winkler Says Future Growth To Be Spread

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

MADOC — The prosperity attracted by major urban centres will be more broadly distributed around Ontario in future, Eric Winkler, chairman of the provincial cabinet's Board of Management, indicated last Wednesday night.

He said the government would halt the growth of what he called "the great moonlitic pressure" in the centres "unless servicing them has become impossible".

"The resources now going to the great urban centres also have to be spread around," said Mr. Winkler.

The cabinet minister, who also is Conservative House leader in the legislature, was keynote speaker at the party rally that acclaimed Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, as candidate in Hastings-Peterborough in the next provincial election.

While restructuring of local municipalities should not be confused with regionalisation, there won't be any more regional government unless the people want it, he said.

It is a regional government became necessary in some areas because of the growth of the Toronto region.

"We don't want that monolith to become a greater thing in Ontario than it is. As a matter of fact, we will take steps in the very near future to see it doesn't grow any more," he said.

"Some of that prosperity will be spread around this province," said Mr. Winkler.

Transfer of provincial funds to ease local taxes is one way of redistributing the wealth of the province, he said.

Such funding has been mounting each successive year since the administration of Premier William Davis took office, Mr. Winkler said.

Mr. Winkler also said that leadership was a major factor in provincial politics.

In the past four years the Toronto press particularly has been playing the role of opposition because official opposition parties have been incapable, he declared.

The opposition parties today are just as "incompetent, incapable and inept."

Quebec Walkout Described As Success and Flop

MONTREAL (CP) — A one-day walkout by thousands of workers across the province ended at midnight Wednesday night amid conflicting claims as to its success or failure.

Louis Laberge, president of the 300,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) which called the work stoppage in support of striking workers at Pratt and Whitney of Canada Ltd. (formerly United Aircraft) in south-shore Longueuil, said it was "a fantastic success."

He said 120,000 workers across the province took part in the protest, adding: "If the government doesn't take this as a very, very serious warning, then they're nuts."

But police reports estimated the walkout across the province at 14,000 men, and in Quebec City, Premier Robert Bourassa called the walkout "a flop."

Support for the strike by members in the construction industry was less than expected by union officials, particularly in light of a nine-day wildcat walkout by construction workers to protest legislation to place four union locals under trusteeship. That strike ended last week.

Mr. Laberge laughed off Mr. Bourassa's comment, saying: "It was pretty big for a flop."

Asked if he was disappointed about the construction sector support at a press conference, Mr. Laberge said the workers, faced with the trusteeships, "are in a bad enough position without having to be asked to walk off the job."

He said walkouts were prevented in some places by police who arrested or detained a number of workers attempted to get others to join the protest.

He cited in particular the General Motors plant in nearby Ste. Therese where he said several union militants attempting to get others to join the protest were detained by police.

In Dorion, 15 miles west of Montreal, police arrested man than 30 persons visiting small businesses in the area trying to convince workers to leave their jobs.

Accurate figures on the numbers who walked out across the province were not available but support was strongest at the post office, in the automotive industry, the breweries, bakeries and among municipal blue collar workers.

Work on the Olympic Village site progressed under near-normal conditions. The main stadium site and the velodrome remained closed.

Both Olympic sites were closed May 8 by wildcat walkouts following the release of the Cliche commission report on violence in the construction industry. The report recommended the trusteeships be established.

BEIRUT (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas and the private army of Lebanon's right wing Phalangist party fought isolated street clashes today as a nation-wide strike crippled commerce for the second straight day.

Machine-gun and mortar fire was reported in several areas of Beirut, centre of the new outbreak between the Moslem Palestinians and the Christian Phalangists that began Tuesday.

Police said four persons were wounded in one outbreak of shooting when a shopkeeper refused to heed the strike, called by the Palestinians and leftist political parties.

Police say 17 persons have been killed and more than 80 wounded.

The guerrillas accused the Phalangists of bomb attacks on refugee camps in Beirut suburbs and threatened "violent armed action if the Phalangists continue their excesses."

The guerrilla leadership said the Phalangists were "trying to engender a rift against the Palestinians in Lebanon in order to liquidate them."

Peterborough Yachtsman Was Detained by Chinese

HONG KONG (AP) — A Miami yachtsman says the Chinese detained his boat and eight persons, including a Peterborough, Ont., man, for four days last week after he strayed into Chinese waters.

The Chinese also repaired his engine.

Hal Newell said his 54-foot ketch, the Lady Esther II, was starting a cruise from Taiwan to the Bahamas when it was seized off the Chinese Lima Islands about 30 miles south of Hong Kong May 15.

He said he was approaching Hong Kong but there was not enough light to get to the harbor.

"In addition the engine developed trouble and I decided to anchor the boat in a small cove which I thought was part of Hong Kong," Newell said.

He said several Chinese officials came aboard soon afterward and informed him the cove was in Chinese territory.

"The officials apparently were very much annoyed that we came from Taiwan. But aside from this I would say they were very amiable."

He said the Chinese provided engineers who did "an efficient job" of fixing the engine.

Newell said he was escorted to Hong Kong May 19 after he signed a statement that he "invaded Chinese territory accidentally."

On board were his wife Esther; Bill Heagy of Newark, Del., and his 12-year-old grandson, Michael Dedek of Dayton, Ohio; Ann Cox, a U.S. resident of Tokyo; Chris Young of Chicago; Barbara Present of Milwaukee, Wis., and Ted Goddard of Peterborough, Ont.

Newell said the ketch will remain in Hong Kong for several months for further repairs and to avoid the typhoon season.

Ontario Postal Workers Told To Book Off Sick on Friday

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Inside postal workers in Ontario have been asked to book off sick Friday to spur government action on contract talks, an official of the London local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) said Wednesday.

James Sandall, president of the London local, said here and there are indications that workers in some western provinces will participate in the walkout.

He said CUPW headquarters in Ottawa has asked his local to participate in the one-day protest in an effort to nudge the federal treasury board towards a contract settlement.

"I think it's already out that Ontario and the western provinces would be in support of any action Friday," he said.

Mr. Sandall said workers in the eastern provinces would likely take their turn at a study session today.

Meanwhile in Ottawa, CUPW spokesman in Ottawa said Wednesday that the union is considering a number of options to speed up contract talks with the federal treasury department.

D. R. Clarke, Newfoundland district director of postal services, said all postal stations were closed and there would be no mail sorting in the province today. The work stoppage began at midnight.

Newfies 'Sick' Today

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Inside postal workers throughout Newfoundland looked off sick today in an apparent attempt to speed up contract talks with the federal treasury department.

The talks, including a one-day strike, rotating strikes in selected Ontario centres and a work-to-rule campaign.

The CUPW, which represents about 20,000 workers, presented its initial demands March 21, including an hourly increase to $7.75 from $4.50 in a one-year contract, the right to negotiate technological change and the use of casual labor, and a reduction in the work week to 30 hours from 40.

The government last wage offer was an increase of $1.15 an hour over 32 months.

The masks, proven to prevent facial scarring, can come off in 6-12 months, but the children will require various treatments for the next 16 years. Carol Woodard, their mother, says it's a miracle they're alive.

Fabricon Move Inevitable

TRENTON — Trenton made "every effort possible" to locate a factory planned by Fabricon Manufacturing Ltd. in town, Mayor Bob Patrick said Tuesday.

In a prepared statement, the mayor stews to assure the public that Trenton did all it could to accommodate the wire and cable manufacturer in Trenton or "at least in the Trenton area."

He said later his statement was geared to answer public criticism that the town did not do enough to keep Fabricon's new plant in Trenton.

The company currently operates a 120,000-square-foot plant on Greenwell Drive. The factory employs about 140 people. Several weeks ago company president Hans Schaedinger announced the company's new plant, will locate in the northeast industrial park in Belleville.

In Belleville, the company plans to buy 30 acres and employ about 300 when it swings into production next spring.

Mayor Patrick said Tuesday that he was sure council members shared feelings of disappointment in the loss of the industry.

He said the company needed 35-40 acres that the town was unable to supply in the northeast industrial park because necessary rail service was unavailable. A second alternate site, on land near FBI Foods Ltd. proved unsuitable.

Thirdly, the town was able successfully to deal with Murray township to provide the needed tract of land. However, soil tests by the company proved the site unsuitable.

The agreement with Murray was the last possible move Trenton could have taken, he said. The town also tried to find land in Sidney township, but failed.

Mayor Patrick said the town was prepared to service the proposed Fabricon site with roads, water and sewer lines at no cost. In return, "recovery could only be from the future expected taxation that this industry would provide."

In an unusual move, the mayor offered Trenton residents the opportunity to see a report prepared by town clerk Ashley Sharp outlining Fabricon-Trenton negotiations.

Council Defers Decision On Development Report

PICTON — Prince Edward County council Tuesday voted against approval and implementation of a report on developmental possibilities for the county until it can be studied in depth.

The decision followed comments by Picton reeve Larry Richardson, who said he was reluctant to accept the report submitted by economic development director William Dugan at such short notice.

"I feel it is somewhat vague and lacks specific information. It does not clearly outline the future role of the economic development director," observes reeve Richardson.

He added he is not convinced council and its economic development committee has had enough time to decide on its new direction.

The reeve said he is concerned by the type of industries locating here in the industrial park. They locate but operate for only a short time before folding or fail to go into production.

He said the report offers generalities but a detailed assessment of the value of the new industries to the county is lacking.

The reeve suggested it is meaningless for the persons employed by the industries that fold to swiftly after location here.

"I'm very concerned about this stuff," he emphasizes.

Chairman of the economic development committee and reeve of Wellington Robert Boyce agreed more time may be needed to study the report but added there has been "a little exaggeration" concerning fly-by-night industries here.

He said the landlord at Loch Sloy industrial park says only one building now is vacant.

Hullmaster Boats is happier more staff and doing well while Mazco Home Systems also is expanding.

"We have four industries there with full-time employment and all of them doing well," commented reeve Boyce.

He said it was impossible for Proctor-Levyt to locate in Prince Edward until "a certain gentleman" (Picton's late mayor, H. J. McFarland) made it possible by supplying a site in Picton.

Similarly, he provided a location for the Bethlehem Steel ore docks here.

Councillors voted in favor of a motion by Sidney township reeve George Foster to delete the last sentence in a motion from the economic development committee's report, seeking adoption of the brief on county development potential. "It's foolish to delete it unless councillors study the report and prepare questions on it," he stressed.

Note Taker

University of Guelph landscape architecture student Steve Skidd sits on picnic tables in Centennial Park making notes for a master plan of Trenton parks he expects to complete in Aug-ust. The plan he hopes will form a basis for development of town parks he now calls only semi-developed.

Parks for People Planner's Aim

By AL ZARAS
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A mountain. A forest. A river.

Trenton has each in the form of Mt. Pelion, Hanna Park and the Trent River.

All are attractive ingredients in what Steve Skidd calls the tremendous potential Trenton has for creating a good network of parks and related recreational activities in the town.

"But for all intents and purposes, they haven't been developed.

"There's a place for someone over 20 to go and just sit in a green space."

Trenton parks are in a state of semi-development, he says. There is little vegetation cover, a few broken-down play structures for children, no benches, no garbage containers.

He's in the middle of creating a town-wide plan for developing the potential, ending the neglect, he has seen. His impression comes quickly. Articulate, informal, he talked Wednesday with his legs draped over the red leather armchairs in the boardroom at Trenton Community Gardens.

He talked himself into his job and is concerned with his credibility, emphasizing his separation from park studies done previously. Not arrogant, but proud at 24, to carry credentials of some six years of university studies in biology and architecture, the last two at the University of Guelph for a master of landscape architecture degree.

His concern with Trenton parks is practical, he says. A consultant he is, but one that plans to continue his association with Trenton longer than the five years he has already spent in the area.

Trenton is well equipped with parkland — 13 acres per 1,000 residents. That's higher than the 10 acres per 1,000 population recommended by the Town Planning Institute of Canada, one of the "bible" publishers of Canadian planners.

The town has 19 parks (190 acres) and of those, four are regional parks (Mt. Pelion, Centennial, Rain, and Hanna.) The remainder are neighborhood parks. These, says Skidd, are where almost immediate work can begin, once the master plan for parks is complete in mid or late August.

On a still preliminary basis, he has been able to assess the physical attributes of each park. He has sat in most [illegible] watched and [illegible] to ask how they use a park, what they want to [illegible]

He has discovered [illegible] average age of Trenton to be 35-years, not significant in itself, but an indication that in some neighborhoods the residents are not children anymore, don't need the classic park structure — swings.

Put simply, if there are a lot of children in one area, put in creative playground equipment. For the more elderly, put benches in a neighborhood park (town average 3 acres).

Next year, at the neighborhood park level, work on development can begin. With the master plan in hand, the provincial or federal governments can be approached for Opportunity for Youth, Experience or Local Initiative Program (LIP) grants.

Such a method of developing the small parks is both realistic and realizable, says Skidd. Grants, in one form or another, can be brought to Trenton.

That kind of approach says Parks and Recreation director Deno Gattas is realistic, rather than Utopian, a problem he saw with some studies of parks over the past years. Skidd's approach garnered in some five hours of initial talks between the two men, is different. Rather than come from outside Trenton, pick the brains of town staff, and recognize their comments on paper. Skidd is working at producing a "workable" document.

Director Gattas says once complete, the plan will be presented to the parks board for discussion. From there, the future is still unknown.

As far as regional parks in Trenton are concerned, Skidd is less definite about development. He acknowledges the need for far more money in their development, more the town cannot possibly raise on its own.

Pessimistically, at least at this stage of his study, he says problems definitely exist in the number of different government boards, and ministries able to influence development of Trenton green space.

He offers a initial solution: All efforts in development should be made through a town-controlled body. Coordination of present and potential programs is necessary. "Co-ordination is important in terms of dollars and cents. Because Trent Canal's tourist potential hasn't been tapped."

Regional parks fit into that tourist picture, as does the creation of a green space within Trenton along the Trent River, now unused by boaters. The river's banks present industry and parking lots to the boater: "Nothing to attract you to Trenton."

He concludes that the image Trenton now projects to those who drive it is one of an industrial town. "It's definitely uninviting."

Ministry Proposes Archery Hunting

PICTON — An archery hunting season for deer in Prince Edward has been proposed by the ministry of natural resources for 1975 and says James Taylor, MPP Prince Edward — Lennox, but no action will be taken unless public response supports the move.

Mr. Taylor, speaking from his office in Queen's Park, Wednesday observed the suggested archery season would open Nov. 3 to Nov. 30.

It would cover an area reaching almost Port Hope on the west and to Wolfe Island on the east. The southern portions of Lennox, Addington, Hastings and Frontenac counties would be touched and all of Northumberland and Prince Edward counties.

Mr. Taylor said the deer population for the area in question is about 1,100 with an annual loss of 250 deer through mortality. The allowable harvest would be 280 deer. Therefore, there would be only 130 deer for the kill.

The MPP said it has been estimated an archery season would take only 30 deer.

Special archery seasons have been held in other parts of Ontario since 1969 and in 1973 a season was started in southwestern Ontario.

Few land owner complaints or other complications have sprung from the archery seasons.

Mr. Taylor predicted there would be disadvantages such as trespassing but the archery season would not permit dogs on the ice.

He added that a new type of broad-head arrow represents no danger of superficially wounding an animal and leaving it to die a slow death.

Mr. Taylor views work out easily in minor wounds and if the deer is not killed it is likely the arrow will drop.

Mr. Taylor stressed the ministry of natural resources does not plan to force an archery season on Prince Edward County unless residents indicate they want one.

A survey taken several years ago showed most county residents would not object to the archery season for Prince Edward hunters only.

"If there is no approval there is nothing to be gained," Mr. Taylor said.

He said the archery season would be a recreational activity and would provide farmers with the necessary authority to hunt deer on their own property.

Its Own Fire Aid Is Murray's Plan

WOOLER — Murray township took the first step Wednesday toward setting up its own fire department while it waits for two estimates from Trenton for partial coverage of the township by town fire trucks.

Township clerk Ken Rose said today "we're going ahead with the concept of setting up our own department whether Trenton is in or out."

The township has been considering creation of its own fire hall and purchase of a fire truck since Trenton increased the 1975 fire protection cost to $30,000 up 150 per cent from $12,000.

Previously, Trenton fire trucks covered the entire township.

Now both Ameliasburg and Frankford have entered into contracts with Murray for fire protection covering half of the sectors Murray south of the Murray Canal has about 1,200 man hours. Frankford covers the northern half of Murray for a flat 98,000 annually.

Murray township council has talked at the $30,000 cost Trenton has asked for fire protection and is now negotiating with Brighton village for protection of half of the southern part of the township.

Mr. Rose said Tuesday he made on offer of purchase on land along Bilbrey 2 ft plots to use to build a fire hall. He said the township could get a pumper in a couple of months. A resolution by council is all that is up at purchase.

Murray now awaits cost estimate from Trenton for partial protection of the township. Two alternative coverage areas have been set out— the entire southern portion or only the half closest to Trenton.

Mr. Rose said if the township gets prices from Trenton by the end of May, the town could still be protecting part of Murray.

The township is faced with a June 2nd deadline imposed by Trenton for payment of $15,000 for fire protection for half of 1975. Should the bill not be paid, Trenton has said it will cut off coverage to the township.

Mr. Rose said Ameliasburg, Frankford and Brighton have indicated their willingness to temporarily fill any gaps in fire protection left by a withdrawal of service by Trenton.

If Voluntary Restraint Fails Trudeau May Show Some of the Spirit of 1970

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Those who scoff when they read in the paper that Prime Minister Trudeau being ready with some "tough economic measures" if there isn't a pretty quick consensus for voluntary restraint, should be a little more conscious of 1970.

That, for those who remember, was the time of terror in Quebec, when the bombings of the Quebec separatist extremists kidnapped British diplomat James Cross, Liberal Senator Michel Vinet, labour minister Pierre Laporte, and all the while threatened the provincial government in paralysis of fear.

It turned out to be only a very small group of fanatical separatists, but at the time nobody, including the federal government which spoke of "an apprehended insurrection," could be sure of what power might be behind the FLQ terror.

The Government was in the government lobby of the Commons one night when word came about bombs and heard the Prime Minister talk of the possibility of taking such powerful counter-measures as calling out the troops.

You wouldn't dare, one of the personnel, with a television network representative, told me, you just could not do those men around carrying guns.

"Watch me," snapped the Prime Minister.

And then, almost immediately, to the incredulity of federal and overwhelming majority of Canadians, he had the British troops sent for, invoked the War Measures Act.

The troops arrived, were on the streets of Montreal, on Parliament Hill, and around the homes of officers of members of the Quebec and federal cabinets in Quebec City and Ottawa.

The FLQ was crushed, the crisis done, the Prime Minister, the strong man, emerging as a national hero.

Now five years later, there is another crisis. This time economic.

Something has to be done, says the Prime Minister. And quickly. It can, preferably, be voluntary, but if necessary, it can be forced from the top.

The War Measures Act won't do.

But a constitutional statute providing for "peace, order and good government" would.

It could be employed to supercede provincial jurisdiction in selected fields of the economy and impose controls "in the public interest."

And the Prime Minister, again in the 1970 role of the strong man, has been showing early signs of preparing for action.

They come through, clear and sharp, at the recent Commonwealth Conference in Jamaica, report those who watched and heard the Prime Minister, lunching both members of his personal entourage and the accompanying press party.

They saw him as tough, impatient with radical rhetoric, increasingly cautious and even conservative — that is, conservative in the small "c" nonpartisan meaning.

The left-wingers among the Commonwealth leaders, including Tanzania's Julius Nyerere and India's Indira Ghandi, were glaring in the Commonwealth Gang Triumph over the Americans.

It was Canada's Trudeau who cooled them out with a warning of the possible Communist repriisals — since Soviet troops were in Cambodia — and a suggestion that the Americans might become a little distant with Third World nations.

Then he cautioned the Commonwealth's Third World members that their posturing about holding the industrial western nations to economic blackmail by monopoly cartels like the Arab's already weakening oil monopoly was ridiculous.

In the first place they didn't, couldn't control the supplies or prices of oil — and in the second place, the industrial west, investing in Third World treaties enough to negate attempted economic blackmail.

And as to the Third World's clamor for what it calls a massive transfer of global wealth from the developed to the underdeveloped nations, the Prime Minister told the Commonwealth radicals that it wasn't much use if it went only to feed increasing numbers of people whose populations are beyond control.

Further, the Prime Minister refused any part of a suggested black radical war of liberation against wholly democratically governed Rhodesia.

And finally he noted a hint that the black Caribbean Commonwealth leaders wanted to live of the United States over its Cuban policy.

Nobody was pushing Pierre Trudeau around. He knew what he wanted: peace, order and good government.

Prime Minister in Town

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau is in town and a welcome visitor at that. It is something of the election before last, as we recall — since Mr. Trudeau was in Belleville. This visit is for tonight's meeting at Centennial under the auspices of the Hastings federal Liberal Association.

If the Prime Minister needs no reminding that universal approval of Government policy is missing, that is merely the fate, to one degree or another, of any leader. In any event, he is due our respect as an able leader and as one of the most outstanding Canadians of our time.

Some questions the Prime Minister will inevitably face, however, have to do with inflation for one thing. Why for instance, the hefty increase in the remuneration of parliamentarians at a time when the watchword should be restraint, with the value of the dollar already too far in decline, the going tougher for pensioners, and the savings of Canadians of decreasing long-term value.

Then there are Canada's dibursements overseas through the controversial International Development Agency amounting in this "momentous year" (as External Affairs minister MacEachen termed it in the Commons in April) to $933 million. "Very close," as Mr. MacEachen said further, with perhaps some feeling of guilt, to the billion-dollar figure that some are attempting to erect as a scarecrow for taxpayers."

Why does Mr. MacEachen make such a comment if he does not have some qualms about this spending, both as to the amount and to the direction of such beneficence? There can be no quarrel with efforts to relieve hunger, but there should be questions, in any projection of public spending of such magnitude outside the country, as to whether it does in every case relief that end. Mr. MacEachen has described as "Canada's political interests in the world."

Other questions might be directed toward the need for general revival in Canada, revitalization of the work ethic (hasn't Mr. Trudeau been quoted as saying in effect that work is not everyone's bag — that It's a matter of individual privilege?); toward a return also to a productive working society, rather than one walowing in welfarism and labor disputes and resulting strikes.

One other major theme perhaps, one many attempt to deny exists, ignoring the signs all around, or sweeping them under the political rug. And that is: subversion, what a young cartoonist out in Winnipeg describes as a society growing "too Communistic . . . too socialist" and which he seeks to combat with a brand new "Captain Canuck" character, and, hopefully one that will grip the imagination of young Canadians.

Does Mr. Trudeau sense any left-wing drift, or anticipate anything in Canada in the nature of Lenin's 1905 dictum that "major questions in the life of nations are settled only by force?" Does he, as a parent, as well as a politician, envisage any upheaval in the long-term that would give him pause?

The Prime Minister might seek to dismiss such prognostications as hypothetical. Nevertheless, as one who is acquainted with the history of the past half-century, as well as with developments in more recent times, he cannot treat them lightly.

To-night's political ball session at Centennial may provide us with some answers, or at least some clues as to Mr. Trudeau's thinking.

Viewpoint

Brockville Recorder and Times

The public exchanges between Ontario Housing Minister Don Irvine and Federal Housing minister Barney Danson are a sad reflection of the manner in which politics can become more important than the issue, which in this case is the decline in housing starts in Canada this year. Both sides claim their governments are they are committed to providing housing for everyone in need. How serious either man or his government is in living up to the commitment is open to question. In the light of results achieved to date this year. Neither government is doing as much as should be done but it seems the federal government could be doing more than it is to encourage more activity in the housing industry.

Government Advertising Rapped by Opposition

TORONTO — One of the few current forces (the house is generally dead) is over the amount of advertising being placed by the government at the moment.

Opposition members say frankly that the flood of ads that is appearing in the electronic and print media just now is an election build-up for the government.

Liberal Leader Bob Nixon has said in the house that there is a $10 million supplementary appearing at present underway, that is $10 million in addition to the regular government program.

The government, of course, denies this.

But really one has to whiff a rat.

Advertising currently underway, as noted by Mr. Nixon, include the following programs:

First home buyers (admitted to be costing over $400,000).

Student jobs.

Ontario's tax credit.

Consumer advice.

Seatbelts.

Liquor moderation.

Wintario.

Since Mr. Nixon first enumerated his list another program has been added: government endorsement of Family Unity Week.

Government advertising is always a touchy subject, and one in which it is almost impossible to draw the line between genuine need and political purpose.

Thus in the case of Wintario you can hardly hold a lottery without advertising it.

But does the form of the ad promote the government?

With other cases the whole program may be questioned.

Thus do we really need the consumer advice program? This campaign which, it seems, has been running almost incessantly on radio, warns the public to get guarantees etc. in writing.

The impression it leaves with me, at least, is that if needed at all in this form it is being overdone.

A soap company would hardly give its products more plug.

In fact this could be a danger that the PC's may be running into.

They may end up in over-sell. They were getting close to this in the 1971 campaign. And the public will stand only so much.

If told something too often it tends to disbelieve everything when told with its own money.

The last invasion of England took place 720 years ago in 1216 when Prince Louis of France (later Louis VIII) landed at the invitation of English barons to overthrow King John. John died a few months later, being succeeded by the infant Henry III. The Pope excommunicated the rebel armies so Louis retired, after being paid a small sum for expenses, and turned his attention to the massacre of Albigensian heretics.

1835—French author Victor Hugo died.

1916—The French at Verdun recaptured Fort Douaumont.

1945—British meat and soap rations cut.

1949—James V. Forrestal, former U. S. defence secretary, committed suicide.

1953—President Duvalier of Haiti was inaugurated for a second term to which he declared himself elected by a 1961 vote.

Students will maintain and operate the machine and it will also be used in landscaping and other jobs around the new high school.

By a vote of eight to five, Council turned down a motion introduced by Alderman Butler and Thompson that the city purchase 100 parking meters. Merchants and the Chamber of Commerce were also opposed, but Mr. Butler stated that he was still of the opinion that the meters would help to alleviate city traffic problems.

Reaction in Belleville to the suggested imposition of provincial income tax by the Provincial Government to replace the municipal income tax is mixed. It will mean next year if the municipal tax is replaced by a provincial tax that something like $19,300, which has annually been paid in by Belleville taxpayers to the city treasury, will go to Queen's Park. Last year approximately $18,300 was collected from income of Belleville residents. In 1933 total income tax collection was $19,300. The reimbursement would take the form of assumption by the province of additional shares of relief, highways and other costs. Should the municipal tax be removed for the provincial levy, it will meet approximately an additional mill on the city tax levy.

He said the young band will make a public appearance sometime during the coming season.

Hazards On-the-Job Pose Threat To Health

The Public Health Authorities say that over 100,000 workers die in Canada and the United States from on-the-job exposure to hazards. Each year, inhaling asbestos fibres is believed to cause the death of 2,000 workers.

New research workers have found that even families of asbestos workers are endangered by tiny quantities of asbestos dust that workers carry home on hair and clothing.

The researchers contacted 210 family members of workers who had been employed in an asbestos plant between 1941 and 1956. Forty per cent of the immediate family members had lung abnormalities associated with asbestosis, the crippling lung disease caused by inhaling asbestos fibres.

If the disease can result from such low-level exposure the implications for the public may be serious indeed. Asbestos is found in hundreds of common household products. Fibres have been found in the urban air, in water, and in some foods.

Since scarring of the lung tissue doesn't show up for at least ten years or more after exposure, there is no way of detecting how widespread the disease may be. Often it takes as long as twenty or thirty years to "incubate".

Asbestos is not the only industrial hazard. At least 15,000 substances are suspected as dangerous, and federal standards only restrict 450 of them. Each year, industry introduces another 1,000 new substances, which may have effects on humans.

Non-return Containers

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

There was a timely advertisement by Pepsi-Cola Ltd. on the radio recently urging people to write the Ontario PC Government and demand that legislation be introduced to prohibit non-returnable containers.

It is unlikely that Premier Davis would ever read a letter from me, but perhaps his local party officials will note this letter and be moved to the banning of throw-away containers than a forgotten election promise.

Surely it is one of much-needed legislation, and will benefit us all.

Intrigue, the Jockeying for Power, and Those Ontario Leadership Races

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Of The Intelligencer.

Sitting in the galleries you can seldom know the intrigue that can be and is go on behind the scenes in politics.

Such intrigue is never or less constant as politicians and parties jockey for power.

But it is never more pronounced than in leadership contests.

And in the past 30 years though it has been stamped on all the parties it has been most prevalent in the Conservatives.

Since 1943 the PC's have had three leadership races. And all three have been bitter.

Perhaps it has been because they were the party in power and winning the leadership automatically meant also being premier.

In any event all three have been marked by behind-the-scenes wheeling and dealing, private pressures, promises, slanders and general skullduggery.

For today, I will talk about the 1948 convention.

In June of that year there had been an election which the Conservative government had won but in which Premier George Drew had personally been defeated.

The weeks immediately following the convention were hectic.

Drew, of course, was still premier. But nobody quite knew what his plans were.

It was proposed that a seat should be found for him. But then again it was pretty obvious that the national party leadership was going to open up and he would be a logical candidate.

If so his most qualified successor in Ontario would be Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell, who had already been the second strongest man in the Drew administration.

In mid-July, however, Blackwell pulled a surprise.

Despite the fact that he had won an easy election victory in his Toronto-Eglinton riding and was known to love politics, he announced that he intended to leave office and return to private practice by the end of the year.

That meant a seat was, or would be, opened up for Drew. But that was not Blackwell's purpose.

Actually what he was doing was to put pressure on Drew to decide himself. To say whether he intended to continue in Ontario or go after the national leadership. If he wanted to know how a successor would be put in office.

There was a strong rumor that if Drew did not run he intended to name his successor so as to keep control of the Ontario party.

Eventually the national convention was called for early fall and Drew immediately became the main contender — in the meantime, of course, also carrying on as premier of Ontario.

Blackwell also was continuing as Attorney-General, and although few people knew it he was also trying to have a small with Drew to convince him that Drew was cracking him.

In fact he had managed to evade a meeting for three months. Finally the delegates arrived in Ottawa for the convention.

I had been quite close to Blackwell and had known what was going on. And on the voting day of the convention, a Saturday, he told me that Drew had finally promised to meet with him either after the voting that day or on the day after, the Sunday.

On Monday morning the Globe and Mail carried a front-page picture of Drew, who had won the convention easily, shaking hands with Agriculture Minister Dr. Tom Kennedy and naming him as his successor pending a convention.

On the Tuesday morning Blackwell called me down to his office. He was furious.

Drew had not kept his promise to see him. The first he had heard of the Kennedy business was when he read his Globe. And he was ready to go.

He had on his desk copies of a long press release. A very frank release.

It described the rumors there had been about his appointment as successor, his feeling that the party should be free of control by Toronto, generally broke things open and raised hell and ended by announcing his candidacy for the leadership.

He asked me what I thought about leading the release and my advice was to go ahead.

And he did.

A burly man who had lost a leg in the first war, who had been a baseball pitcher of big league standing and who had coached the Toronto Varsity football team he was popular with his colleagues and within the party.

But with the issuance of that release the Conservatives quickly became a pro-Blackwell and anti-Blackwell party.

Rumors began circulating that he would be a dictator (and this, of course, was shortly after Hitler), and others that he would be unreliable and was a socialist.

For a long time the old guard in the party controlled it, though the fighting kept up right to the end. Drew was named on the convention floor (without balloting delegates) and Frost only won by a handful of votes.

Since that convention I have often wondered what would have happened if Blackwell hadn't issued his press release.

He quite probably might have won, for if, gave his opposition a lot of ammunition.

I have already written how overnight Frost unexpectedly became a strong man and put Drew packing.

But the support of Doucett became key. He held off and held off for days (behind Blackwell) but finally the Frost forces promised to make Doucett the deputy premier and he threw his weight behind the treasurer.

This really was the end, though the fighting kept up right to the end, even on the convention floor (without balloting delegates) and Frost only won by a handful of votes.

Since that convention I have often wondered what would have happened if Blackwell hadn't issued his press release.

He quite probably might have won, for if, gave his opposition a lot of ammunition.

I have already written how overnight Frost unexpectedly became a strong man and put Drew packing.

Candystripers are one way of making tomorrow's Centennial Manor a little more fun for residents. Here Sherry Lynn Bisson provides a light for a manor resident's pipe.

Candystripers Popular With Manor Residents

BANCROFT — There's a friendly, loving invasion going on at the Hastings Centennial Manor in Bancroft.

The invaders are a group of young teenage girls from the area, who, under the auspices of the Manor Auxiliary, have set up a new candystripers service for the residents.

The period behind the new group, is Mrs. Ann Hillman of Bancroft, who wanted her church group of youngsters to have a real service experience".

"According to Mrs. Hillman, "The residents of the manor should be treated with a great deal of respect, because they are the ones who made life the way we enjoy it now."

Mrs. Hillman is very emphatic that her girls are not at the manor to help out with the nursing care but are involved in visiting and helping the residents who very much appreciate the attention.

"Some of the residents get so lonely," said Mrs. Hillman as she watched two of her candystripers give some personal attention to the residents, "sometimes the families forget or they don't have anyone to visit."

Although the candystripers started out as a church group, they are now affiliated with the manor auxiliary and open to all girls who would like to help.

The candystripers go into the manor each day from 4 p.m. to 5:30.

Any one girls between the ages of 13 and 16 who are interested in the program at a summer volunteer job are asked to contact Mrs. Hillman who along with several other nurses in the area will be holding a series of training sessions for the girls.

Bancroft Taxpayers Will Pay More

BANCROFT — Taxpayers in Bancroft are going to be receiving some good news and some bad news on their tax bills which will be going out in June.

Following a budget meeting held by the local council, the mill rate for the village was set at 130.3 for 1975 over the residential 144.3 mills of last year.

The jump in the commercial rate is just slightly larger than that for the residential taxpayers with the increase going from 161.6 to 188.5.

According to village treasurer Russell Hawley, the increase in the mill rate was not due to municipal or county spending but to the increased levy from the Boards of Education.

The general municipal rate for the village dropped from 67.3 mills in 1974 to 66.9 mills this year.

However the levy from the Hastings County board of Education has jumped from 37.5 mills in 1974 to 43.6 for residential and from 43.7 to 47.3 for commercial assessment.

Separate school supporters also will be looking at an increased levy from the Hastings-Prince Edward Roman Catholic Separate School Board.

The separate school residential rate rose from 27.9 mills last year to 41.9 and the commercial rate was up from 41.1 to 4.5.

The secondary school levy from the Hastings County board went from 36.5 mills to 32.3 for residential and from 33.9 to 35.5 for commercial.

The Hastings County levy dropped from 9.1 in 1974 to 8.4 this year.

The amount of money to be raised by the village for the Hastings County board of Education will be $89,865 for elementary, $57,151 for secondary and $6,448 for the separate school operation.

The total amount to be raised for village operation will be $133,280 and for the county the 1975 levy requires the raising for $14,434.

Camping: Excuse For Gluttony?

One of the great myths of our time is how good camping is for you.

I'm not talking about the camping, mind you, that goes with the bus. Bus camping. There's a question that this kind of activity is superb for both mind and body.

What I mean is the camping that most of us do — up in the woods or down at the lake for the weekend.

And this kind of camping, I venture to say from personal experience, is not particularly healthy.

Oh, we may go for a stroll now and then, perhaps paddle or water-ski or play ball, but we really get very little more exercise than we do during the week.

What's worse, we cart along with us all the gadgets and frippery that, I suppose, campers seem just like home for the 36 hours they're there.

Why so little to do we can devote ourselves wholeheartedly to the preparation and consumption of meals. In fact, the real reason we go, I'm sure, is because it seems to me, is the pursuit not of nature, but of gluttony and sloth!

There seems to be a peculiar camping mentality that dictates that we should take with us far more food and drink than we would need ordinarily at home. We seem to think "go" just 'cause."

This may be a result of our Canadian pioneering heritage, which has taught us the fear of starvation in the bush. Or it may be simply the growing habit of stuffing ourselves, catering to the desire for an excess of pleasure.

I'll admit it. This past holiday weekend I ate and drank more than I should have, and came home in the mean that I felt far more sluggish than I felt. But I felt downright virtuous in comparison to some of the families around us in the campground.

Kids walking down hiking after hiking — adults sniffing back cases of beer and gulping down pounds of pretzels, bloody boozers dozing in the sun on their chaise lounges, moaning mothers whose only real exercise was the march between coolers and barbeques — and all of us gloriously happy, believing that what we were doing was terribly healthy.

Because even when we know the truth — about late nights spent drinking round the campfire, and the hangover, tiring drive back home at the holiday's end — we continue to think that people who go camping on a weekend are somehow a cut above the sluggards, who never leave their backyards.

I'm not so sure. But there is at least one thing to be said for going away camping.

The people who catch us make pigs of ourselves are strangers, not neighbors. And that's some comfort, isn't it?

Language Service Solves Problems

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — University students wanted — translation of a Russian journal. A Spanish-speaking man is going to court and can't speak English. A lawyer has official documents which must be translated.

Creative Language Communications, a new business set up in Kingston, offers a solution to their problems. It provides a range of translation, typing and proof-reading service in 80 languages.

The idea was conceived by Kathy Manley and Thais Dorsaint, two Kingston women experienced in different language fields. Between them, they can communicate in English, Spanish, French, Portuguese, Italian and German.

At Both were convinced there was a need of a communications language service but first they checked the market. They surveyed representatives from Queen's University, the department of manpower and immigration, the courts, the media and business. The response was overwhelmingly positive.

The next job was to find interpreters and translators. "We wanted to offer a top-quality service so the staff question became all-important," said Mrs. Manley. "Applicants were carefully interviewed. The result is that we now have 80 people qualified in specialized areas. For example, we project to do engineering papers and accounts."

Requests come from lawyers, the courts, the university and hospitals. Tutorials are also included in the project. Instruction in Chinese, Ukrainian and other languages is available.

The women are attempting to compile a language resource file to aid persons of different cultures.

"We have had an intimate glimpse of Kingston's municipal, social and ethnic complexities," said Mrs. Manley.

The project has not made any money yet; in fact the directors are still paying for their 24-hour answering service. But both are pleased to use their educational and business backgrounds.

Mrs. Donald, was born in Venezuela and learned English in a graduate program at the University of Ottawa. In Ottawa, she taught Spanish to government officials.

After marrying a Canadian, she went with her husband to Yale University, where she studied for a PhD and she taught Spanish. When they moved to Kingston, she worked for a small Latin-American journal at the university.

Mrs. Manley became fluent in French and German as a result of living in Switzerland which she was 18. She received her masters degree in French and taught it to adults.

When in British Columbia with her husband, a doctor, they started a doctor's replacement service where she acquired business experience. When they moved to Kingston, she took a part-time job in the French department at Queen's.

'Sex Isn't Everything'

Sigmund Freud was wrong; sex isn' everything, says a prominent Spanish psychologist.

Love is.

Alejandro Lafour-cade, a member of the International Association of Applied Psychology, said that without love "at the slightest variation we would perish through lack of connection and balance."

— Brandon Sun.

There now! Didn't I tell you? My father used to say, "Love makes the world go round!" And he wasn't talking sex or excitement, but about agape — that Greek concept — and word — that means something like "love of mankind."

Dear Doris: A number of letters come from teens and young women who are virgins, are scoffed at, and feel that mates of their own age range all want to rob them of that virginity.

I learned this fast, and I was still a virgin when I married at 20.

To maintain high standards, there are several things needed — desire to keep them, encouragement from others, strong God to control every thought (you think and plan before acting), not putting yourself into obvious temptation, respecting yourself and others who look to you for leadership. It is worth it for yourself and for others when they are facing similar situations. I share this, not because I am smug, but because I want others to feel as I did on my wedding day — clean and ready to give first and all to my loving husband. That beautiful white dress had no mean something.

Dark, plastic cuddles encouraging people to do the hard right instead of the easy wrong.

— Another Reader.

Dear Another: You encouragement is tops. All I need is to be a publish Doris sterling ideas of yours. Thank you.

Dear Doris: I am 14 and have been in love for three years with this boy who is 21. He is in a training centre. I am going another boy whom I like, too.

My parents think I am too claim up, I don't like school either. Do you think I am too young? I am mature for my age.

— A Reader.

Dear Reader: Sorry, but I do think you are too young to be in love and to give up school. Your 21-year-old friend is a man. Being a man's world — and he has problems.

Even a mature 14-year-old isn't ready for that — and how do you really know how mature you are?

Look for someone your own age. School is important, even if it isn't your favorite place. Believe me you'll be more than grateful you did, when you start coping with growing living and working.

Confidential to C.E.: Do you have any honest opinion? The woman is craving sex; and she is lonely.

Declaring that one is "madly in love" with someone else's husband, in a group where everyone would hear it (wife included) is just not the behavior of a balanced adult. She is trying to convince herself that she is attractive to the opposite sex. You see, the very existence of the illegitimate child may be suggesting a rejection of her — the mother — by the father of that child.

Sex is troubling her so much that she covies you your husband. She tries to get a vicarious thrill out of knowing more; and when you seem to claim up, she takes out her revenge by making a foolish declaration in public. I agree with your husband that you should have enough faith in him to laugh her off in front of your group.

I am sorry for the woman; she needs the help of a professional counselor. If you could possibly get her to go back to the doctor which helped see her through her pregnancy, with psychiatrist referral, would clear her through her mixed-up thinking — and get her off your back.

Diana Savage, Audiologist

Turning a clinic into something warmly human has been the goal of Sir James Whitney School for the Deaf audiologist Diana Savage.

"We want this clinic — which assesses hearing loss and improvement — to be more than a bunch of files and a bunch of machines," Diana says.

A graduate of Peterborough Teachers' College, she moved from ordinary classroom teaching to teaching the deaf and then into audiology because of a growing awareness that communication was her main interest.

"I really enjoyed teaching but I found I was more interested in the caring aspect. In the classroom I was always paying more attention to the emotional development of the students.

"Deaf children needed what I wanted to give."

At Sir James Whitney, Diana deals with children who have been referred to the clinic by family doctors, boards of education and parents or children with suspected hearing loss are assessed and are referred to medical specialists or speech pathologists or psychologists.

Since the school deals with all of the province but the Toronto-Windsor sector, Diana often travels with her testing equipment to other Ontario centres to test children for hearing-impairment.

The early diagnosis of impairment is a personal and professional interest for the audiologist who says that diagnosing early and diagnosing well can make a lifetime of difference to a child and to his parents who need emotional support.

"I'd like everyone who comes in contact with that child to understand his needs," she said. "And I want his visit here to be an almost enjoyable experience."

AROUND TOWN with LANA ROBINSON

(. . . an advertising feature designed to keep you better informed of what's new around town.)

A Whole New Line

Vader's Car Sales, on College St. just around the corner from their former location on North Front St., take the top of the column this week. Some of the exciting news they gave me when I made my weekly call. Vader's are now in the mobile home business and have a complete line of Cardinal mobile homes, including: mobiles, lesmet, campers for little trucks, construction offices, cottages, trailers and even ready-to-open trucks, believe it or not! Plan Vader's expand, they don't fool around. Vader's & also open every Saturday until 3 p.m., so you weekend shoppers can get out and see this big new line. And while you're there, don't forget to look at the great '75 Datsuns too.

Now, That's Service

It really was a tie between Vader's and Superior TV as to which one would headline the column, because they both had some real news. Superior TV is really taking this 24 hour service claim they have very seriously. Now their service trucks are equipped with two-way radios for any location within a fifty mile radius of Belleville So, for example, before they leave Brighton or Picton, Super TV service men will call in and see if there have been any more calls for repairs since they set out on the job. That's just about as close as you can come to reaching spontaneously to the needs of the customers isn't it? So all of you TV owners — and that's most of us — so call Superior TV at 962-9616 and your call will get some action pretty quickly. Superior can fix any kind of television and handle the warranty work on any makes. Call them.

Watch Those Whoppers!

What a marvelous weekend of weather. But it seemed that the calibre of weather was more than matched by the calibre of mosquitoes. They were big . . . and very hungry! You can understand having to put up with them at the cottage or the campsite — but when they are flying around the kitchen or the bedroom, then the chances are your screens are faulty. Belleview Glass and Mirror, 256 Pinnacle St. can help you do something about that. Just call them at 968-5721 and together you can declare war on the insect population around your house. It seems a little ridiculous to keep on spraying for them, when the fault really lies in the fact that they can get in, in the first place. Do something about it with reliable and long lasting aluminum storm and screen windows and doors from Belleview Glass and Mirror.

Summer Pet Ailments

Summer is a great time for most of us, but just as we get our share of sunburn, our pets also suffer from their seasonal maladies — such as summer eczema, which gives your dog patches of dry skin. The Tropical Garden Pet Shop, 261½ Front St. has skin and coat conditioner to remedy this affliction. And it's also the proliferation season for fleas and ear ewites. A '2 in 1' collar from the Tropical Garden will insure that your cat or dog doesn't have these annoyances either. This collar is good enough for three months of protection. Summer can and should be fun for your pets. It won't be for your pets if you aren't being responsible pet owners. See the Tropical Garden — and then everyone can have a good time — even the pets.

Still Some For Your House

It was a great weekend for putting in gardens and it was a great weekend for garden sales at Sidney Inn, 263 West Moira St. But never Al Whitney tells me there are still lots of petunias, etc. for your garden. And what you really might like — and it's something I noticed as I drove by on Tuesday — is the great selection of planters and bird baths. These can really add to the look of your garden, and indeed to the look of your whole home. Sidney Inn also has the fertilizer and garden tools to make sure that what you buy you plant properly — and that it will all grow. And don't forget these convenient 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. hours. for you late starters. But when you get your garden in is your business, right?

'Denim Days

These are denim days in fashion circles — and at Studio 231, 231 Front St. There are pants, skirts, long and short - vests and young-looking artist tops, all in denim and all in style. The great thing about Studio 231, or at least one of the great things, is that there, you can find fashion for any size, including queen sizes. The ladies and the not-so-petite, will find what they want and what will become their figure types. If you're thinking fashion and fashion versatility, then think STUDIO 231. Then get yourself down there. What good is your great idea if you don't do something about it? And while you're there, take a look at the wig selection in the Wig Boutique at the front. No bench will do you in, when you have a perky and stylish cover-up on which to rely.

If You're Moving To Madoc

This is the time for year that many people in particular professions move around, professions such as teaching or police work. If you should be moving to Madoc, or you know someone who is, you should call Gord Roblin Real Estate, 117 North Front St. at 968-6475. Gord Roblin has two listings for relatively modern homes. One is a brick bungalow with three bedrooms, electric heat, and the other is a ½ storey, three bedroom house which has recently undergone extensive renovations, such as 100 amp service, easy-care vinyl siding and a new kitchen. Both are worth looking into, if you're moving, or would like to move to the charm of Madoc. But you won't be getting anywhere unless you pick up the phone and talk to a Gord Roblin salesman.

Wrought Iron Just For You

At Wrays Home Furnishers, 266 Front St. in Belleville, you can see a selection of wrought iron, which turns any patio into something of elegance and charm. But the great thing is, you can choose what particular metal finish you want on your furniture, whether you want colors or leatherette seat coverings, or whether you wish clear or hammered glass table tops. And you can also choose the size you wish. Every patio is different and so you can have your wrought iron furniture just right for your patio. Wrough iron furniture is very popular indoors also, so if you need a 'something special' in the dining line, then Wrays and wrought iron can be your answers there too. But, on temporary or colonial, continental or homey, Wrays can always see that you dine in and on style.

Making The Evenings Count

We've been spoiled by these lovely weeks of fine weather. The danger is that they give us the allusion of permanence. But we all know they will go only too quickly. If you want to make the most of a spring and summer evening, may I suggest that you have a lovely drive into Prince Edward County, head towards Picton and stop at the lovely dining area at the Inn On The Bay Tavern for dinner. The setting is charm itself, overlooking the Picton harbor. And you can treat yourself or your guests to a browse and some buying in the gift boutique of the dining room. The evening can start or end gracefully in the elegant surroundings of the Inn On The Bay Tavern, call 476-3114 for reservations.

Let The Furnace Do It

There are a few different methods of having your house air-conditioned. And, though it pains me to say it, we can't well say longer. (Whoever thought May would be like this?) Moira-Schuster can do air-conditioning a couple of ways — by an independent installation of a window conditioner, or they can install a complete and more efficient system which is permanent, using the duct work of your furnace. And what Moira-Schuster doesn't know about furnaces isn't worth knowing. Get the experts to do an expert job installing a permanent air-conditioning system at your house. Then, there will be no such thing as getting hot under your collar, even because of the weather. Call Moira Schuster at 962-4504.

Munro Orders Probe of SIU

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro, accusing Ontario of dragging its feet, ordered a federal investigation Wednesday into the internal affairs of the Seafarers' International Union (SIU).

His comments provoked hot reaction from Progressive Conservative MPs, especially Lincoln Alexander (Hamilton West) and Allan Lawrence (Northumberland — Durham), who said Mr. Munro is trying to push the blame on to the Conservative Ontario government.

Mr. Munro said Ontario authorities were "strangely unhelpful in providing clarification" of allegations that members of the union are being intimidated and are the victims of violent tactics.

"The Ontario government, for reasons I can only speculate about, continued to withhold its findings from us," he said of criminal investigations conducted last year.

The inquiry will deal with any violations of the Labor Code, although labor department officials say evidence of criminal acts will be referred to the RCMP and provincial police for action.

Mr. Munro said information obtained in an earlier investigation which dealt with alleged bribes to federal officials from the SIU had contributed to the decision for a further inquiry, to be conducted by federal labor official M. K. Carson, who will be aided by the RCMP.

The allegations that possibly will be investigated include accusations made with respect to union elections, intimidation, hiring hall practices and blacklisting of employees by either the union or employers.

PCs Will Stress Heavy Spending

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservatives are determined to keep up the heat on Finance Minister Trudeau's what they say is his excessive spending, but nobody in the government seems to be sweating.

"We are going to focus our speeches and questions on four areas," Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin said Wednesday night, outlining the Opposition's program for question today when the Commons tackles the expenses of the prime minister's and privy council offices.

These issues are the ability of House committees to call witnesses, the Liberals' "obsession with secrecy," the growing power of Mr. Trudeau's "personal bureaucracy" and the concealment of some estimates.

Conservative members have been pressing for the appearance before the intersessional estimates committee of Michael Pitfield, chief of the privy council and the most powerful public servant in Canada. Mr. Pitfield is a close personal friend of Mr. Trudeau.

Mr. Trudeau has repeatedly refused, saying it is "not traditional."

Mr. Baldwin said Wednesday he hopes Mr. Trudeau, Government House Leader Michael Sharp, Mr. Pitfield and Jack Austin, the prime minister's parliamentary secretary will be available for questions when the Commons sits as a committee of the whole Commons today.

John Reid, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Sharp, said, however, that Mr. Sharp likely will answer the questions. Mr. Trudeau is scheduled to leave Ottawa at 5 p.m. EDT by helicopter for a trip to Belleville, Ont. And from the prime minister's refusal to allow Mr. Pitfield and Mr. Austin to appear before committees in the past, it is felt their appearance today can be ruled out.

Even if Mr. Pitfield or Mr. Austin did appear as witnesses the Opposition would be prevented from challenging them directly. Because of parliamentary rules, which permit them to sit in the Commons when it is in committee, questions must be routed through the minister responsible.

It was divulged Tuesday that the cost of running the prime minister's office is at least larger than 15 years ago—about $2 million this year compared with 1959-61 when former prime minister John Diefenbaker was in power. The PMO staff has increased to 451 from 82 in the same period.

But Joe Clark (Rocky Mountain), one of the more vociferous critics of government spending as a whole, said the opposition wants to talk to Mr. Pitfield about the growth in the PM and privy council spending and about the increased use of consultants to do cabinet studies.

By looking back the government was exercising the kind of "executive privilege" used in the United States during the Watergate scandal, he said.

"It led to serious problems in the U.S. and it could lead to serious problems here."

Mr. Lewis said a basic disagreement had developed "even in my own caucus" over his anti-confrontation strategy.

However, he said that most contract negotiations are a charade because both sides know within 1000 what the final settlement will be.

'Cool It' Is Advice Lewis Gives Teachers

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Teachers should "cool" their salary demands "cool" consequently gain public respect, Stephen Lewis, leader of the Ontario New Democratic Party, said Wednesday.

Mr. Lewis told a secondary school teachers' political action committee: "The time is right to cool it . . . it's not just politically expedient but good for the profession."

He said that in future contract negotiations teachers should present school board trustees with demands that are realistic.

"If teachers are reasonable I think there will be tremendous public respect for them."

Putrid Meat Sold at Expo

MONTREAL (CP) — A meat salvage operator told an inquiry into organized crime Wednesday he stockpiled between 400,000 and 500,000 pounds of putrid meat for Expo 67.

Leo Arcand of St. Hyacinthe, Que., told the Quebec police commission inquiry he collected the meat from sickly or dead cows and sold it for resale to concessionaires at the international exposition.

Mr. Arcand told the inquiry the animals he collected were to be butchered and the meat sold to firms manufacturing pet foods and fertilizers.

The meat was not fit for human consumption, he said.

While pet food plants were buying seven or eight cents a pound for the meat, Mr. Arcand said he was offered 20 cents a pound by a man in 1968.

He said meat destined for rendering plants was sprinkled with charcoal dust as required by law to mark it clearly.

"But during Expo you saw the meat marked with charcoal was used," he said. "They would saw off the blackened parts—about an inch thick on each side—and use the inside parts."

Chemicals were used to change the color of the meat and to take away the odor, Mr. Arcand said.

Citizenship Not Routine

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should ensure that inheriter residence requirements for citizenship do not result in "a factory, assage-making process," Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy Royal) told the Commons Wednesday.

The result should not be that it . . . people just run up, sign the book and away they go," Mr. Fairweather said during debate of a bill to reduce citizenship residency requirements to three years from five.

"To me citizenship is precious. It must never be cheapened."

First we built a mid-size car inside. Then we built a sub-compact around it.

Most cars are built the other way around. Body style first; passenger comfort second. Which is why in the back seat of so many cars, your head slants forward. Or your knees meet your chest. Or you shift positions sitting over the hump every time you hit a bump.

At Honda, we've virtually eliminated these problems. Because we designed our car from the inside out. What we ended up with is a sub-compact car with as much room as some mid-size cars. The experts have described our car best.

"Many makers talk about small on the outside, big on the inside, but Honda has done it." (Road and Track).

How'd we do it? Our car's shape is trapezoidal. A rectangle that's wider at the bottom than the top for all kinds of good reasons. For example, we give you more room where you really need it. More leg room on the floor and more seating room.

Another part of our roominess story is also a performance story. We gave our car front-wheel drive, not just to eliminate the hump inside, but for its excellent road-hugging ability.

Then we mounted the engine sideways to provide even more space. This also places the engine weight directly over the drive wheels for better traction. For added comfort, we equipped the Civic with a McPherson strut suspension, independent on all four wheels, for a stable yet cushioning ride.

The Honda Civic is more car than you'd expect. It's fast and yet it's economical to run. In fact, in the 1975 U.S. Environmental Protection Agency gas mileage test, the Honda Civic recorded a remarkable 49.2 miles per gallon for highway driving and 33.6 miles per gallon for in-city driving. Now, just try and find another car that performed as well.

Jailed Man Believed Innocent

NEW YORK (AP) — A 43-year-old former bus driver sentenced to eight years in prison for a bank robbery may be the victim of an unusual mistaken identity; he has a look-alike who robs banks with threatening notes written in a hand strongly similar to his.

Because of the strong possibility that Robert Evans has been wrongly accused and convicted, the U.S. attorney's office did not oppose his release Wednesday from federal prison, where he has served 19 months in a $25,000 bond.

While Evans was serving his time, two banks were robbed by a man strongly resembling Evans and, whose modus operandi was to pass threatening notes to tellers.

The look-alike still is at large, and has not been identified.

Weekend Eclipse

NEW YORK (AP) — The moon will become a glowing, coppery ball in the sky Saturday night and Sunday morning in a total lunar eclipse which will be visible, if skies are clear, all over Canada and the U.S. It will be the first eclipse of the moon visible here in three years and one astronomer says it will be the best of the 1970s. The total phase begins at 1:02 a.m. EDT and ends at 2:33 a.m. EDT. The middle of the eclipse will occur at 1:48 a.m. EDT, the point of lowest light level.

Boost Own Pay

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Members of the House of Representatives voted themselves an additional $18 million in benefits Wednesday, including bigger staffs, more government-paid trips home, more government-paid telephone calls and bigger subsidies for newsletters to their constituents, announced Tuesday by the administration committee. The new schedule calls for 26 free trips home or a flat cash payment of $2,250—double the travel allowance last year. House members and Senators now receive a salary of $42,500 a year.

Company Sued

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A federal court suit seeking $200 million has been filed against a chemical company in the accidental poisoning of 15,000 cattle, hundreds of thousands of chickens and millions of eggs, Michigan Farm Bureau Services and two of its insurance companies filed the suit Tuesday in U.S. District Court against Michigan Chemical Co. and three of its subsidiaries. The suit claims Michigan Chemical mistakenly mixed a toxic chemical—polybrominated biphenyl (PBB)—instead of the nutrient magnesium oxide into livestock feed which it shipped from October, 1971, to July, 1974.

Protect Parthenon

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The Greek government banned tourists from walking inside the Parthenon to protect the ancient temple from further damage. The Parthenon built in the 5th Century BC, is Greece's most famous tourist attraction and on the average is visited annually by 1½ million persons. It has suffered extensive damage from the heels of visitors as well as from air pollution and noise. Flights over the area are already banned.

Veteran Campaigns

Clarke Rollins MPP Hastings, meets with the people after party rally in Madoc Tuesday night that acclaimed him Conservative candidate in new Hastings-Peterborough riding. It will be his fifth election since 1958.

Clarke Rollins Is Unanimous Choice of Area Conservatives

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

MADOC — Clarke Rollins is still MPP for Hastings.

But today he also is on the provincial election trail — campaigning as candidate for the new sprawling constituency of Hastings-Peterborough.

His latest campaign — the fifth since 1959 — was mobilized Wednesday night when he was acclaimed his party's contestant at a crowded rally here.

The acclamation was no new experience. The burly, 44-year-old Bancroft area politician has been snapped up every convention since his first election.

Adding an extra tinge of triumph to his latest uncontested bid was the geographic background of the new constituency, recently created by redistribution. Hastings-Peterborough is an amalgamation of 19 townships in Peterborough County with the riding of Hastings, boosting the number of constituents to about 50,000.

But the new territory and its political organizations produced no challenger to contest the veteran's nomination.

In fact, he received nominations from what appeared to be almost every new riding.

Local Conservative practice was to submit written nominations. Rollins received them all—a total of 112 — to be acclaimed by a crowd of about 700 at the Kiwanis Centre here.

The election date has yet to be announced.

But, in a later interview, Mr. Rollins said his early nomination was not to be construed as an indication that provincial campaign was in the offing.

Rather was it dictated by the size of the new constituency — one of the largest in Ontario, covering about 1,800 rural square miles from Deseronto at northwest of Peterborough.

Time was required to cover such an area as a "controlling" candidate and to "get organized in a giant riding like this".

Opposition already is in the field. Last month the Liberals nominated David Hobson, 38-year-old Bancroft high school teacher as his opponent.

Social Credit earlier fielded a candidate — 36-year-old Nancy Arnold, a Wasaga Beach housewife and newspaper reporter.

The new riding will have 100 polls — compared to 109 in Hastings, estimated returning officer Lloyd Price.

The amalgamation brings together two areas that have much in common, Mr. Rollins told the convention crowd.

For one thing, the municipalities in both areas are unanimous against regional government, Mr. Rollins, a former warden of Hastings County, has been an outspoken foe of regionalizing county governments.

It was a fact he again reiterated as a key point in his acceptance speech to the 400 delegates and other party members at the convention.

County government, he said, will be able to introduce ample legislation to keep abreast of changes.

In his speech he also criticized recent pay increases for federal MPs.

"I feel we're expected to contribute to the ridings we represent and give leadership in this regard," he said.

In an interview later he said he would not support any provincial government policy that would increase MPPs' salaries.

The riding amalgamation also was symbolized by the presence of the leading local provincial spokesmen for both counties — Warden Wilfred Ellis of Peterborough and Warden William McKwa of Hastings.

Also on the platform were Jack Ellis, MP — Hastings and Bill Scott, MP Victoria-Haliburton.

Home Builders Face Problem with Image

Some communities tend to view the house building industry as a leech, says Bill Kennaly, finance and planning officer with the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

Mr. Kennaly made this comment at a meeting of the Quinte Home Builders Association Wednesday.

He was here at the industry as being filled with the big, bad developer we see ourselves as a major economic force in the community providing many services and job," he said.

Because there is a bad picture of the industry, in many communities house builders have "very poor" rapport with elected officials, — a situation that does not seem to exist in Belleville," he said.

"Belleville is unusual on a national scale in the good relations it enjoys with city hall," said Mr. Kennaly.

He said the major problems faced by the housing industry are the reluctance of elected councils to recognize the economic value of the industry to local economy; not involving the industry in municipal planning decisions and councils not setting out clear housing policy statements.

Mr. Kennaly told home builders that because of land land shortages in the city "restructuring of the Belleville area is inevitable."

He said, "the home builders must make sure the council is evolving with the times, is re-structuring to head off any possible future problems of land shortage."

In general, he said it is unlikely the home building industry this year will accomplish what has already been forecast by both federal and provincial governments.

The federal government project that 230,000 housing units will be constructed this year.

"We'll be lucky if we've even looked at 185,000 by the end of the year," he said.

He attributed this short falling not through the home builder's inadequacies but primarily through the lack of mortgage money that has gripped the housing industry in a slump.

He said in Ontario, the industry will be lucky to get 65,000 homes built — a full 25,000 less than forecast by the provincial government.

Triplets Surprise Couple

CAMPBELLFORD — History was made here Sunday when Patsy and Ronald Rodgers became the proud parents of triplets — the first to be born at Campbellford Memorial Hospital.

The Rodgers, residents of Frankford, already have four children with the oldest being seven. A hospital spokesman said the two boys and one girl, named Matthew, Mark and Rebecca were doing fine as well as the mother.

The spokesman said the triplets came as a surprise to everyone including hospital staff. All babies weighed between four and four-and-a-half pounds.

Quinte Teachers Going to Russia

Two Quinte area educators leave Monday for a three-week course in the Soviet Union.

Gord Smith, vice-principal at Bayside Secondary School, and Brian MacKenzie, a physical education teacher at Belleville Collegiate Institute, are two of 25 teachers across Canada to be accepted into the course.

Mr. MacKenzie will be involved in a course which will provide a comprehensive overview of the system of physical education in the Soviet Union. It will also examine the role of sports in a socialistic country.

The advanced scientific teaching and coaching methods utilized in the Soviet Union will also receive major emphasis. Each participant on the course can pursue a related subject in greater depth.

Mr. Smith will be taking a look at the elementary school education there with an emphasis on reading skills and teaching methods. Both teachers will return to share the information gained on the courses.

Each educator has received a $250 grant from the Hastings Division of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation to help with the expense of the trip.

Sympathy Not Official

The Belleville - Ministerial Association as a body does not sympathize with the United Farm Workers Union regarding the grape boycott, contrary to a report in Tuesday's edition of The Intelligencer.

Rev. Jack Morrison, association president, said Wednesday the organization has not moved for support or non-support but member clergymen may support the boycott as individuals.

He explained the confusion might have resulted from the appearance of Gabriel Cahill, union representative, as guest speaker at an association meeting last Thursday. However, no motions were passed on the boycott issue, he added.

Gardeners To Meet

A Meet the President rally is being held by members of horticultural societies in District 3 at 1 p.m. on Saturday, May 24, at St. Lawrence Oshaya, Kingston. President is Miss Gladys McLatchy of Richmond Hill. All members of societies are invited to attend this rally and welcome distinguished horticultural leaders to the district.

Cooling Off

Current hot spell has Bellevillians seeking cool spots . . . with the waters of the Bay of Quinte an obvious rendezvous. Cherly McDonald was among those in the swim Wednesday . . . although 20-month-old Rebecca Baumhour seemed a little reluctant about it all. Temperatures hit around 29 Celsius . . . about 84 Fahrenheit.

Station St. Fire To Be Investigated

Chief Leo Calhane of the Belleville fire department will today start investigation will begin Monday into the cause of a blaze that destroyed a three-storey building at 88 Station St. early Wednesday.

The fire, which is supposed to have been burning for about an hour-and-a-half to two hours before the alarm was raised at 2:04 a.m., started in a stairway leading to the second floor, which was undergoing renovation.

The first and third floors were extensively damaged while the second floor, which contained a vacant apartment, and the first floor which housed a drycleaning and carpet sales store were damaged primarily by smoke and water.

A minimum damage estimate has been set at $50,000-$75,000 but might rise depending on the amount of damage to the carpets.

Chief Calhane said Paul McKerracher, a representative of the Ontario Fire Marshal's office here, will conduct the investigation. He is out of the city this week on business.

The fire chief pointed out a preliminary report by fire inspectors did not reveal any apparent accidental cause but he added nothing turned up "a suspicious nature either."

He said there was no indication of forcedentry into the locked building and no one was supposed to have been working in the attic on Tuesday.

The building has been boarded up awaiting investigation.

Development Day Cutback Refused

Trenton trustee Bert Garrett has added a new twist to the great debate over teacher professional activity days.

Tuesday night the Trenton lawyer told the Hastings-Prince Edward Separate School Board that professional activity days should be cut back because "teachers are better prepared than ever before and they are more needed in the classroom".

Despite his protests the board approved nine-and-a-half days of professional activity for its elementary teachers, a figure still lower than that approved by the Hastings County Board of Education.

However, objections by Belleville trustee John Granville over the quality of the professional programs offered were raised. The board later asked specifically to have a detailed list of planned activities for these days.

Mr. Granville, a high school teacher himself, said he had no objection to the number of days but said the quality of program is essential in making these days worthwhile. He asked that the board be presented with the programs for approval at the next meeting.

One trustee suggested that the only way for the board to see the value of these days was to attend several sessions and then form a judgement.

Mr. Garrett said he had talked to teachers who had varying opinions on the subject.

He said teachers are needed in the classroom and there was just too many days set aside for professional development. He proposed five-and-a-half days, which would include three days at the school board.

Director of Education Ed Neville supported the number of professional activity days and said he believed the schedule was designed in the best interests of both students and teachers.

Educators now view professional activity days as different to professional development days. Development days refer to courses geared to improving the status of teachers whereas activity days are designed to be information sharing experiences.

Driver Charged

A 22-year-old Toronto man has been charged with careless driving following a one-car accident on Ann St. Wednesday.

A city police spokesman identified the man as John F. Hopstead of 1714 East Dundas St., Toronto.

The spokesman said the GMC truck was travelling west on Victoria Ave. at about 1:15 a.m. made a left turn into Ann St. when the accident occurred.

He said the truck first struck a utility pole on the west side of Ann St. and recovered to the east side where it hit a tree at 345 Ann St.

Damage was estimated at $1,500 to the truck but no estimate was placed on the pole which was snapped off near the base or to the tree where the truck came to rest.

Fire Evidence Not Conclusive

Officials investigating the cause of the early-morning fire that destroyed St. Thomas' Anglican Church on April 4 have been stymied in their efforts to officially declare that arson is involved.

Det. Sam Morgan of the city fire department, who along with Paul McKerracher of the Ontario Fire Marshal's office is investigating the blaze, said today there is disappointment registered over a recent report from the provincial forensic sciences laboratory.

He termed it "an inconclusive report, as far as I'm concerned."

Det. Morgan explained samples of wooden and liquid materials were sent to Toronto to determine if a petroleum product or any foreign matter was apparent.

However, the report says "no petroleum product detected" and does not indicate it has been stymied in their efforts to officially declare that arson is involved.

TAKE 2

So that's why we are a little, shall we say, unpleased with the report," he commented.

Officials have determined a break-in occurred sometime prior to the fire and the unknown intruders stole several pieces of communion silver. They have speculated that evidence indicates arson is involved.

Det. Morgan said none of the articles have been recovered, no one has been arrested and the investigation is continuing.

A Crunch in the Night

Power was blacked out in the Victoria Ave.-Ann St. area early today when this truck went out of control, sliced through a hydro pole and crunched into tree on front lawn. No one was injured, but the driver was charged with careless driving.
